Hookey Brings Reward

LOS ANGELES.—(U.P.)—It probably won't ever happen again, but Robert Mulnick Jr. and Norman Burns, each nine years old, are going to get a $50 war bond for playing hookey.

A few days ago the boys were walking along the railroad tracks near the Airco Corp. at Hollydale when one of them saw an open switch.

Figuring, and rightly, too, that if a train hit the open switch it would crash into the nearby war-plant, undoubtedly at a cost of lives and property, the boys immediately notified Airco. Railroad officials were called and a speeding freight train headed toward the plant, was halted.

The boys received their war bonds from Airco officials at a school assembly.

Before the war, Britain produced one-third of her food; now she produces two-thirds.
