

A PENALTY OF $100

Imposed by Justice on Christian Science Healer.

VIOLATED THE OREGON STATUTES

An Appeal Will Be Taken to the Circuit Court—Progress of the Oregon City Case.

OREGON CITY, Feb. 23.—Abraham W. Hertzka, the Portland Christian Science healer, who treated the late Mrs. Quint at Gastonia, was fined $100 in Justice Schuster's Court this afternoon for violating the Oregon statute regulating the practice of medicine and surgery.

WANT NO BOUNTY CERTIFICATES.

Uncertainty of Payment Drives Hiders From the Market.

LAKEVIEW, Or., Feb. 23.—Notice was received here today by the agents of bounty certificate purchasers, not to buy any more bounty receipt certificates. The threatened attack upon the constitutionality of the law has made them think, and the buyers have refused from buying because they are not sure until this question shall be decided.

Better Railroad Prospect.

The railroad prospects of Klamath Falls has stirred up the Nevada, California & Oregon Railway, and they are now giving encouragement to this part of the country. Their agent is on his way to Alturas, Cal., to talk railroad to those people and assure them that the line will be pushed to that point in the near future. Alturas is only 60 miles from Lakeview, and Klamath Falls is 115. If they come on to Alturas and come no further they will hold the trade of this country against the Klamath Falls road. But the people here believe that they will be compelled to push on through to Lakeview, as the resources of this country will induce some road to come through at an early day.

Heavy Snow Arrives.

A heavy snow storm on, and people are happy for they believe that it is a regular winter storm. It will relieve great anxiety on the desert, for the water supply is getting short. It is also the life of the coming hay crop, but the grain crop is dependent entirely on spring rains.

Columbia County Tax Poll.

ST. HELENS, Or., Feb. 23.—The Sheriff received the tax-roll of Columbia County today, with the Clerk's certificate requiring him to collect the taxes of 1899 as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Amount. Total $45,000.00.

The Republican County Central Committee has been called to meet Friday, March 2, at St. Helens.

Talked on Yellowstone Park.

WOODBURN, Or., Feb. 23.—Hon. D. P. Thompson addressed an appreciative audience in this city tonight on "Yellowstone Park." The lecture was given in the interest of the Yellowstone National Park, and proved a success.

Helping Destitute of India.

FOREST GROVE, Or., Feb. 23.—Professor Joseph Marshall, of Pacific University, is planning to send a fund to India to help the destitute. He has enough to keep a family there one year.

Oregon Notes.

The water was clear in Coos River, last week, and trout were rising to the fly. Charles Shey, of Myrtle Creek, killed a large shear bear last week which had three cubs.

A militia company will be organized in Hinesville, Ga., the near future with a membership of 60.

The Village Improvement Club, of Newberg, is in search of a woman to name as a candidate for School Director.

The first National Bank of Albany on the Oregon coast, the Magnolia Mills, about 11,000 bushels of wheat stored in the Farmers' warehouse.

There is talk in Baker City of erecting a monument to Edward Dickinson White, the city's first Governor of Oregon and Baker City were named.

Miss Laura Jones has sold the Drain Watchman to Benton Mires, of Drain. It is understood that the paper will be published under the name of Mires & Co.

A freight-car was broken into between Hornbrook and Ashland last Sunday, and loaded of a large quantity of boots and shoes, tobacco, whiskey and underwear. It is supposed to have been done by tramps.

The board of directors of the Salem Chamber of Commerce will make a statement before the board of the Chamber, and also the revenue of the Chamber, in order to carry on the important work that has been planned.

Sam T. Phillips, the well-known Dry Goods merchant, who was born in Cayuga Station 47 years ago, has a rival for the honor of being the first white child born in Umatilla County. This is claimed in the Eastern Oregonian by Dick Savage, of Pendleton, in behalf of Mrs. Sally Henrich, formerly Sally Ollinger, born in 1842 where Meacham Station now stands. Her parents were in an emigrant train in which were the well-known pioneer families of the Geers, the Waldos and the late Captain William Martin. Mrs. Henrich now resides in Linn County.

Chinese Question in New York. NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Next Monday night there will be a conference between the Chinese Laundrymen's Association and the Laundrymen's Protective Association, with the idea of getting the Chinamen in agree to advance their present low rates to the scheduled rates of the Protective Association, 10 cents for shirts and 2 cents for collars and cuffs. The members of the Protective Association say that they are being ruined by the low rates, and they are going on, and if they cannot get the Chinamen to come in with them, some of them will have to give up the business.

Theological University. SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 23.—The Theological Society, of the Universal Brotherhood, began today the work of constructing on Point Loma the buildings which are to be erected in connection with the "School for the Revival of the Lost Mysteries of Antiquity," which it will establish there. The first of these structures will be the library and music hall. This will be followed by a gymnasium, museum, auditorium for Mrs. Catherine Tingler and her cabinet and for the collection.

SUCCESS ON BLUE RIVER

MINING DEVELOPMENT NOW FAIRLY IN PROGRESS THERE.

First Stamp Mill Gets Better Results Than Were Expected and Has Kept at Work.

