and substantiated Ruix' testimony about the meeting in Portland in which Beck refused to reveal how the council's money was spent.

John Newlands, who with Ernest Carson and Cecil Moore pleaded guilty to burning the factory, said Rosser told him recently that if Banks testified against him, he (Rosser) "ould go back to jail for another reason."

Vanderveer and Oscar Hayter, Dallas attorney assisting District Attorney Bruce Spaulding, spent two hours arguing about the seizure of the Rosser records. The jury was not present during the arguments.

"The seizure of these records violates the defendant's constitutional rights," Vanderveer said "because no man shall be compelled to be a witness against himself. You may search a person for return of contraband property, but the essence of this wrong is the invasion of privacy.

"The most dangerous thing in the world is to tell labor it hasn't any rights. These records are merc business transactions and they won't do the state any good anyway. This is walking roughshod over the constitutional rights of a labor union."

Hayter contended that officers are privileged to seize records when an arrest is made, and the court upheld him.

Other witnesses today were Cecil Moore; Capt. Clyde Warren of the state police who told of questioning Rosser at the time of his arrest; District Attorney Spaulding, who told of issuing the warrant for Rosser's arrest; Elva Pitzer, chief deputy county clerk who said she made out the warrant; District Attorney James R. Bain of Multnomah county, who instructed officers to seize the Rosser records; Capt. Vayne Gurdane of state police, who seized the records, and Lt. Sam Malehorn of state police, who denied Moore's story that he confessed because police beat him.

Exploring Party One Day Overdue

LEE'S FERRY, Ariz., July 5—(AP)—Government experts revised their opinion today of when the Colorado river expedition might reach here and discussed the possibility of an airplane search.

The Nevills party of four men and two women bent chiefly on gathering botanical specimens for the University of Michigan originally had hoped to arrive at Lee's Ferry July 4 after the hazardous 300-mile trip from Green River, Utah.

F. S. Anderson of the U.S. bureau of geological survey station, while not expressing alarm at the non-appearance of the three tiny boats, said he believed the unusually high water of the Colorado forced greater caution and probably retarded the expedition.

Insurgents Make Gain Along Coast

HENDAYE, France (At the Spanish Frontier), July 5—(AP)—Spanish insurgent forces fought their way down the Mediterranean coast toward the fortified town of Nules today, hewing a path through stubborn government lines by dint of their superiority in air force and mechanized land equipment.

Sweeping through blasted orange groves, Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Galicians opened the way by capturing the exporting town of Burriana, 20 miles north of Sagunto, while another column approached Villavieja, to the west, in an effort to force a ring around Nules.

Nules is on the Castellon-Valencia highway, 14 miles north of Sagunto, where the highway joins the one from Teruel to continue as one road to Valencia.

Expensive Imported Stars Are at Crossroads

One of the notable things about Hollywood just now is the fact that it is overflowing with a host of expensive imported stars who are at the crossroads of their careers. These featured players, brought over from Europe after making hits abroad, sometimes are sensational successes but more often find the adjustment too difficult. Annabella, Ilona Massie, Franciska Gaal, Isa Miranda and Della Lind are among the beauties from the continent now storming Hollywood. Several of these have long awaited an assignment and may soon fade from the picture, even as did Anna Sten, Russian actress who was given a million-dollar build-up but failed to click. Others, like Simone Simon, Luise Rainer and Danielle Darrieux promise to give the veterans a run for their money.

BISMARCK, N. D., July 5—(AP)—Restoration work on railway and highway grades, communication systems and damaged buildings, deluged in last night's widespread cloudbursts, was under way in several western North Dakota areas tonight.

Two of the derailed cars remained on the road bed, three were away from the track and only the engine was submerged.

Earlier all but one of the 156 passengers were taken back to Mandan where they prepared to continue their trips, re-routed over the Great Northern railway.

He took a close look. He saw not only Prospero and Persephone, but a third porcupine, very small and very young.

The director decided to call him Gulliver, because of his travels.

Marketing Labs Under Discussion At Confab Today

A meeting of Oregon agricultural interests, looking toward unitied action to obtain for the state one of four federal marketing laboratories to be set up through the country, will be held in Portland today under the direction of Solon T. White, state agricultural director.

A federal grant has set aside $4,000,000 to establish a laboratory in each of four districts into which the country will be divided. The research will be devoted to the study of the utilization of surplus agricultural crops.

"It has come to my attention," White said in letters to farm leaders, "that various cities have been making bids independently for one of these laboratories which lessens our chances as a state.

"In my opinion, Oregon has no chance to secure one of these laboratories unless there is a united effort on the part of those interested in agriculture to obtain one."

Wives Are Cheap; Now Being Bought On Installments

So said Miss Myrtle L. Wilson of Muncie, Ind., arriving here today to visit her father. She is on a vacation from the Belgian Congo where she has been a missionary the past 20 years.

She said the installment plan of buying wives had recently become popular and that some tribesmen even make a down payment on a wife before she is born—if the father and mother are sufficiently handsome and in good health.

Reorganization Is Issue, Avers FDR

The public wants a reorganization bill, he said. He predicted that one would be enacted, to put the government on a businesslike basis.

He said most representatives who voted to shelve the reorganization measure favored 90 per cent of its principles but opposed 10 per cent of its details.
