GLAD TO LEAVE FOR HOME

OREGON DELEGATION WANTED NO EXTRA SESSION.

Like the Other Members of Congress, They Were Anxious to Take Up Personal Business.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—There was in the Senate wing of the Capitol, to tell what Senators would retire from Congut wanted to avoid an extra session. but wanted to avoid an extra session. in this they were like each and every one of their associates in Congress. There was a universal desire on the part of all Senators and Representatives to put aside their Congressional duties at the close of the regular session of Congress, and again take up their personal business, which has had to take second place during the past three months. Senator Simon was anxious to get back to his law office. Representative Tongue wanted to once more resume his practice at Hills-boro, and look after his farms, for, is he says, the Spring time is when the farmer wants to be about making preparations for the coming sea-son. Mr. Moody had calls to be back in his warehouse, and so it was that each the wanted to avoid an extra session. There was much concern on all hands when an extra session seemed unavoidable, and great was the sigh of relief when it was learned that the Cuban and Phillippine amendments to the army apopriation bill would be satisfactory the President. Senator Simon, however, was more "unfortunate" than his col eagues, as the Senate is always called into extra session after an inauguration to confirm new appointments. Luckily for him, this session will be of short duration this year.

Henderson as an Entertainer. As an entertainer at stag dinners. Speaker Henderson has no equal. The two Representatives from Oregon are willing to testify to this, and can speak from experience. The Speaker recently gave a dinner to some thirty or forty members at the Metropolitan Club, to which both Mr. Tongue and Mr. Moody were invited. The Metropolitan is one of the swell clubs in Washington, which numbers among its members the most prominent men in official and business life in the National Capital. On this particular evening all serious questions were put aside, and the guests one and all entered into the spirit of the occa-sion, under the leadership of the jovial Speaker. In speaking of the dinner after. ard one of the Oregon members said: I thought I was fully able to hold my own, but when I met the Speaker I found I was a novice. He kept that party in the joiliest sort of a humor from $ o'clock until 2 the next morning, and then appeared in his chair at noon, as oright and chipper as you please. When I felt the throbbing of my own poor head and then looked up to see his easy man-ner I tell you I envied him his ability to stand such a function as that of the night previous." The Oregon men found that the Speaker, in a social way, is, in the language of the club man, "a jolly good fellow."

Old Government Publication. During the past year a force of emdoyes under charge of Captain James W. Switzer has been engaged in exploring the subterranean recesses of the Capitol building for the purpose of gathering up the overflow volumes of Government publeations, which have been accumulating in forgotten rooms and corridors for a century past. This search has been amrewarded. Captain Switzer's men we found 168,000 volumes of books which ply rewarded. were scattered in various parts of the Capitol from alcove rooms in the dome to the lowest vaults in the recesses of the basement. These volumes include copies of nearly every bound publication issued by the Government since its establishment. There are thousands of copies of the old "Congressional Globe," many of the still older "Congressional Annals." department reports of nearly 100 years ago, and scores of books long since thought unobtainable, excepting from the Congressional library, and which are of great value to collectors. These books ome so valuable and thousands of them were scattered through the Car Itol in endless confusion; those in the ement rooms were covered inches deep with the dust of scores of years, and hundreds of them, printed years and years ago, had never had the original wrappings of the printing office removed from them. Captain Switzer's force, which was employed under resolution of Congressman E. W. Roberts, of Massachu-setts, creating a special committee on preservation and distribution of Govern-ment publications, has cleaned, dusted, shelved, classified and catalogued that great collection of books, and the visitor chances to stray into the depths of the House basement may wander through great catacombs of masonry sides and floors filled with this collection. Ask for any Government publication of any year during the past century, and it will be forthcoming instantly. It is proposed to apportion the publications collected among members of Congress for distribution among school, college and public libraries of the country. The work of collecting the books has cost $4500, but it is doubt, ful if any expenditure of a like amount of money in the Government service has shown such beneficial results.

Vanderlip a Good Officer.

