FRUITS, VEGETABLES MOVING FAST

Wholesale Market at Portland Sees Activity

Trading was active on Portland's wholesale fruit and vegetable market yesterday. The warm sunny weather is probably conducive to more active trading than were the recent cool rainy days.

Retailers are increasingly dependent upon Portland Jobbers for their potato supplies, whereas they have been receiving most of their potatoes direct from growers. This latter source of supply is nearly depleted. Jobbers' sales to retailers of local Burbanks, advanced to $3.25 per cwt. today. Two carlot receipts of new Texas potatoes sold to jobbers at 6½c per lb.

Cauliflower advanced to $1.90 per crate of best Oregon stock, to retailers. Oregon flower is very scarce, and California receipts are expected again, in a few days.

A limited supply of celery from the Venice district of California, which shows freedom from seed stems, is selling at the advanced price of $7.00 per crate of 4 and 5 dozen stalks.

Although lettuce supplies are liberal (about 25 cars on track), shipments are now light, and good hard lettuce advanced to $3.75 per crate.

Asparagus movement is good. Another car of asparagus was expressed east from The Dalles yesterday. Meanwhile, a car of Kennewick asparagus was received at Portland, for chain-store distribution. Asparagus was also received from Walla Walla, and Tualatin Valley points. The market was stronger, at $1.40-1.50 per dozen bunches of No. 1 stock. No. 2 and unclassified grass moves at considerable discount.

Tomatoes are in light supply, and prices advanced to $5.00 per lug of best repacks.

Strawberries are moving better, with prices ranging from 15c to 20c per pint box.
