EXCELLENT FARMS

73 ACRES RIVER BOTTOM
This farm is a running mate to the 84 acre farm we sold a few days ago. It is located 2 miles from Corvallis on the Albany-Corvallis road and is made up of first bottom and second bottom lands. It is located in fine fruit and berry section and would be fine for this. Has good family orchard 58 acres in high state of cultivation and 15 acres timber; 7-room house, large dairy barn, silo, several good hen houses and usual outbuildings. Considerable new land on this farm. Easy distance to Oregon Agricultural College. Immediate possession for $12,500 $5000 cash balance good time at 6 per cent.

116 ACRE FARM EQIPPED
Located 16 or 17 miles from Salem in Polk county and only about ½ mile from the West Side highway, now being paved; 106 acres of excellent land cultivated and 60 acres in fall crop and clover, balance to be in spring grain and corn—10 acres fine oak grubs for family wood. Good woven wire fencing; good 7-room house, 2-room tenant house, granary, garage, hen house, hog house, machine shed, and nearly new barn, 44x44 with 20-ft shed. Barn is equipped for both dairy and horses. With the place goes all the crop, 6 head of cattle, 5 horses and harness, buggy, hack, wagon, binder, mower, rake, plows, feed grinder, fanning mill, woodsaw, 7 hp. gas engine, cream separator, pigs, about 100 chickens, feed, seed and all kinds of small tools. Everything goes for $125 per acre until April 1. Exceptionally good family orchard and lots of berries. This is the farm you have been waiting for; don't let the other fellow beat you to it.

DAIRY AND STOCK FARM EQUIPPED
285 acres in southern part of Benton county, only 2½ miles from town and 1 mile from school. 80 acres of fine land cultivated, 50 acres fine second growth fir timber, some old fir, balance is cut over land and seeded to pasture. All has gradual slope to north, which makes best summer pasture. Creeks and springs furnish water for stock; 2 acres of family orchard, 8-room house, barn and outbuildings. 30 acres in fall crop goes with place. Also 10 fine cows, 3 of which are registered Jerseys, 1 registered bull 100 goats, 12 hogs, 10 turkeys, about 50 chickens and 20 acres in crop. Everything goes for $14,500.

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

The Story of a Honeymoon

A Wonderful Romance of Married Life Wonderfully Told by ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 550

MADGE GIVES UP ONE DREAM THAT SHE MAY ATTEND TO A REALITY UNHAMPERED.

"Margaret, you haven't heard a word I've said to you."

My mother-in-law's voice, shrilly reproachful, rose above the hum of the train wheels which were bearing us cityward.

I turned a startled face toward her. Her indictment was true. I had no idea of what she had been saying, or, indeed, that she had said anything at all. I had been looking at the brown Long Island meadows just beginning to show traces of the approach of spring, with no thought of the beauty which at any other time I should have so enjoyed with no thought, indeed, but the sinister circumstance which had sent me journeying to the city in search of Katherine Sonnot, my brother-cousin's financee.

Two cheap, grimy envelopes had come through the mail to me within the last two days, envelopes bearing widely different postmarks, but each containing a single half-sheet of note paper enfolding a newspaper clipping marked with red ink. One clipping was the account of the execution of a spy in Paris, the other a description of a gruesome Black Hand murder in Chicago.

There was no possible clue to the sender of them, and the only inference I could draw from their coming was that someone was trying to frighten me. I knew of only two persons in the world who could possibly wish to do such a thing, and they were Mrs. Allis, whom I supposed to be confined in a sanitarium for drug addicts, and Grace Draper, of whom I had heard but a few weeks before in South America.

Chintzes or Tapestry?

Katherine Sonnot, through whose prompt action Mrs. Allis had been placed in the sanitorium, was the only person who could find out whether the "poisoned pen" clippings were of her sending. But the unexpected presence of my mother-in-law on my little journey threatened to thwart my interview with my brother-cousin's little fiancee.

"I beg your pardon, mother," I said contritely. "My mind must be wandering, for I truly didn't hear you speak at all. What is it you wish?"

"I don't wish anything," she replied tartly. "I only remarked that we would go up through Feltman's first and then go around through the other stores. Feltman's always have a great many beautiful designs in chintzes and cretonnes and madras, but they are horribly dear. However, we can get an idea of what's being done in the draperies this year."

My motherin-law's tone was final. When I had made looking at draperies for the house we had bought an excuse for my little excursion into the city she had at once said that she was coming with me, as she didn't wish any draperies bought which she didn't see. I had foreseen difficulty in getting away from her and seeing Katherine. But with the program she had just mapped out I would have no chance to slip away long enough to telephone. And I foresaw a battle royal over the question of draperies, for although my mother-in-law's taste in such matters is always excellent, it does not always accord with mine, and I, like any other woman, naturally wanted my own selection of colors and fabrics in my home.

I tried to protect one, at least, of my pet projects.

"There are often remnants of chintzes at Hambel's at surprising reductions," I ventured. "I think it would give most satisfactory results of we should upholster those black walnut chairs I bought of Mrs. Wilde in pieces of chintz of the same general tone but different in patterns. The costly pieces of chintz do not come in remnants large enough for more than one small chair."

"Rubbish!" my mother-in-law said emphatically. "You're crazy, Margaret, to think of putting delicate chintzes on those chairs. Tapestry is what you want. That will last for years and it's much richer."

"Hook, Line and Sinker."

I opened my lips to do valiant battle, for the chairs I had bought from the woman who owned the house we had purchased, wonderful mid-Victorian black walnut chairs with the grape design carved in them. I had spent many pleasurable moments imagining their gloomy, horsehair upholstery replaced with bright English chintzes.

But before any words found utterance I closed them again. For the solution of the problem of getting rid of my mother-in-law had flashed upon me.

"I don't know but you're right, Mother," I said meekly. "But I don't know anything about tapestries, and I have several errands I really ought to do. Don't you want to take all this vexed question of household draperies off my hands? You've had so much more experience than I. Suppose you make the selection and order them sent out, and meet me for tea at Hambel's at 5 o'clock?"

If Dicky had been describing the way his mother received my proposition he would have said that she "swallowed it, hook, line and sinker."

"That's the first sensible thing I've heard you say in a week," she rejoined, and I saw her shopping spirit begin to gird itself for the fray. "You run along about your errands. And don't bother to meet me for tea. Perhaps I shan't be through. I'll get tea when I want it, and go home when I'm through, and you do the same."
