Three Bills Vetoed by Governor Pierce

So far during the legislative session Governor Pierce has vetoed only three bills. They are:

S. B. 17, Upton—To exempt the charitable fund created by the will of Bernard Daly from the inheritance tax.

H. B. 28, Kuehn—Prohibiting the changing in party registration within 30 days prior to primary elections.

H. B. 352, ways and means committee—Authorizing the state to purchase Astoria bonds in the sum of $350,000.

Yesterday in Washington

A bill providing $275,000 for surveys of western reclamation projects was sent to the president.

President Harding was said confidently to expect constantly progressive improvement in enforcement of prohibition.

Senators hostile to the shipping bill continued their filibuster with proponents threatenng to force an all-night session.

The house passed and sent to the senate a strong bill increasing from $10,000 to $16,000 the maximum of land bank loans to farmers.

Supporters of new restrictive immigration legislation were said to be convinced it is dead so far as the present session of congress is concerned.

President Harding was assured by Chairman Meyer of the Interstate commerce commission that no section of the country was in danger of distress due to coal shortage.

Unanimously a senate finance sub-committee voted an adverse report on the Bursum bill proposing a one-billion dollar government loan to Germany to finance purchases of American commodities.

Requests for a hearing were filed with the senate oil investigating committee by the Standard Oil company of Indiana which declared charges made against it by Thoms S. Black of the Western Petroleum company of Chicago were "flagrantly untrue."

Valley of Dry Bones Liked by Salem People

What is believed to be as effective evangelistic preaching as was ever done in Salem, is being done at First Methodist church, by Dr. E. C. Hickman, president of Kimball School of Theology. The official board felt that there might always be certain objections to outside evangelists, but in Dr. Hickman they believed they would get everything that any evangelist could bring—power and sympathy, and the sterling manhood that everybody could see and approve, every day in the year. Their choice has been wonderfully justified, for the work of Dr. Hickman has been of a fine, scholarly, but strikingly effective nature.

Last night, Dr. Hickman preached on "The Valley of Dry Bones," a powerful presentation of the vivifying effect of spirituality in the dead life of materialism. Tonight is "Old People's Night," to which all who are of the riper years are especially invited. Anybody knowing of old people who could come if they were called for in cars, are asked to send in the names and addresses to phone 974 or 1766W; and a few more car volunteers are also asked for. Friday will be Sunday school and young people's night. The music all through the series has been very effective. It is conducted by Cyril Mee, an Australian soldier singer of rare ability.

On Sunday afternoon, a mass meeting for men, in connection with the city YMCA is to be held at the church, when Dr. Hickman is to speak on "The Sins of Men." It will be open to all men.

IF RHEUMATIC EAT NO SWEETS

Says Glass of Salts Helps to Overcome Rheumatism Acid.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly, keep the feet dry, avoid exposure, and above all, drink plenty of good water and avoid eating sweets of all kinds.

Rheumatism is caused by body waste and acids resulting from food fermentation. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this waste and acids, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove waste matter, also to stimulate the kidneys, thus often ridding the blood of rheumatic poison.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.—Adv.

MOVIE GOSSIP

BLIGH

George Larkin, Eva Novak in "Barriers of Folly."

OREGON

"All the Brothers were Valiant" with Lon Chaney and Billie Dove.

Liberty

Clare Kimball Young in "Straight from Paris."

Starting next Saturday and Sunday the Bligh theater will present the first of the season's vaudeville road shows. These shows consist of four picked acts and from advance reports from this first show it will surpass anything that has ever been in Salem. Manager Bligh has been striving for months to get a better class of vaudeville for his patrons and he now feels that he has reached his goal.

The "great little hero of the movies" George Larkin, has made a picture that outstrips all former efforts of his in the way of action. In the beginning, he knocks the villain down! In the end he repeats the treatment, only with a little more force. George's fight technique is as good as his ability to act. His latest film, "Barriers of Folly," opens at the Bligh theater today. It doesn't need a press agent to tell you that Eva Novak is a star in her own right. She stepped into "double harness" however, for the period of the making of "Barriers of Folly."

The supreme test of true love is the subject of Clara Kimball Young's new photoplay, "Straight From Paris," now playing at the Liberty theater.

