DO AMERICANS LIVE IN HOUSES OR HOMES?

comfort or efficiency in a home.

When is a house attractive enough to be a home? Better Homes in America says that it is when it possesses the priceless attributes of appropriateness and harmony and beauty, no matter how modest its furnishings and decorations may be. All the furniture in a home may come under the thousand dollar mark, and yet it may have these invaluable qualities. Another house may be furnished with real antiques and expensive tapestries and priceless pictures, and yet come nearer to being a museum than a home. Care should be taken in choosing colors in the furnishings and the decorations. It is probably not too much to say that the wrong colors or the wrong combination of colors can keep a house from being a real home. Pictures are another crucial matter. As for ornaments, "Better Homes in America" suggest that these decrease in value as they increase in number. In general, it may be said that a home is attractive only when it possesses thorough harmony, in its inner as well as in its outer aspects.

Hundreds of communities all through the United States are making their plans at present to aid their people in the effort to make their houses homes by holding Better Homes demonstrations under the auspices of the national organization, during Better Homes Week, May 11-18. Practically everybody really wants to live in a home instead of a house. This is proved by the fact that letters are daily coming into the offices of Better Homes in America telling of demonstrations which will be held all the way from Key West to the Arctic Circle. One letter recently received from a little Alaskan town was brought out by a dog-sled to the point from which it could be mailed to Washington. Another inquiry as to how to conduct a demonstration comes from Hawaii.

There are indications that at least a thousand communities are planning to build, buy or borrow houses which can be properly equipped, furnished and decorated, humanized with books and music and growing gardens, turned into real homes, and thrown open to the public, that it may see how the thing has been done, during Better Homes Week. Almost without exception these homes will be on a modest scale. It will be their aim to show the small home-owner, the family of small income, how worthy homes may be made.

All kinds and types of homes will be shown in these demonstrations. There will be little negro cabins, modest bungalows and more pretentious abodes. There will be old houses made over into places of convenience and comfort, and new houses, built for the occasion. There will be Better Homes which owe their existence to groups of High School students, to Women's Clubs, to Chamber of Commerce, to all the citizens of the community working together in the interests of home betterment. All these houses so widely scattered—communities in every state in the Union will take part in the Better Homes demonstrations—will have one thing in commin. They will all be not mere houses but homes.

Any community which is eager to improve its homes should hold a Better Homes demonstration. The process is a simple one, which does not mean that it does not require unselfish interest in home betterment, united effort, and a considerable amount of work on the part of those in charge. But work spent in turning houses into homes is by no means wasted labor. The first step is to get in touch with the national organization, at 1653 Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, D. C. A chairman will then be appointed for the community. This chairman will assemble a committee for the Better Homes demonstration. The program of the national organization is carried out by local committees all through the country. The type of demonstratio nwhich is held in each community is determined by the community itself, through its own committee, the decision being based upon the size, and needs, and possibilities of the community.

In the average well-balanced demonstration a house is built or bought or borrowed, and furnished and equipped in accordance with the Better Homes Standards of convenience, comfora, simplicity and beauty. A garden is planted, a lawn is sown, and flowers are sown or transplanted. During Better Homes Week this home is opened to the public. A committee of hostesses is on hand to explain the merits of the arrangement, equipment and decorations. Exhibitions are given of special features—the convenient kitchen, the modern nursery, the beautiful garden. A program is given afternoons and evenings intended to help the community in the problem of turning houses into homes. Afterwards, if the house has been built or bought for the occasion, it is may be sold at auction on the closing day of Better Homes Week.

In many places, it is impossible to hold Better Homes demonstration complete in all these details. In some rural districts where no house can be obtained for the demonstration, the method of rotating demonstrations is followed. Homes of the community having particularly convenient kitchens are demonstrated on one day of Better Homes Week, those with an up-to-date lighting system and sewerage system on another day and so on. Usually, interest is added to the demonstration by making these features competitive—Better Kitchen Contests, etc. In other places, it is possible to have only home-betterment lectures, Better Homes sermons in the churches, and prize essays in the schools on the subject of making better homes. All these demonstrations, no matter how simple a form they take, are of undoubted value to the community.

We need more houses in the United States. But more badly still, we need more homes. No housing shortage can be so acute as the present shortage of homes in the nation.

GINGRICH STARTS CONSTRUCTION

Automobile Firm to Have New Location at Commercial and Bellevue

Work has begun on the new home of the Maxwell and Chrysler automobile agency at the southwest corner of Commercial and Bellevue. The new sales room and service department of the O. B. Gingrich Motor company, now at State and Front, will occupy the building upon its completion about July 1.

The new building will be in the shape of an L, with a frontage of 46 feet on Commercial and 40 feet on Bellevue. The Commercial side will have a depth of 85 feet on Bellevue and the Bellevue side a depth of 80 feet. The building will be constructed of concrete, one story high and will cost $8,500 according to the building permit issued about the middle of the week.

