Valley Footnotes

. . . by Marvin Jenkins

Douglas Burch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Burch of Sheridan, celebrated his seventh birthday with a party at his home after school Monday. A cherished present was a Parakeet, which lasted exactly three days . . . until small brother Steven opened the cage door at the same time the house door was open.

Thunder was rolling and lightning split the Yamhill county skies regularly last week in the early evening hours. The display was greatest about the time Mr. and Mrs. Art Hebert at Sheridan put to bed their four-year-old daughter Annie. Next morning at the breakfast table little Annie piped up with . . . "Daddy, some one sure took an awful lot of flash pictures last night."

Want to catch fish, big ones, in Suttle lake? Mrs. Gilbert Belknap of Jefferson has the answer. No one on the lake was taking any and the Jefferson woman had about exhausted the supply of lures in the tackle box when she rigged up a Lake Flasher and Doo-Dad. In 2½ hours she hooked and boated five big German Browns up to five pounds in size. Only fish taken on the lake that was noticed by her companions.

Warm days herald the breaking up of bee colonies. Few weeks go by without one or more reports received of bee swarms in trees, downtown, or attached to one of any number of objects. Mrs. Fred Hamilton of 585 South Elma in Four Corners reported a mass first swarmed in shrubbery in the back yard, then moved to the front of the house for two hours. Last seen they were streaking over the top of Four Corners school toward a distant orchard. This is the time of year for the new queen bee and her followers to leave their hive and seek a home of their own.

Costs For Water Low Next Year

Statesman News Service

SALEM HEIGHTS, May 21—Salem Heights Water District costs for the coming year will be well within the six per cent limitation, it was shown Tuesday, with a total tax levy of $7,500 required. The budget lists expenditures of $96,007.50. No special election is required.

In their meeting this month the water board approved purchase of a new pump, pipes and valves and other required equipment to connect the recently drilled Liberty Gardens well into the system. The board also set irrigation dates from June 1 to Sept. 30, with rates the same as last year.

Millage rate to raise the required $7,500 will not be known until present assessed valuation of the district is determined. The county assessor has announced intentions to reassess property in the district.

The district budget calls for expenditure of $12,100 for personal services, $41,600 for maintenance and operations, $36,687 for capital outlay, and $6,740 for debt servicing.

Statesman News Service

MT. ANGEL, May 19—The six-week summer course, June 24 to August 2, at Mt. Angel Women's College will have three workshops that will provide extra aids to the teaching equipment of inservice teachers.

Highlights of the 1957 Legislature

(Highlights also on Page one.)

Government Reorganization

Gov. Holmes won the development department he asked replacing the voluntary Oregon Development Commission. Administration backed measures to abolish the Board of Control and State Fair Board and to seek a lieutenant governor all died in the Senate and a bill for fulltime paid parole board was defeated.

A Senate plan for 8 general investigating committee of legislators between sessions was defeated in the House. Moves for annual legislative session, additional legislators and longer terms all failed.

A new makeup of both Agriculture and Forestry Boards was ordered. Both are appointed by the governor. Many state agencies were put under a uniform procedures act with special reference to appeals.

Higher Education

Getting one of the biggest appropriations increases, higher education system gained a 20 to 25 per cent increase for faculty salaries. Seven millions appropriated for new buildings. New law requires higher education to call bids or contract for construction work over $10,000; limit of bonds raised so more money can be raised to build self-sustained dormitories. Appropriation of $145,000 for educational television.

A $10 million salary increase granted, with details to be worked out by Civil Service Commission and Emergency Board, effective July 1. Raises to affect lowest salaried and other employes state police, appointed and elected officials.

Civil service changes include authority for commission to reinstate discharged employes after appeal hearing and permission for employe to be represented by anyone of his choosing at hearing.

State employes put under unemployment compensation coverage. Cash awards for meritorious suggestions improving state service continued.

State Institutions

Institution budget generally increased 10 to 20 per cent, but not full amount recommended in Smith budget. Five million dollar construction program approved for next two years, most of it at MacLaren, Fairview and Hillcrest.

Constitutional change to be on ballot to empower Legislature to change use of an institution located outside Marion County. This was occasioned by start of study on whether decline in tuberculosis might lead to converting a TB hospital to other use.

Penitentiary "good time" revised to allow one day off sentence for every two days on good behavior. Special interim study ordered on mental retardation and appropriation made for state-federal study of rehabilitation of mental patients.

Consumers and Miscellaneous

Relative responsibility act greatly modified so lower income people won't have to pay. Ragweed control and state meat inspection ordered. Ceiling put on auto finance charges. Three-day waiting period before marriage restored. Sixty-day wait between divorce filing and trial ordered. Auctioneers, funeral homes and hay dealers among business groups brought under state licensing and regulation.

Power, Utilities

Utilities' taxes increased under new corporations tax rate of 7 per cent. Public utilities commissioner given regulatory authority over reduction of rail passenger service and over minimum railroad rates. Ballot issue approved to suggest altering constitution so state could go into thermal or nuclear power business and so state hydroelectric power could be set up under higher bond limit and could include sale of large blocs of power direct to heavy industry.

Elections

Entire state election law overhauled; changes include voters signing only one pollbook; presidential electors chosen by state central committees; convention delegations allowed to switch support; all presidential candidates required to appear on Oregon ballot; later demand for recount allowed; later absentee voting allowed.

Highways

Planning of Columbia River bridge at Astoria authorized, with $100,000 approved for it. Coast Highway straightening in Curry County authorized via $12,600,000 bond issue. State Highway Commission allowed extra bond issue to obtain maximum amount of highway improvement under federal interstate highway system.

Various traffic safety measures approved including driver education in high schools with state paying 75 per cent of cost, financed by additional $1 on driver license fee.

Civil Rights

Trailer parks, campgrounds and public amusement places added to law prohibiting discrimination on grounds of race, religion, color or national origin. Discrimination also prohibited in public housing and apartment housing erected under public-type financing like FHA-guaranteed. State higher education prohibited from dismissing students who stay out of class one day a week because of religious beliefs.

Veterans

State veterans' loan limits increased to $13,500 for home and $30,000 for farm. State education aid to veterans extended to cover more Korean War veterans and extended through June 30, 1959. State tax levy removed next two years because veterans funds now sufficient.