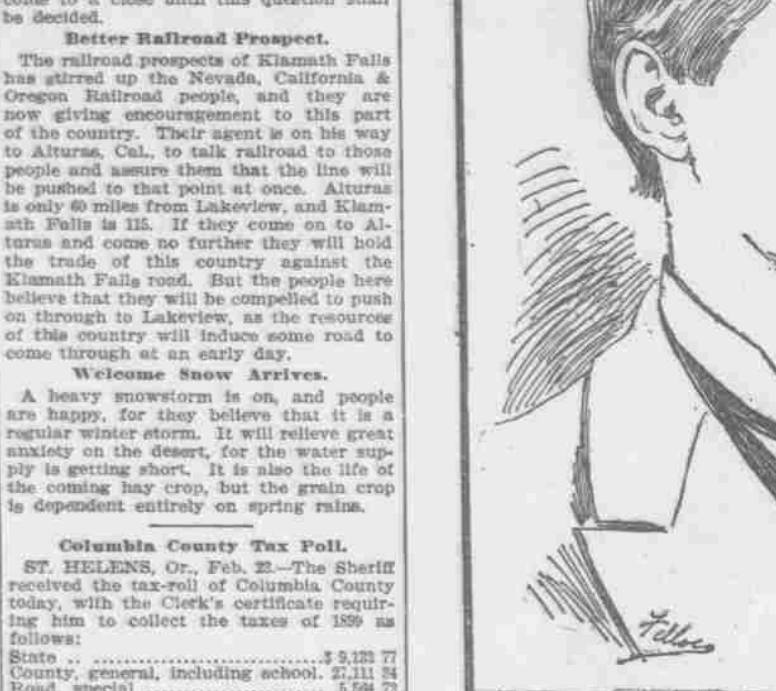

EUGENE, Or., Feb. 23.—Interest in the Blue River mining district is increasing every day, and the indications are that the coming season will show extensive development in several mines, as well as a great amount of prospecting. There is now enough on the hills now to make prospecting impracticable, yet there have been several men there all winter looking for good ledges. Many prospectors are waiting for the snow to disappear, when they will go in for the summer.

The principal cause of the unusual negative was Mr. Schuch. He devoted most of his time to rebuttal, and tore up the opponent's arguments, showing that there was no conspiracy of the Cape Town Dutch, and he referred to the attitude of England toward the Jameson raid. Mr. Stewart closed the debate for the affirmative.

GENERAL THOMAS B. REAMES.

Prominent Oregon Pioneer, Who Died Wednesday.

JACKSONVILLE, Or., Feb. 23.—General Thomas B. Reames, who died at his home in Jacksonville February 21, was born in Grayson County, Kentucky, December 15, 1828.

GENERAL THOMAS B. REAMES.

1858. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

1888. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1852. The family wintered at St. Helena, and moved to Jacksonville in the spring of 1853, where Mr. Reames' father took up a donation claim near Phoenix. Thomas farmed and mined till 1864, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff under W. A. Weston. In 1866 he succeeded Mr. Owen as Sheriff. At the conclusion of his term of office he engaged extensively in the mercantile business at Phoenix, Jacksonville and Klamath Falls. He was appointed Postal Inspector during President Cleveland's first term, and in 1875 was the nominee of the Democratic party for Secretary of State. In 1887 he formed a partnership with C. C. Beckman in the banking business. Mr. Reames was a 2nd degree Mason, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon, and a member of the A. O. U. W. Mr. Reames was a man of energy, discriminating judgment and superior business qualifications. He leaves a wife and four sons—Alfred Eran, of the law firm of Colver & Reames; William and Ernest Lester, partners in the mercantile business at Cold Hill, and George Wilkinson, a small boy at home—and six daughters, Mrs. John F. White, of Medford, and Misses Genevieve, Lucinda, Laura, Nellie and Florence, all at home.

FORESTS OR FARM LAND

DISTINCTIONS THAT DELAY ACTION AS TO OLYMPIC RESERVE.

How Functions of Different Departments at Washington Overlap—Prest River Forest Reserve.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—In the Olympic Reserve matter the Geological Survey has again blocked progress by a report setting forth that certain of the lands proposed for exclusion are not valuable for agricultural purposes. The reason for this statement is that the alleged cost of clearing timbered lands is $100 per acre. If it is a fact that it costs $100 per acre to reclaim these lands, then, in the opinion of the Geological Survey, they are not suitable for farming purposes for the simple reason that such lands, when cleared, are not worth $100 per acre.

These familiar with clearing timbered lands admit that it would cost $100 and $200, but that to clear an acre provided the work was done in the most expensive manner known to pioneers. With less expensive methods, however, it is claimed the land could be cleared at a cost that would warrant its use for agricultural purposes.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation. The Geological Survey, which is under the Department of the Interior, also takes a hand in the matter. It makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated much knowledge regarding the growth and preservation of trees in the forests. This division seems to be growing apace itself and its ambitious to assume complete and entire control. And yet the Interior Department attends to the practical administration of forest protection work while the Agricultural Department sends out a number of pros and cons and reports on the land for forests and their protection and preservation.

But this is only one tiny feature of the troubles that seem to be brawling between the Department of the Interior and the Agricultural Department in their efforts to settle in general. The former department has always looked after the land of the country but the latter while looking after what grows on the land seems to get over the Agricultural Department's head. At least the opinion prevails in some of the Interior Department offices that the Agricultural Department is inclined to go beyond its jurisdiction. The Forestry Division of the Department of Agriculture makes a specialty of forests and has accumulated