FUTURE OF WOOL UNCERTAIN.

H. C. Judd Says It is Weaker in Eastern Markets.

H. C. Judd, the head of the Hartford, Conn., wool house of H. C. Judd & Root, who is visiting his son, F. E. Judd, said today that wool is weaker in Eastern markets; that advices from there show each week a lower trend of prices; and that the future market status of wool is very uncertain.

"The country has been experiencing a remarkable range of prices in all lines of industrial products," said Mr. Judd, "and it is probably true that a reaction will set in before long. The problem is, whether this reaction wil occur this year or next. As to that, no one can make accurate prophecy.

"I judge that the prospects are for the wool grower to hold on to his wool, and that perhaps sales this season will not begin as promptly after the shearing as they did in 1899; of this, I do not say I am definitely convinced, however, but am basing my present judgment on the radical ideas of the wool grower and the fact that wool is likely not to be worth as much as he thinks it worth; and, therefore, I conclude that, with the 'buyer and seller apart,' sales will be slower in beginning."

SILENT ON PUBLIC QUESTIONS.

Ex-Senator J. H. Mitchell in the City on Legal Business.

John H. Mitchell, ex-senator from Oregon in the United States upper house, said today in an interview that he is in the city purely on court business and that he has absolutely nothing to say on public questions for publication. This the senator proved by avoiding during the interview the slightest reference to any of the issues now confronting the nation. Practiced politician and statesman that he is, he has long learned how courteously to refuse to answer any questions upon which he desires to remain silent.

"I am not in public life now," said Mr. Mitchell, "and my views, therefore, I prefer not to state for the public prints."

The ex-senator was recently asked by a prominent newspaper to write his views on the Hay-Pauncefote Nicaraguan canal treaty now pending. Even this he refused, and said he would rather refrain from publicity in any matter.

Senator Mitchell has been visited today by many local citizens who have known him for many years.

He came up this morning to appear with his law partner, M. A. Butler in a case before Judge Lowell, "Joseph Wurzer vs C. C. Barth and wife," a suit in equity for specific performance of contract, in which are allegations of fraud against Joseph Zigman during his life, and now the suit is against some of the heirs.

It came up today on demurrer to the complaint, which, after argument, the court took under advisement.

Senator Mitchell and M. A. Butler appear for the plaintiff, and Messrs. Carter & Raley for the defendants.

Senator Mitchell leaves for home either this evening via Wallula, or in the morning on the overland passenger train.

J. W. DeJong, of Chicago, who with his wife was in Pendleton last summer, was here today, and went on to Portland on the Overland. Mrs. De Jong, who was very sick and who was taken to a hospital in Salt Lake City, when her life was despaired, is now at her Chicago home and in greatly improved health. She is rapidly improving and will spend the summer on a farm in Michigan, upon the advice of her physicians.

OVERCOME BY GAS.

The Terrible Experience of a Train Crew on an Eastern Road.

Within a few minutes after freight train No. 28, Delaware and Hudson railroad, entered the long tunnel sixteen miles from Buffalo, Engineer Carmody and his fireman, W. F. Voeglin, realized that the place was full of gas from the many locomotives that had just passed through it.

The train was a heavy one. The only thing to do was to get through the tunnel as quickly as possible. Carmody threw the throttle wide open, while Voeglin stirred the fire.

The men covered their faces with wet cloths so that they could breathe. The gas grew heavier, more oppressive. Voeglin sank down unconscious. Then Carmody succumbed to the gas.

Half way back, riding on the bumpers to avoid the roof of the tunnel, was Frank Ball, the head brakeman. He too felt his senses leaving him.

Under a heavy load of steam, with the throttle wide open the train dashed along with no one to control it. Beyond the tunnel is a heavy down grade. There is only a single track. Three or four trains were on sidings and one was on the main track, waiting for No. 28 and it was running wild.

The first man of regain consciousness was Ball. He had not been so near the roof where the gas was heaviest, and the fresh air revived him. As he regained his senses he realized from the high rate of speed something was wrong. Quickly he surmised what had happened.

The train must be stopped or else there would be a terrible collision or the train must be ditched and wrecked.

Ball took his knife and, reaching down, slashed the rubber airbrake hose between the cars. This set the brakes with all their force, just as the train was starting down grade. Its speed was checked. Then Ball made his way to the engine where he shut off the steam.

He found Engineer Carmody senseless, his hand still on the throttle, and Fireman Voeglin like one dead. The brakeman revived them both and the train proceeded on its way.

THE BOER CAUSE.

Webster Davis Resigns from the State Department to Preach It.

Hon. Webster Davis of Kansas City will tomorrow tender his resignation to the president as assistant secretary of the interior. Mr. Davis decided to take this course as the result of his visit to South Africa. He has decided to deliver a public address touching the entire scope of the present war and believes that he can best do so while free from any restraint which his present position would impose upon him. When taking his departure for home from Pretoria, 2000 people gathered to take leave of him at the station. They appealed to him in tears to state their cause to the American people and Mr. Davis says his conscience would haunt him if he proved recreant to that pitiful appeal. He believes the American people are not truly informed on the situation. He will therefore avail himself of an early opportunity to relate his experience and observations at a public meeting that shall be free to all.

Catarrh of Stage Dancers.

"See that girl just going out?" asked a Spruce street physician as a trim figured young woman made her exit from his office, says the Philadelphia Record. "She came to me to be treated for stage dancers' catarrh. She's a ballet girl in a show playing in town this week. No, I can't say that the ailment is a rare one. It is common enough among stage people, but I don't suppose the general public knows much about it. You see, a stageful of dancing girls will naturally raise considerable dust and the exertion of dancing makes the girls breathe heavily, thus rendering them all the more susceptible to the germ-laden atmosphere. The particles of dust set up an inflammation, first of the nostrils or throat and then of the entire mucous membrane. The inflammation sometimes becomes chronic if instant remedies are not applied and stage dancers' catarrh results. A large percentage of ballet girls are afflicted in this way."

Site for a War Monument.

The Oregon Historical society, through Hon. L. B. Cox, of Portland, has written General James McAuliff, says the Walla Walla Statesman, asking him to aid in selecting a site for a monument to be built on the field of the four days fight near Frenchtown, December 7 to 11, 1855, between the Oregon troops under Colonel J. K. Kelly and the Cayuse and other Indians. General McAuliff was then second lieutenant of Company B Oregon mounted volunteers. Sergeant Smith, W. C. Painter, Al Lloyd and other well known citizens were in that fight.