As the plain, unartificial Lucette Grenier, French milliner, the role taken by Miss Young, we are introduced to a succession of throbbing circumstances that soon lead to the crisis of the story. In her unadorned beauty, Lucette cannot help attracting the attentions of aristocratic members of sociey. In the web of a romance which she cannot control, the shop girl hides her identity for fear of the scorn that her wealthy admirers would shower upon her, once they learned that Lucette was not of their own set, but an ordinary working girl. The inevitable discovery is made, and here "Straight From Paris" reaches its climax. Shall wealth and social standing be the criterion of marriage? Is it what the girl has, or what the girl is, that decides? "Straight from Paris," with a variety of sumptuous scenery and costume give the most convincing answer to this all-important question that a picture has yet presented.

"Come on, you Hottentot! Come on boy! Ride 'em, Sam!" "The Hottentot wins! Hottentot! Hottentot!"

It would take a whole set of exclamation points and Egyptian hieroglyphics to do justice to the steeplechase in Thomas H. Ince's new comedy, a screen version of "The Hottentot." A modern type set is totally inadequate.

As a laugh-maker the picture is even funnier than the stage play of the same name.

Thomas H. Ince picked a winner when he bought the film-rights to the play for $21,000. He has produced a thriller in the picture. It's the cleverest comedy drama of the season.

The palatial steam yacht Casiana, owned by E. L. Doheny, Los Angeles oil magnate, was used in the yachting scenes of Marshall Neilans production of "The Strangers' Banquet," a Goldwyn picture, coming to the Grand theater Saturday for two days. The Casiana, a 1227-ton all steel yecht, 254 feet long, later took off the 280 passengers and the crew of the ocean liner, City of Honolulu, when it burned 500 miles off Los Angeles harbor.

Eleanor Boardman, appearing in Marshall Neilan's "The Strangers' Banquet," which comes to the Grand theater on Saturday for two days, has discarded the shoulder straps on her evening gown. Milliners' paste keeps the gown where it should be and eliminates a lot of annoyance caused by the falling straps.

The smashing blows from the flailing flukes of a wounded 50-ton whale in its death struggle came close to crushing several members of the cast of "All the Brothers Were Valiant," the Irvin Willat production for Metro, now presented at the Oregon theatre. The episode took place during a recent trip to the Farallone Islands off the California coast. Mr. Willat wanted to show the actual hunting and killing of a whale from small boats, and he succeeded, but almost at the cost of many lives.

This was only one more instance where members of the crews that manned the twenty-eight-foot power whale launches risked their lives in order to get the "thrill" registered by the camera for this Metro special production of Ben Ames Williams' powerful sea story in which Lon Chaney, Billie Dove, Malcolm McGregor, Robert McKim and William Mong have leading roles.

During the morning, a week after the arrival of the whaling party, they sighted a "single," then a "pair," and finally another "single."

"We'll get that or bust," grimly declared Mr. Willat. The two small power boats were loaded. One had a harpoon rifle mounted in the bow and was manned by Bob Kortman, Vincent Higgins, Jack Graham, John Hanson and Otto Hansen.

Both boats chased the whale for an hour, the cameramen stationed on the "Traveler" cranking now and again. Finally Bob Kortman fired a one-pound shell into the under side of the bull and he sounded. By this time the other boat had reached the spot. The men stood, harpoons in hand, and when their prey came up again it was at a distance. The next time he came up they were more fortunate and one launch was able to hand him two harpoons.

A few minutes later the men in both boats sat scanning the surface of the water for the first sign of the whale's next appearance. The engine of one launch had run out of gasoline and was stalled while the crew was engaged in opening the reserve tank. Suddenly Higgins cried:

"Here he comes! He's right under us!"

Powerless to escape, the men had nothing to do but wait. Whales, although they can hear the revolving propeller of a steamer at a distance of 12 miles, are, to all practical purposes, blind. This one did not see the launch until he was almost at the surface.

Finally, weakened through loss of blood, the bull came to the surface and stayed there for perhaps three minutes. "Red" Thompson, in one of the launches, ordered Richter, the first mate of the "Traveler," to guide the small craft alongside. When this was done he leaped to the back of the animal, maintaining a footing by aid of his spiked boots, and scored the death blow, a thrust through the lungs.

Blowing a spay of blood, the whale started on its final dive. Thompson's launch was several rods distant and he was forced, despite his heavy clothing and boots, to leap into the blood-stained sea. Some minutes later he was hauled aboard.

