SCOUTING INVOLVES INTELLECTUAL WORK

(Editor's Note: Following is another of the series of articles written by Eugenes citizens on the value of scouting.)

By H. R. GOOLD
(Superintendent of City Schools)

The best learning is incidental to solving an interesting real problem. Scouting involves intellectual work which is strongly motivated by a practical situation in which the boy has a genuine interest. Information gained in this way and put to work as soon as it is gained is bound to be well learned and is likely to be retained over a long period of time.

Scouting is good education not only because it is interesting and practical but because it has come to fill a constantly widening gap in the experience of modern boys. School can occupy the time and attention of boys for only a part of the day and for only a part of the year. Home chores and responsibilities can likewise occupy the boy for only a part of his time. Recent changes in our manner of life have been such that the boy of today has few tasks to require his time out of school. The result has been that the hours between four o'clock in the afternoon and bed time are fraught with grave dangers for normal active boys and the entire summer vacation is likely to become a time of dangerous idleness.

Parents may endorse the Boy Scout program with the assurance that it is founded upon good educational method. Is grows out of natural boy interests; it is built upon actually doing worthy things; it provides different activities for different individual needs; its lessons are presented through practical situations and it develops personality and trains for good citizenship.

Many Schools to Have Contestants In Yo Yo Contest

Have you a little Yo Yo in your home? If not, get one right away and start practicing for the Duncan Yo Yo top contest, sponsored by the McMorran and Washburne store and the Eugene Register-Guard to determine the champion Yo Yo thrower of Lane county. This week is practice week and next week, Monday, Dec., 5, the contest proper gets under way.

Boys and girls of Lane county will enter the elimination contests to be held in the various schools, three winners being picked from each school. These winners will in turn be eliminated to determine the champion of each school, a boy champion and a girl champion. These champions will meet in the finals at the McMorran and Washburne auditorium starting on Dec. 19 for a round-robin contest to determine the county champion.

Bill Anderson, representing the Oregon News company, who with the McMorran and Washburne store and the Register-Guard are furnishing the five prizes, announced Monday that most of the city schools were to have contests and that many county schools would also enter contestants.

Following is the prize list:

Boys — First, $10; second, $5; third, $3.

Girls—First, $5; second, $2.

A demonstration of the fine art of Yo Yo throwing will be given here by the Portland city champion sometime in the near future, Mr. Anderson announced.

Santa is scheduled to arrive in Eugene Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, providing he accepts the invitation to come here, Mr. Baker said.

Ina Claire Stars In Colonial Film

Abounding with mirth-provoking situations coupled with an intriguing plot, the picture "Rebound," starring Ina Claire, Robert Ames, and Myrna Loy, will play at the Colonial theatre Monday night for the last time. The attraction is said to be one of the best efforts of the blonde star, Ina Claire.

The plot deals with a tangled marriage in which Miss Claire first marries the man she loves, on the rebound, and then successfully manages to hold him even though he is lured by that voluptious siren, Myrna Loy. The work of Miss Loy is especially good and comes in for a large amount of praise. Robert Ames, as the man who loves one girl—marries another and finally falls in love with his wife, gives one of the best performances of his career.

The entire picture is replete with bright cracks and numerous sequences and those who saw the picture Sunday praised it highly, according to Glen Godfrey, promotion manager.

Marconi Says Ultra-Short Wave Service To Be Common

ROME, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Within a few months ultra-short wave radio telephone service is likely to be in every day commercial operation, Guglielmo Marconi said today as he left for London where, before a meeting of scientists, he will make an address in which he is expected to reveal some of the secrets of his revolutionary method of transmission.

The world's first ultra-short wave wireless telephone, invented by Senator Marconi, now is operating experimentally between Vatican City and the Papal summer home at Castel Gandolfo.

Marconi has no doubt about the practical application of the system. The present apparatus is small, reasonably simple and quite cheap in comparison with long-wave commercial systems. The power consumption is only 30-watts, the equivalent of a small electric light.

The inventor believes the ultra-short wave method's cheapness offers great possibilities—in Italy for instance, it would mean that nearly every island along the coast could have inexpensive telephone communication with the main land and with the rest of the world.

The ultra-short wave telephone "line" is secret, the inventor pointed out, and no other waves can obliterate it. Nor is there atmospheric interference.

He considers the system particularly well adapted for airplanes and for military purposes.

Roughly the system consists of somewhat modified telephone instruments of normal appearance connected to combined transmitters and receivers through a central station connection. That means that the ordinary telephone user can bridge the air gap to an island or a ship and speak with other telephone users in their homes or ship passengers in their cabins.

The radio telephone line is a quasi-optical ray, with properties much like a ray of light. This ray is of high frequency, 600,000,000 cycles a second. It is sent from a transmitter, emerging from the center of parabolic receiver formed of short copper rods fixed horizontally to four parabolic copper rods in a vertical plane. That receiver is also a reflector.

The Vatican installation duplicates that used in experiments a year ago requiring that installation be in an unobstructed line of vision, which is possible by placing the sending and receiving "reflectors" on the roof of the palace at Castel Gandolfo and of the Vatican City radio station.

Since that installation Senator Marconi has been able to talk 170 miles by the ultra-short wave system. This, he said, proves it is possible to "bend" the rays over the earth's curvature, and therefore communication no longer is limited to points in a direct line of vision.

He is continuing his experiments to obtain communication over greater distances and through obstacles.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is effective, but harmless. Contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. For years it has been the reliance of thousands in all cases of colds and grippe. COL. ROBINS' RETREAT!

In this frame building, the McHan boarding house in Whittier, N. C., Col. Raymond Robins, dry leader and friend of President Hoover, lived for more than two months while a nation-wide search was conducted for him. Said to have been suffering from an unusual form of amnesia, Colonel Robins, shown in inset, had assumed the name of Reynolds Rogers, and declared that he was a mining engineer. Placed under observation in Asheville, N. C., he continued to deny his identity and failed to recognize his wife. Carl Byrd Fisher, below, 13-year-old Whittier, N. C., schoolboy, is generally credited with the discovery that "Reynolds Rogers," his Sunday school teacher, was really the missing dry leader, Col. Raymond Robins. He had accompanied "Rogers" on hikes through the mountains.
