Farmer Without Motor Truck Making Mistake

"A farmer without a motor truck I simply making a fatal mistake," declares H. E. Cushing, 915 Tenth street, of Modesto, Cal., after he had used a Maxwell one-ton truck on his California ranch.

"From an economichl standpoint the truck upkeep is trifling compared to feeding the amount of stock and maintaining equipment necessary to duplicate it in actual service and general farm work. I am provoked at myself now for having delayed in recognizing the value of the motor truck when that farm vehicle was in its infancy."

Mr. Cowell believes the day is not far distance when all short hauls will be by auto trucks. He predicts that rural side tracks will practically be abondoned in the near future and that auto trucks will haul the farm products to more central points for immediate shipment to their destination.

"Such a system," says Cowell, "will release thousands of cars in every division for transcontinental hauls. Where good roads exists the motor trucks can be operated at a minimum cost."

"The wonder is that farmers, most of whom are shrewd, calculating men, have not grasped the truck idea long ago.

Cowell says the truck he purchased is giving him far greater satisfaction than he expected. The industry will in the very near future have motor trucks on every farm.

Velie and Peerless Agent Is Locateed in Salem

C. A. Elliott local agent for Peerless and Velie automobiles and trucks reports business much better than expected. Mr. Elliott has been actively engaged in the automobile game for over ten years He came to Salem about three weeks ago from Long Beach, Calif., and has opened a salesroom at the Great Western garage, 147 North High street. He has sold several cars already and expects to consummate other deals now pending. He is very enthusiastic over Salem and the reception tendered him.

The Velie automobiles and trucks are medium priced machines and have won high favor in many communities. The Peerless is a classy car—eight cylinder and eighty horse power—priced at $2645 Salem.

THE YOUNG IDEA.

That the young idea doesn't always shoot straight may be gathered from recent examination papers received by Professor Otto B. Wise of the Kane chair of texicology at Oxide Dental college. Here are a few definitions passed up to professor:

Scotland Yard is thirty-five inches.

Hic Jacet is a strait-jacket.

Sub Rosa is a woman housekeeper.

An anchorite is a man who makes anchors.

Pro Rata is a large mouse trap for vermin.

Alter ego is an egg that has been kept in cold storage.

Geometry is to drive a horse with only one hand.

Vice Versa is a wild man who writes poetry for hire.

Bona Fide is to give the poor dog a bone.

Transcendentalism is to be able to pull your own teeth.