Income Tax Bill Made Special Order Today

The income tax bill, H. B. 350, will be a special order in the senate at 11 o'clock today. This was moved yesterday by Senator Tooze. There was no inclination in the senate to act on the measure yesterday for the reason that few of the members had made themselves familiar with the plan.

Yesterday in the Legislature

Mrs. Simmons' bill, providing for a physical examination and blood test of both male and female applicants for marriage licenses was defeated in the senate yesterday after a warm debate, with only Farrell, Kinney, Klepper, Robertson, Staples, Tooze and Upton voting for it.

Farrell made a strong speech for the bill and Ellis spoke against it. Joseph assailed the bill, calling it impractical and declaring it would only drive more marriages to the state of Washington. Moser declared it would be a mistake to pass the bill, called it absolutely ridiculous and said it would not reach the persons it is supposed to reach. Klepper declared the objections made were absolutely fallacious and called "all bunk" Senator Ellis' statement that the examination proposed would be an insult to the female applicants. Dennis ridiculed the bill, calling it "the product of the imaginary brain of a dreamer."

The following senate bills were passed by the senate yesterday:

S. B. 224, Moser—To regulate the manufacturing and sale of bedding.

S. B. 229, Robertson—To reimburse First National bank of Linnton in sum of $85 for coupons lost while being transferred from state treasurer's office.

By indefinite postponement the senate killed Representative Graham's bill proposing to create a maintenance and betterment account in state highway funds, segregating part of the gasoline tax for that purpose and providing for its use in the upkeep of public highways of the state.

The following house bills were passed by the senate yesterday:

H. B. 351, Committee on fisheries—Providing for the payment of $2736 to William Hunter as bounty on sea lions.

H. B. 240, Mott—Providing for a larger return from taxes on foreign insurance corporations.

H. B. 366, Committee on elections—Prohibiting changing of party affiliation within 30 days prior to primary election day.

Senate bills 230 and 231, both providing for Astoria relief from the highway funds and through the state highway department, and both signed by more than 20 senators were introduced yesterday. It is understood Governor iPerce will give these bills right of way by vetoing the measure empowering the state to purchase $250,000 in Astoria bonds.

Senate bill 215 which failed to pass yesterday, and which proposed to place bond houses dealing in municipal bonds under the state corporation department, will be reconsidered. This was voted yesterday and was rereferred to the committee on revision of laws.

Representative Watson's bill to provide for the appropriation of $50,000 annually for a sinking fund to build institutions for the care of dependent children was indefinitely postponed yesterday by the house.

Following a hearing at which representatives of the City of Portland, Multnomah county and a number of county courts throughout the state, the house committee on assessment and taxation last night voted to report unfavorably on Senator Dennis' bill to reduce all levies in the next two years by 10 per cent over the levies for 1923.

Echoes of the controversy between the residents on the shores of Oswego lake and the Oswego Log and Boom company of Portland, which occupied ten days of the public service commission's time in Portland in December, were heard last night in the house of representatives in the discussion on Senate bill 221, introduced by the Multnomah delegation.

The bill was passed.

Representative Huston, secretary of the boom company involved, charged that Walter P. La Roche, former city attorney of Portland and opposing counsel in the hearing before the commission, was at least "unethical" when he caused this bill to be introduced.

The bill eliminates Oswego lake from the jurisdiction of the public service commission in booming questions and will settle the case pending before the commission in which Huston and LaRoche are involved in favor of the lake residents.

Efforts to prevent the passage of H. B. 377 by the joint ways and means committee, which provides that the state industrial accident commission shall be self-supporting during the coming biennium, failed in the house yesterday. The bill passed with the provision that no money from the general fund should be used during 1924 and 1925 for the operation of the commission. Representatives Woodward and Kay led the fight against the removal of state aid.

Among other joint ways and means committee bills subjected to attack yesterday afternoon house bill 387, providing for an appropriation of $36,000 for the salaries of the master fish warden and his assistants, came in for heated discussion. The dispute over the bill arose over the filing of a letter by the commission with the legislature two years ago in which it was agreed that no money would be asked of the present session for hatchery expenses. Some of the members understood this as a pledge that no funds for any purposes would be requested. On the strength of a pledge given on the floor today, that by 1925 the commission would be entirely self-supporting, the appropriation was granted.

Poets always see pearls in tears; in life they are more often drops of blood.