Wooden Cabins Arise at Rear of Dreamland Rink

Ten small wooden cabins have been completed, two more are in the last stages of the process and another on the way just east of the Dreamland skating rink and dance hall at the end of State street. The cottages are being built by Otto Klett and are to be used by tourists stopping at his private auto park ground. Mr. Klett is contemplating the erection of 20 or more of these cottages this season, with the possibility of greatly increasing the number if it is warranted.

All of the cabins are small, are provided with windows and a stove. They are not designed to give all the comforts of home but to provide semi-permanent quarters for people who are on a summer's outing. In addition to being located at the end of the street car line and adjoining the dance hall, Mill creek is but a few yards away and will offer a fine place to swim during the summer.

Material for a large number of other cottages is already on the ground and these are being built as fast as possible.

Many Patents Waiting Action By Department

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 19.—There are 200,000 applications for patents on inventions now pending in the United States Patent office, according to a statement today of the United States Civil Service Commission. To speed up action, congress has authorized an appropriation which will permit the addition of 100 to the present examining force of 500.

The civil service commission will hold examinations on May 7 and later dates for positions of assistant examiner in the patent office. The entrance salary is $1860 a year, and increases are provided up to $5,000 a year.

Full information concerning the examination may be obtained from the United States civil service commission, Washington, D. C., or the secretary of the civil service board at the post office or custom house in any city.

The commission states that of approximately 80,000 applications for patents made annually, fully two-thirds of them relate to some phase of the automobile industry. The present system in the patent office of examination before issue was authorized by an act of congress of 1836. The system has been copied by practically all large countries.

WOMEN'S PLACE DECLARED HOME

Growing Tendency to Forsake Duties of Being a Housewife—Kirkwood

"There is a growing tendency on the part of our women folk to forsake the prosaic, colorless life of the housewife for one with more excitement and thrills in the world of business and politics," said R. J. Kirkwood, president of the Union Savings & Loan association at the second annual convention of the Utah League of Building & Loan associations at Salt Lake City last week. Kirkwood was the honor guest at the convention and talked in the afternoon on "The Value of Building & Loan Associations to the Community" and at the banquet in the evening on "The American Home." The remark quoted was contained in the last named speech.

"The rapid drift of our population from farms to urban centers is bad," continued Kirkwood. "In college too much emphasis is laid on the dollars one may accumulate in business or the professions with the aid of a college education. This keeps the flow of life away from the farm, for, instead of returning to humble pursuits, equipped for leadership when duty calls, when their college days are over, our young people rush into crowded metropolitan centers seeking lucrative positions and to acquire wealth in shortest possible time."

In concluding his address on "The American Home," Kirkwood said: "If we ever meet with national disaster a larger portion of the responsibility will justly fall upon the hundreds of thousands of women who are throwing away their Godgiven birthright of motherhood for the shallow and short lived pleasures the passing hour affords."

THE OUTLANDER

"Darn the druggists," said the cop on State street at 10 o'clock one night last week. "Almost every night somebody comes to me and says it is absolutely necessary for them to get into a drug store. Sometimes it is really almost a matter of life and death. Anyhow, relief for sickness is always important, and I have to phone and get some druggist to come down and fill a prescription or something. There are 12 drug stores in Salem—one for each month in the year—but they all close at 8 o'clock. Why don't they get together and make a nice little agreement so that each one of them could remain open until 10 or 11 o'clock for one month in the year. It would be a kindness to the public—and to me."

The old crab says: "Men have an idea that windows were intended to look through and to let light into the house, but women seem to be dead certain that they are just to hang curtains over and set house plants in. There ought to be a law agin it."

When a man is arrested for horse stealing, why don't they let him off easy if he tells who raised the horse and thus put temptation in his way? Did it ever occur to you that if the penalty for being drunk was made strong enough and rigorously enforced there would be fewer bootleggers? Squelch the consumers and the producers will have to quit.

Listening to the experiences of newcomers trying to get settled in Salem is always interesting. On the average it is a continuous burlesque show, but not always. Sometimes it is far from funny and looks almost like tragedy to them. We who live here lose our perspective, and do not realize that, no matter where the newcomer came from, it was entirely different from this. There is no other section in the United States where nature's processes are even approximately like those of the Willamette valley. The newcomer is a living interrogation point, or, at least, would like to be. Don't be a selfish piker. Don't squelch him. Take him under your wing and give him the straight of it. Don't gyp him, nor let anyone else do it if within your power to prevent. After he has been here a year or two and has rooted a place for himself at the trough and has become acclimated, he is going to remember the man who played good Samaritan; and he is also going to remember the man who passed by on the other side. Be good to him. If you are not capable of doing it just because it's the decent thing to do, then do it because you may run for office some time and need his vote.

