Youth Camp Improved by Many Users

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. — (UP) — Campers to Eau Claire County's youth camp are no litterbugs. They leave behind camp improvements instead of cans and dirty paper cups and plates.

Each group of campers follows a rule set up by the county board when it donated the land for the camp—start a conservation project to add to the beauty of the area. The board gave 160 acres to the non-profit Eau Claire County Youth Camp, Inc., and Tony Diehammer, Fall Creek, gave an adjoining 10 acres.

Local citizens built three 14-bed cabins and a kitchen and timber on the tract helps to pay for other expenses. Campers find an abundance of wild life, but there is no hunting. Several varieties of trees grow on the preserve and nature studies are a part of each outing. The groups have planted pines, cedars, balsam, fir and dogwood and have shored up a creek bank with a erosion stair.

Fishing is permitted in a well-stocked trout stream, and the youngsters learn while they play, under adult supervision.

Credit for the camp's founding goes to Miss Jennie Webster, county superintendent of schools, who convinced the board that rather than ruining the area, the young people might make it an asset to the county.

M., and to irrigate said lands by means of a pumping plant, the point of diversion of said pumping plant to be located 1,855 ft. N. and 4,340 ft. E. from SW corner of Sec. 18, and being within NE¼ SE¼, said Sec. 18, T. 8 S., R. 2 W., W. M.

All persons interested are notified hereby that a hearing will be held at 303 State Office Bldg., Salem, Ore., on Dec. 14, 1955, beginning at 10:00 a.m. All objections to the proposed change, if any there are, will be heard at said time and place. Science Gets Full Attention From Youths

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — (UP) — Youngsters at the seventh and eighth grade level have a much greater interest in personal problems and boy-girl relationships than is generally recognized in public school programs.

And children ask more questions about science than any other subject. Science runs two to one ahead of questions about other school subjects.

These were among the conclusions indicated by a survey conducted among 6,313 pupils in grades four through eight, 4,531 parents, 212 teachers and 169 librarians, directed by J. Harlan Schores, University of Illinois professor of education.

Boys more frequently than girls want to ask about the history of the United States, airplanes, rockets and baseball. Girls ask more often than boys about horses, dogs, vacations, boy-girl relationships, ethics, values and religion.
