ter market is in bad shape and, as expected, wer price range is being quoted in most of leading markets of the United States. With easing shipments of fresh stock to market, e appears to be stagnation in the demand. Notwithstanding the very liberal sales of cold age eggs reported, storage stocks all through United states are far beyond those of this e period a year ago.

Portland stocks of eggs in storage show a l of 7043 cases, compared with 1075 cases year ago. Seattle shows a slight decrease, a total of 1432, compared with 1659 cases year ago. San Francisco stocks of eggs in ouses total 52,318 cases, compared with 022 cases a year ago. Total cold storage lings of eggs at New York, Boston, Chicago Philadelphia include 11462,912 cases, com- d with 1,090,055 cases a year ago.

ust at the moment there appears quite a demand for cold storage eggs as well as h stock, Eastern Oregon and Washington g the principal buyers.

THE MARKET BASKET
RETAIL PRICES

By Hyman H. Cohen

Just listen to this, you weather forecasters:

The first genuine Royal Chinook salmon of the 1921-22 season has been caught in the mid-Columbia and brought to Portland. The Portland Fish company, wholesalers, report the initial arrival of the spring Chinook. It weighed 23 pounds and sold to a retailer at 30c a pound.

According to C. J. B. Malarkey of the wholesale firm, this is the earliest that a genuine spring Royal Chinook salmon has been caught in the Columbia river for over 12 years. About 15 years ago the Malarkey Fish company, of which Mr. Malarkey was the head, received a Royal Chinook salmon November 12. Its arrival was so early that few of the trade would then believe it to be the genuine fish.

The arrival of Royal Chinook salmon this early in the season is taken by some to indicate a very early spring but to offset this forecast is the fact that not a single arrival of Columbia river smelt has been received in Portland, while usually this fish comes in small lots just previous to Thanksgiving.

RECORD PROMISED BROCCOLI OUTPUT

By Hyman H. Cohen

Oregon has a record-breaking acreage planted to broccoli or winter cauliflower this season, not only in Southern Oregon but in the immediate vicinity of Portland.

Not only has the planting been much greater than ever before but weather conditions to date have been practically ideal for the growing plants, and quality is likely to overtop even the usual Oregon standard, which is famous in the leading eastern markets.

Foster Butner, manager of the Umpqua Broccoli Exchange, growers and shippers of broccoli, was in Portland Wednesday making arrangements with leaders of the trade for handling the product for the home territory. Mr. Butner says that the crop promises to break a few records this season, both as regards quality and quantity. He has inaugurated the system of selling the product f. o. b. Roseburg instead of consigning to eastern firms. His first trial of the plan in the present season was a success.

According to Mr. Butner, his organization now controls the Umpqua situation.

All Grains Lower And Little Trading On Chicago Market

Chicago, Nov. 30.—(I. N. S.)—Liquidation on the part of longs at the opening of the wheat market today met with indifference from traders, and initial prices were ⅝c to 1c lower for December and unchanged to ⅜c off for May.

Corn opened unchanged to ⅛c lower for December and ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher for May, with trading of moderate volume.

Oats started with December ⅛c to ⅜c lower and May unchanged to ⅛c lower. There was liquidation on in the December delivery.

Provisions were dull at the outset, with the tendency toward easier prices.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—(I. N. S.)—Wheat closed strongly and sharply higher, with best prices recorded at the close. Early liquidation carried values off, but bullish foreign crop news along with advices from the Seaboard that exporters were after wheat, corn and rye stimulated good buying and forced shorts to cover.

Wheat closed with net gains of 2⅛@2⅝c; corn, ⅝ to 1⅛c higher, and oats ¼c lower to ⅛c higher.

Hay market has shown a slight revival of activity but there appears a surplus of offerings and offerings continue in excess of requirements. This is true of practically all offerings with the exception of No. 1 clover. For fancy Willamette valley offerings there is a temporary scarcity here and as high as $12.50 a ton, Portland, is being bid for carload lots.

Japanese interests are somewhat confusing in their attitude in the wheat market at the moment. Reports have been generally distributed to the effect that the Japs had an overload of wheat and were trying to resell not only in the United States but in Europe and Africa. Now it develops that some new business has passed with the Japanese and several more ships have been listed for loading here.

Little change in wheat market sentiment was shown at the opening of the Wednesday market. Chicago options were a fraction off and opening at Liverpool showed a decline of 1⅛@2⅝d. Crop reports from South America, Africa and Europe are not very reassuring to those who favor low prices.

In reviewing the situation the Chicago Tribune says a too confident feeling prevailed among local traders after the close and many of them expressed the belief that wheat prices were to work temporarily lower. The recent advance of 12½ cents from the low point weakened the technical position of the market and some traders look for May to decline to around 112 to 113 before there was a substantial rally. Many commission houses remain bullish at heart and look for good support on the breaks.

North Portland had a run of 12 loads of livestock Wednesday. Hogs were weaker and about 25c lower, cattle were slow, while sheep were fully steady.

An advance of 25c in the previous top on Willamette valley lambs was the feature at the opening of the Wednesday North Portland trade. Sheep and lamb supplies were quite fair with a total stock of 910 head of new arrivals. Excellent quality was shown in Willamette valley lambs and the select of these went at $7.25, a gain of a quarter over the previous mark. Mutton in general was steady.