I like the man who takes the time to help his fellowman;
Who doesn't shy nor make excuse,
but does the best he can
To get him started right and make him glad that he came west,
And start him shouting loud and long: "This country is the best."
To such a man we doff our hat.
He is the salt of earth.
Let paeans rise in praise of him.
Let us all sing his worth,
Who drops his work and whinnies
and deserts his well filled manger
And gallops off to make himself a neighbor to the stranger.

"There is a pleasure in the pathless wood."
So Byron chortled many years ago,
And he was right. We wouldn't if we could Dispute his findings. What he said is so.
But many other things are in the wood
Besides the "pleasure" of which Byron spoke.
So, while your traipsing 'round may do you good,
For heaven's sake look out for poison oak!

Th'other day a man said: "I've been trying to sell my house so as to buy a bigger one. Finally I looked over the ads in The Statesman and noticed that a lot of properties are offered in trades. One of them looked good to me, and I went to the real estate man who had advertised it, but found that it had been sold that morning. However, he said he could probably get me a deal all right, and before I left he asked me to give him the exclusive sale of it so that he could afford to advertise it, and I told him to go ahead and that I wouldn't place it in the hands of any other agent. The next day I noticed properties advertised by two other agents that sounded promising, and went to see them. The owners wouldn't trade, but the agents said if they found anything to match my deal they would let me know. The next day both these agents had my property listed in their advertisements, and now I'm afraid to meet that first agent. I'll bet he thinks I'm a liar."

Minister Hanihari should have known better than to try to bluff a nation which specializes in poker.

For several years we have studiously taken note of the attractive advertisements of a certain well known brand of tooth brushes which have a big special bunch of bristles at the end. That special bunch of bristles was supposed to be a masterpiece of dental ingenuity whereby rebellious molars could be made to function successfully for several years longer than they had intended to, and to prove it the advertisements contain unpleasant pictures showinghowthat shape of brush is the only one that exactly fits the human dental scheme and makes it possible to really do a good job of cleaning the teeth. So that kind of brush has been conscienciously used for years with the comforting thought that anyhow we were giving those old grinders every possible chance to make good and live to a ripe old age. But now a new ad greets us from every magazine. According to this new ad dental science has just made the remarkable discovery that the only reliable kind of tooth brush is built on lines exactly opposite to those in which we have reposed such confidence. The surface of the brush is trimmed semi-circularly, with the long hairs in the middle and short ones at both ends. And pictures are also published showing how this sort of brush exactly fits the teeth as no other possibly can, and gives the solemn warning that the use of any other brush will make us liable to the disastrous attacks of several seven-syllabled tooth maladies. Shucks! What's the use! We're going to buy some store teeth and quit worrying. Let's see 'em laugh that off.

A new comer who arrived in Salem last summer says that his relatives here advised him to postpone buying a house until spring, as he would be able to buy much cheaper then. So he rented a house for the winter. Now everyone tells him that he should have purchased last fall, as property is much higher here in the spring. However, he says he has doped it out and formulated his own philosophy on the subject. It goes like this "Any time you find it for sale is the cheapest time to buy Salem property, for at any future time it will be higher." The longer you study that the truer it sounds.

The wickedness of Portland breaks our hearts. In vain has Salem, by precept and example, tried to lead her in paths of civic righteousness. We blush o'er the iniquities of our profligate sister down the river. We've tried to save her, but she wouldn't let us, —and she's too big to spank. While our upright men of affairs have unswervingly trod the straight and narrow path in all their dealings, those of Portland have, it is alleged, gyrated into dark and noisome byways, and come forth with mucky hands and grinning from ear to ear. (We blush some more.) While our commissioners have safe-guarded every peso of the people's money, it is claimed that those of Portland have been playing ante-over with half-million hunks of their'n. (Again we weep.) While the open faced insurance men of Salem gullelessly transact their business on a high plane of moral rectitude, the papers say that those of Portland shamelessly try to make as large commissions as possible, going to the extent of over insuring public buildings. (We continue to beller,) These disclosures not only stigmatize Portland, but also taint the fair name of our incorruptible state, and as the center of virtue therein Salem views them with horror and moans of anguish.

MODERN 7 ROOM HOME IN SPLENdid close-in location, held at $6000 and worth it, slashed to $5250 and buyable without advance payment for six months if necessary. Rent rate only.
North Broadway home of two stories with 5 fine lots, only $3500; with 2 lots $2500. Owner forced to sell. A bargain.
I have advised several friends to buy North Capitol street property and they have doubled their money in a year and less. Others tell me freely how they regret that they did not buy more. I'll gladly take you to these and they will tell you the same. Just now I have what I believe to be the best investment in a close-in North Capitol street tract that I have yet been able to assemble. It is an opportunity for somebody and will go soon. Investigate.
Half acre near city playgrounds at your own price. Hurry.
