SCHOOL WORK TOLD

WASHINGTON ACCOMPLISHES MUCH IN FIRST YEAR

Project work was carried on in each room in Washington grade school with much success and with benefit both to pupils and teachers, according to the report of the school year submitted by the principal, Mrs. Minnie V. Duncan, to George W. Hug, city superintendent.

Projects selected by the various grades were: first grade, homemaking; second, milk; third, China and Arabia; fourth, Holland and Indians; fifth, Sir Launfal; sixth, Oregon.

Washington grade school was opened for the first time last fall, and because of this one of the biggest problems confronting the principal and teachers was to instil a school spirit, which was successfully accomplished through the classroom, playground and assembly, with a school Hallowe'en party cementing the spirit, both among scholars and teachers.

Working on the theory that the dull child needs even more play than the bright one, organized play was given much attention during the year. "Checking at the end of the year shows that more than one of our pupils has come up in his studies in proportion to his participation in the games on the playground," the report states, thus showing that the attention given to play was warranted.

Records of each child's six weeks' grade in spelling and arithmetic was kept and these will be used in strengthening the standard of the school next year.

Cooperation of the teachers and their work was splendid, states the paper.

BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe 1819-1910

"Mine eyes have seen the Glory of the coming of the Lord;
He is trampling out the vintage, where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword;
His truth is marching on.
Glory, glory, hallelujah! Glory, glory, hallelujah!
Glory, glory, hallelujah! His truth is marching on."

Every war has contributed a number of stirring songs and hymns, first made famous by the troops in the line of battle, but later taken up by the entire nation, as a means of keeping up the morals and maintaining a high patriotic feeling in the ranks. The Civil war was no exception and many of the songs which were favorites among the boys of '61 are still sung today.

Mrs. Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic" is probably the best known hymn growing out of the Civil war and just as "The Star Spangled Banner" was inspired while the author was under fire, "The Battle Hymn" was written after Mrs. Howe had witnessed a military review and had been subject to the attack of a southern raiding party.

The words were written in Washington, after Mrs. Howe's visit to a Federal camp near the capitol. With a party of friends, she had gone out some distance from the city to witness a review. Near the camp the party was surprised by a raiding party and for a few minutes the wildest kind of confusion prevailed.

When at last the party containing the spectators was turned towards Washington, it was driven very slowly, with an armed escort on either side, while the ladies sang "John Brown's Body" in defiance of their late alarm.

The ringing tune deserved noble words and inspired Mrs. Howe to wish that she might write them. She was so impressed with the song on retiring that her wish must have followed her, in her dreams. She awoke in the gray dawn of the next morning, with the verses spinning in her mind. Fearing to lose them, should she fall asleep again, she arose and in the uncertain light of the early day scribbled them off, not looking at the paper in her hand.

She returned to bed and fell asleep, unconscious that the almost illegible scrawl was the one grand hymn of the war, destined to place her among the best of American patriotic writers.

It is a strange fact that the tune, "John Brown's Body" which had so inspired her, was written by a southerner, John W. Steffe, of Richmond, Va., in 1855, for a fire company and afterwards used as a revival tune.
