VA Has Free College Texts

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The Veterans Administration Friday offered schools and colleges throughout the country 2,200,000 textbooks free of charge for distribution to student veterans.

VA said the books—which include 196 titles and cover a wide variety of subjects—were being made available to relieve the acute textbook shortage and to save the government money.

It explained that without the surplus books, most of which came from the Army and Navy, VA would have to buy the same books from commercial sources for ex-servicemen enrolled under the GI Bill of Rights and the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

VA estimated that if all the surplus books now on hand could be distributed to veterans, the government would save at least $5,000,000.

VA said it would pay schools and colleges a 25-cent handling charge for each book distributed to a veteran. It requested all veterans who need textbooks to apply to their school because the books cannot be sent to veterans directly.

J. M. Blackford Reopens Law Offices in Eugene

A graduate of Leland Stanford University in 1927, and a graduate of the Stanford Law School in 1930 with a doctor of laws degree, Blackford practiced law in Montana until 1941. He acted as district attorney for four years.

He practiced in Eugene from 1941 until the war, when he joined the United States Engineers and was chief of condemnation for the Pacific division. In April, 1944, he was appointed special attorney for the Department of Justice, lands division, for the northern division of California, and in July was appointed district enforcement attorney for the OPA for the district of Oregon.
