Swedish American Bell Orchestra Will Appear in Concert in Salem

Salem music lovers will be favored with an unusual musical program on December fifth when the Swedish-American Bell Orchestra appears in concert at the First Congregational Church.

A matinee will be given for children in afternoon, beginning at four-fifteen o'clock. The concert for adults will be given in the evening.

The orchestra appeared in Salem two years ago having but three ringers and ninety five bells at that time. At the present time they have twice the number of ringers and two hundred and fifty bells. This set of bells is the only one in the world tuned to the chromatic scale.

The Swedish-American Bell Orchestra was organized in Seattle, Washington in 1910 by three members out of an organization of five, who originated the art of playing musical handbells in Sweden in the year 1900.

The group of musicians met with the object of keeping up bell ringing for art's sake only—as a non-professional organization. However, in 1923 a decision was made to reorganize as a first class Concert Orchestra.

A new set of bells, the largest ever manufactured was ordered by the Whitechapel Bell Foundry, London, England, makers of the famous Liberty Bell.

A handicap in using bells for concert work up to this time was the shifting of the bells for concert work to a new position for each number of music played. In order for each player to memorize the different positions of the bells, a very limited number of musical pieces could be used.

To overcome this and to be able to play an unlimited number of musical compositions a new system was worked out by Mr. Swanson, Director of this orchestra, something similar to the keyboard on the piano. Each performer having his own chromatically arranged set of bells. This new arrangement required a much larger set of bells, also a greater amount of training for each player, to familiarize himself with the new system.

This extra expense and training has truly justified itself, by building up the organization from a novelty performance to a concert orchestra.
