CROWD HEARS BISHOP HUGHES

"Finality of Christ" Is Subject of Sermon That Packs Methodist Church

"The Finality of Christ" was the topic of the sermon Sunday morning in the First Methodist church by Bishop Matt S. Hughes, presiding officer of the Oregon conference, and he spoke to a congregation that filled the church to overflowing. People crowded the aisles, the choir loft, and even inside the altar rail.

His text was taken from Matthew and from that portion that reads: "Now when John had heard in prison, he sent two of his disciples to ask; 'Art thou he that is come or are we to look for another?'" And in the expounding and illumination of his text Bishop Hughes searched thoroughly the hearts and consciences of the congregation, and by the power of his appeal so touched their emotions that many shed tears openly.

The bishop said that John—it was John the Baptist to whom he referred—revealed two things in his question—expectation and uncertainty. Such a question he said was asked for information or it revealed something in the mind of the questioner. In the case of John it indicated a double state of mind—expectation and uncertainty.

Conditions Repeated Today

"This same state of mind that caused John to send his disciples," declared the bishop, "exists today, and the mind of man is still asking questions. And the man who does not find the Coming One in Jesus Christ, will find him in someone else."

To illustrate this he cited how certain magnetic leaders had gathered a following around them, and persuaded the people to believe they possessed exceptional powers like Christ. Among these was Alexander Dowie, of Chicago, whose pretensions ended in failure; and Robert Ingersoll and Herbert Spencer, and a large number of German-made professors in the universities. He declared that if these German-made professors were turned inside out, the mark "Made in Germany" would be found. He said that many people had been following the teaching of these false prophets. As for himself, he was going to follow the teachings of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, in preference to any "made in Germany" teachers.

During the last century, he said that a great flood of knowledge had been poured out upon the world, and the pouring of this flood into the minds of men created unrest and questioning. And this state of uncertainty and unrest takes nothing for granted, believes nothing is settled or final.

New Leaders Needed

We have had our great poets—Homer, Dante, and Shakespeare, but we are looking for another. We have our philosophers—Socrates, Plato, but we are looking for another; we have had our great scientists from Copernicus to Edison, but we are looking for another. We have had our great statesmen but we are looking for another. We are always asking the question of John.

"This question is not merely an acedemic one but has to do with the life of every man and woman, and it makes a great difference whether or not Christ is a finality, whether or not we must look for another.

"Since 1859 the world has been intoxicated with the doctrine of evolution, that nothing is fixed, that everything is up for discussion and is in a state of solution. I wish to pause to bring to the mind the fact that there are some finalities that are already in possession and use."

To illustrate this, he cited the multiplication table in mathematics—no one doubts that it is final, he cited the axioms of geometry—that when two things are equal to the same thing they are equal to each other, etc., and asked whether any one wanted to put modern improvements on them. He showed that there was only three good types of architecture—the Roman, the Greek and the Gothic, and that any other form was merely a modification of these three.

So it was with music, he declared, for the musical scale has come down through the ages without modification. Even their unsettledness is never discussed. He carried out his thought with further illustrations and applications that made his points clear.

Finality is Illustrated

On the evolution theme, he said that Fiske, scientist, declares that science knows no probability that man will be wiped from this earth and be re-placed by a super-race. He thought evolution a failure if all it could do in a million years was to produce such an animal that walked the streets of the cities. He asserted that man is not developing new organs but is having a hard time to keep the ones he now has. Man himself represents a finality.

"Finality," Bishop Hughes asserted, "does not mean stopping dead still; a terminal point does not mean merely a place of ending. The psychology of Christ is being revised, and some man who has the power will write a book on the Evidences of Christianity by what Christ did not say and do.

"Christ himself knew that he was the final word; he did not believe nor did he have the attitude of one who believed he was to be followed by another. The fundamental idea of the world is the idea of God and the tragedy of the present war resulted from a false idea of God.

German Ideas Attacked

"And it took a man like Colonel Henry Watterson, of Louisiana, a journalist," declared the bishop, "to call the attention of the world to the German God, and that the Kaiser called upon a German God, a God that inhabited the region of the Rhine and Berlin. It is not generally known but the kaiser presented with soldiers the celebration of the anniversary of Martin Luther in Germany during the period of the war, when their Germans were doing their butcheries in Belgium.

"When Christ said, 'I am the true Light', he gathered in to himself all the wisdom of the ages and no one has been able to point out single religious truth that he has omitted. He has formulated every essential truth. When a certain philosopher stated that the lives of men should be governed by two principles—egoism and altruism, he stated a Biblical quotation which says 'Love thy neighbor as thyself,' and I challenge anyone to state it better."

He touched upon the effect of salvation on character and conduct; he referred to the peace treaty and said he believed in peace treaties but he did not approve of the Shantung iniquity, and he declared that the best recipe for world peace was the lesson of the scripture which says "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you do ye evenso to them."

In the afternoon Bishop Hughes ordained J. Stanley Van Winkle as an elder of the church, and Alexander Hawthorne, Bernard C. Brewster, John D. Woodfin, and Clarence D. Smith as deacons.

Serious Accident Missed—
A Mrs. Smith, who resides near the Highland store, in North Salem, escaped serious injury when an automobile struck the body which she was driving. The accident occurred at the intersection of Highland avenue and Maple street. The car was driven by Louis Caswel of route 4, Salem. That the accident was not a serious one is attributed to the fact that Caswell threw on his brakes in an efort to avoid crashing into the rig. Caswell, who reported the accident at the police station, said that Mrs. Smith had stated that she was not injured.

MOB LYNCHES NEGROES FOR DEATH OF DEPUTY

Washington, Ga., late Sunday night and kept in jail there until 2 o'clock this morning, when he was turned over to the authorities of this county. Once in Lincoln county the mob seized the negro, brought up Brown, caught earlier in the night and fastened both to an old wagon axle. Wood and trash were piled around them and the torch applied.

THIN, IRRITABLE CHILD
Gained Flesh, Strength and Good Nature by Taking Vinol
Middletown, Conn.—"I used Vinol for my little girl 5 years old for a run-down, nervous condition. She was thin, irritable all the time and had no appetite. In a week I noticed an improvement and now she has a good appetite, has gained in flesh and strength and is much pleasanter to live with."—Mrs. C. B. Wilkinson.
There is no secret about Vinol.—It owes its success in such cases to beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates, the oldest and most famous body-building tonics known. Emil A. Schaefer and druggists everywhere.
