Under the Dome...

Occurrences and Gossip at the center of Oregon's state government

THE shirt-sleeve fashion reached the capitol yesterday, and why not with the temperature hovering above 90 degrees? The fashion of course refers to men, lack of information does not permit discussion of how the feminine sex paralleled the style in this weather, other than perhaps the wearing of furs.

Tom Handley, former state corporation commissioner, dropped into the press room yesterday before he appeared to argue a case before the supreme court. Handley is popular in Portland and elsewhere, but in Portland they thought so much of him they didn't want him to be gone 40 days during the legislature, so voted to keep him home.

Handley, among other things, is the managing director of "Grandma's Kitchen" in Portland and was here providing newspapermen with reservations to stay there as long as a week. He said the kitchen now is feeding about 600 men daily, and that the work has never let up since winter.

The Portland attorney ran seventh in the republican race for state senate out of a large field for five positions. He declared there were quite a number of upsets in the election. Andrews, former member of the house, was scheduled to lead the field for state senate but came out eighth in the race.

Looks like state officials are having a great time in Portland either resigning, withdrawing their resignations, having rumors about other resignations or having organizations demand for still more firing. The governor has probably spent a busier two days there than he has in Salem for some time.

On top of the state highway commission affair, during which Chairman Leslie Scott resigned and withdrew his resignation, came the reports that the Multnomah Anglers' association were going to demand of the governor that he fire M. F. Corrigan of the state game commission and three other members.

Conversation with the governor over the phone last night however killed that phase. He said he met with the sportsmen but dismissals were not discussed. Informal complaints of the state game commission were made to him, but he said these were in the form of constructive criticisms and would be investigated.

Hal E. Hoss, secretary of state, addressed the graduating class at the state training school for girls yesterday, the high light of which he said was the applause he received when he sat down. Leave it to Hal to get a reaction out of his audience some way. Eight girls graduated from the eighth grade at the school.

Max Gehlhar yesterday turned down an opportunity to go to a meeting in McMinnville at which it was going to be proved how a section of land alone would support 3,000 people. He said he was more interested in learning how one family could make a living on one section of land, let alone about 600 families.

Home Broadcast Station Closing Programs Today

A clever broadcast station has been devised by Miller's and has been in operation Thursday and Friday and will close with the broadcast today between 3:30 and 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The "station" has been erected in one of the large corner show windows of the store. Loud speakers bring to the sidewalk audience all the program being broadcast by the people they can see through the window. Remote control makes this result possible.

Local talent drawn from the Mickey Mouse club is presenting musical numbers, both vocal and instrumental this afternoon. Zollie Volchok is announcer for the station.

Enrollment for Summer Courses Nears 300 Mark

Registrations for the public summer school, first to sixth grades, continue to come in, Miss Carlotta Crowley, supervisor, reported yesterday. The total will be around 300 by Monday morning, when the sessions at Park and Grant schools will begin.

Children desiring to attend the summer school may enroll at either school at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning, if they wish. No tuition is charged.

AVIATION GROWING ERICKSON REPORTS

Trend Toward Total Safety Marked; Better Service Given Passengers

Commercial aviation is growing despite bad times because business men, trained in transportation work, are now gaining control of the business. Frank M. Erickson, Jr., in charge of operations of the Century Pacific company, expressed this view yesterday in discussing the changes and development which are under way in the progress aviation is making as a transportation business. Erickson is spending a fortnight at the home of his parents, Dean and Mrs. Frank M. Erickson. Before his commercial work began, Erickson was in the aviation service of the United States army.

The commercialization of aviation has seen its control pass from expert pilots who knew much of the mechanics of flying and of airplanes and little of meeting and serving the public, Erickson pointed out. As a result service nowadays has been routinized, the passenger is well taken care of from the time he buys his ticket until he lands on the well-equipped field which marks his destination.

Ground Control is Aid to Safety

"The trend now is to make aviation more and more safe by ground control," said Erickson. "By this we mean the constant checking of weather conditions, reporting of these conditions to the flyer and the virtual elimination of all flights during questionable weather. By means of radio beacons which can be utilized by the pilot to keep on his course and by accurate, dependable altitude meters the pilot can keep his direction and elevation correct at all times."

Airplane motors have reached a stage of almost complete mechanical dependability, Erickson stated. On a line with which he was connected, six million air miles were navigated by motors used in the planes without their stopping at any time when the plane was in flight.