In the retirement of Frank A. Vander-lip from the office of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, the Government loses a valuable man. During his four years of service. Mr. Vanderlip has been the right hand man to Secretary Gage in all realiers pertaining to the administration of the Treasury, and in this capacity has made a record for himself. His retirement at the close of the Administration was somewhat of a surprise to his friends, but they one and all concur that he has made a wise step. As Assistant Secre-tary of the Treasury he had reached the highest place obtainable in the Govern-ment service. His salary at best was not large, particularly for a man of his attainments. There was no reason why he should not relinquish this position for one where his services would command a saiary more commensurate with his ability. Mr. Vanderlip leaves the Treasury with the good wishes of all who have known him, and enters a field where his capa-billities will command a fine position. He intends to continue his connection with financial institutions, and goes abroad at this time to complete his education on financial questions. That he will succed in his new line, no one can question Mr. Vanderlip is the kind of a man that will make himself felt in any field, and in his new venture he will soon be found among those now recognized as the

After the Prairie Dog.

It seems as if the littlep prairie dog must go. He has at last called down upon himself the wrath of the Department of Agriculture, with its force of scientists, and if he survives the struggle that is to be made to bring about his extermination, he will prove himself indeed a crafty little animal. For some time the scientists have been making a study of various agents that have been used for the destruction of prairie dogs, and have at last united in recommending poisoned grain and bisulphide of carbon as the most effective means of bringing about their destruction. It has been eetimated that by employing the grain, that from 80 to 90 per cent of the animals may be destroyed at a cost of about 10 cents per acre. Where the grain fails to work, it is stated that the bisuiphide is infallible, if properly applied. The department goes further, and gives printed directions as to how the grain shall be oisoned, and the bisulphide applied to holes inhabited by these little animals. The whole matter seems to have been reduced to a science, with a complete sys- nance. He declares his arrest illegal.

tem. The department is very enthusias-tic in its mission of dealing out death to these little fellows who have proven such a source of amusement to many transcontinental travelers, and such an annoyance to the farmers. Extermination of prairie dogs at the phenomenally low rate of 10 cents an acre, however, should appeal to every farmer, for it is a bargain never before equaled, and may not last long.

FENCE MADE FROM SAWS.

Why Its Owner Can Afford to Use Such Material.

Washington Star. "Pencing a farm with steel is some-what of a noveity," said a Washington woman, "but during a recent trip to Nelson County, Virginia, I saw a 15-acre farm which was thoroughly fenced with steel bands. At Schuyler the finest soapstone which is found in the country is ceed at once with the baths that would very extensively mined, the owners of the be serviceable in Summer. Later, plans quarries being, I am informed, residents of this city. The stone is not only quarried, but is cut there into all kinds of shapes, in which form it is shipped to all parts of the United States. A large number of saws are kept constantly go-ing, sawing out the stone. These saws are bands of steel 15 feet long and about six inches in width. and when they are fixed up to stone posts they make the finest and most in-destructible fences I ever saw. It would be out of the question to put up such fences as an original investment, but it is found to be much cheaper to use the worn-out saws for fence rails than to ship them back to the steel mills."

This was not enough to buy ground and build public baths, and the project paused until the park board decided that such a structure would be accided that such a structure would be ac cessible if built on the Parade, at Fif-teenth street and the Paseo. When the plans for improving this play ground and athletic field were made, the public baths were included, and so it was definitely de-cided that the money raised for that purpose should go toward this park improve-ment. The style of the architecture for the grandstand and other buildings on the Parade will be Spanish, and the public baths building will follow this same line. The money at hand is not sufficient to finish the building as it is designed, so that only the pool and side walls will be built this Spring. The structure when completed, will cost approximately $40,000, but it was deemed proper by the committee that had the money in charge, to prowill be devised for completing the build

The accompanying pictures are repro-duced from the plans of the architects and show the ground floor plan and a perspec-tive elevation. These plans are discussed as follows by the architects:

The portion built at the present time will co of the pool with its dressing and toilet rooms and the offices, while the completed building will contain in addition to this. two wings, at the right and left, of the first pavilion which will provide for a small beginners' pool and private baths, with laundry below and retiring and emer-

To the men and boys who play on the Parade the bath will be a refreshing diversion, and the thous ands of bicyclists who ride up and down the boulevards of an evening will find a plunge in the pool a cheerful rest.