Amelia Putnam and Lindbergh Praised

Erickson characterized Amelia Earhart Putnam as a "true-blue flyer," one who really knows her business and is not in the game to get a movie contract. He said some of the women flyers had barely been able to get their plane off the ground and down after a flight, but had used the publicity resulting from their flights to win them husbands or jobs.

For Colonel Charles Lindbergh, Erickson had nothing but praise. "He's a prince of fellows among the flyers," Erickson said. "He is talkative, friendly and thoroughly interested in his profession. I have seen him 'freeze up' under the glare of public attention and become a different man."

Delay Estimate Of Fire Damage

Accurate estimate of the loss resulting from the fire at the Thomas Kay woolen mill early yesterday morning could not be determined until it was learned whether or not dismantling of the damaged carbonizing machine would be necessary, it was announced yesterday. Mill operations will not be greatly retarded. It is expected the equipment will be in full working order by Monday.

FREEDOM

Fairly bursting with the joy of living, Pauline Starke, noted screen star, is pictured as she gave citizens of Chicago a treat as she strolled in the Windy City arrayed in her new "trousers for women." Miss Starke explained that she hated dresses, so she adopted the new outfit. Pretty nifty?

SECONDARY ROAD WORK IS STARTED

Construction of two miles of secondary road in Marion county began yesterday when John Griesenauer was sent by the county court to the North Silver Creek falls section to make ready for a crew which begins work next week. The strip to be finished this summer is two miles in length and will cost about $33,000. It is the first secondary highway work to be approved by the state for Marion county this season.

When this job is completed a small section of the Silver Falls loop will remain incompleted because of troubles which arose this spring in securing the right-of-way.

Three other road crews are now at work in the county, from 25 to 35 men working in each group. Bing McElwain is in charge of work on the Victor Point county road, Lester VanCleave is in charge of the Butteville construction and Lee Wells is working with a crew in the Ankeny Bottom district. Two dollars for eight hours is paid for laborers and $4 for a man with team.

Morals Charge Denied by Pair In Local Court

Alex Derhausehoff and Carl Barbarnoff, middle aged men, were haled into justice court here yesterday, charged with doing an act manifestly to cause minor children to become delinquent. Complaint against the men was made by fathers of three young girls, ages five, six and eight.

The men pleaded not guilty before Justice of the Peace Miller Hayden, and will be given preliminary hearing Monday at 2 p.m. They are in the county jail, with bail set at $1000 each.

PARKING ZONE FOR TOURISTS FAVORED

Establishment of a restricted downtown parking district for tourists was approved by the Lions club Thursday noon and Merrill D. Ohling was named chairman of a committee to investigate possible locations. Ohling selected Dr. W. B. Mott and R. W. Niles to assist him. One or all sides of the court house square were considered for the parking district.

Nominees for club offices, which will be filled at an election on June 23, are:

R. W. Niles and W. R. Newmyer, president; O. D. "Frosty" Olson and K. O. Brandon, first vice-president; Dr. George E. Lewis and Monroe S. Cheek, second vice-president; Barkley A. Newman and E. B. "Gene" Grabenhorst, third vice-president; and for the board of directors, four to be elected, the two receiving most votes then serving the two-year terms—Dr. Mott, Ronald E. Jones, A. W. Gardner, J. R. Humphreys, C. A. Vibbert, Pat Johnson, Harry W. Scott and Ohling.

BIDS ON SIDEWALK JOBS ARE SCANNED

Three bidders will be eligible for city sidewalk contracts to be awarded at Monday night's council meeting. Of 54 projects, David Kork of Salem was low on 29, Union Engineering company on 17 and F. L. Odom on seven, according to City Engineer Rogers. Odom and Kork tied on two, will draw for the awards.

Bids submitted by L. C. Denison and A. Bombeck were too high. A. Hunt failed to qualify as a bidder when he did not present certified checks with his offers.

The contracts stipulate that no debris from the construction shall be placed on the parking or adjoining property without consent of the owner.

The low bids ran from 8 to 16 cents a square foot.

JACK QUINN FACES GUN TOTING COUNT

Jack Quinn, former Salem man but now of Portland, was arrested here yesterday upon complaint of Cleda Quinn, who lives at 755 Ferry street. He is charged with carrying a concealed weapon, and is in the county jail in lieu of raising $1000 bond.

Quinn asked 24 hours in which to enter plea, and is attempting to raise bail.

He told officers here he had not lived with Cleda Quinn for the past three and a half years, and also declared that his present trouble was due to a man who has been in jail here on liquor charges.
