BOWLIN MAKES A STATEMENT.

Explains How the Alleged "Forged Deed" was Uttered in Whitely County, Ky.

J. B. Bowlin, who went free on Tuesday afternoon, with County Judge Hartman's order of the court as his safeguard against further arrest for the crime which had been made against him, requested the East Oregonian to state for him how the alleged forged deed came to be made. He said:

"I, with H. C. Ellis, of Whitely county, Kentucky, bought 100 acres of land from one Atkins and wife, paying $100 for the same. We had made the deed, when Ellis informed me that he had not the money with which to pay the one-half, his share, so we crossed out the name 'H. C. Ellis,' in the instrument, and left it transferring the land to me alone. This we did in lieu of making a mortgage for the amount he would have owed me were I to have advanced the money. When I came away from Kentucky, I deeded my one-half interest in the land without correcting the former deed, thus transferring my one-half only. I was never notified of the error, and had no idea that anyone would make a criminal charge against me, but this warrant came out here, and the officers attempted to obtain custody of me."

Moore and Kendall Vamoused the Town.

An interesting incident of the trial is related in the sheriff's return to Judge Hartman, in which he sets forth:

"That thereafter, the said J. B. Bowlin was again rearrested, and recommitted by me upon an executive warrant of the governor of this state, presented to me by the said G. C. Moore, charging the same cause of arrest that was alleged in the first warrant; that the said G. C. Moore, after the said warrant had been placed in my hands, asked to take the last said named warrant for a few moments to exhibit the same to his attorney; that I allowed him to take it, temporarily, for such purpose, upon his promise that it would be returned within a few moments, that said warrant was taken from my custody on the 23d day of July, 1900; that since the said warrant was taken, I have made due and diligent search throughout the town of Pendleton, and have made thorough inquiry, and am not able to find the said G. C. Moore, nor to procure said warrant of arrest and I am not able to produce now a copy of the warrant upon which the said J. B. Bowlin is held by me; that the petitioner has demanded of me a copy of said warrant, and has paid to me the fees for making such copy, that by reason of the facts hereinbefore stated, I am unable to furnish said copy; that I now hold the said J. B. Bowlin in my custody upon the order heretofore issued by you, and herein presented, and am holding him upon the order of said G. C. Moore, and have not any warrant of arrest or commitment now in my possession."

Bowlin is Set Free.

After due and diligent search for Moore and Kendall, and failure to find them, the court made the order as follows:

"And it is therefore now hereby ordered and adjudged that the said J. B. Bowlin be and hereby is fully and finally discharged and restored to his liberty, and that he be allowed and permitted to go hence without day and without further detention, arrest or molestation upon this charge, or upon this cause of arrest, and that he be and he hereby is afforded immunity from further arrest, detention or molestation upon the same cause of arrest or for the same charge.

"And it is further ordered that upon the presentation by the petitioner of such certified copy to any officer of this court, that such officer immediately release the petitioner if held or detained by such officer upon the same cause of arrest for this same charge, and that such officer render to the petitioner immunity from arrest and detention upon this same cause of arrest for this same charge."

HENRY PIERCE WRITES HOME.

Has a Pumping Plant that Nets $400 a Day—Many are Having a Hard Time.

W. M. Pierce has received another letter from Henry F. Pierce, at Nome City, which conveys some interesting information. He has seen there S. B. Sweeny and Harp Casey, well known here in Pendleton, and Otis Loveridge is employed in operating one of Mr. Pierce's pumping plants of Penny river. Mr. Pierce took a shipload of vegetables to Nome, and on that venture did not make a success, but on the pumping apparatus he is doing well, as his letter shows. He writes:

Nome City, July 9.—Fully 15,000 people have arrived here from the states, and they have already started to go back, 3000 having gone week before last. They are also going into the interior and down the coast, so that there are no more than 7000 or 8000 now in Nome City. There have been thirteen cases of smallpox, but only one death so far. Most of the new people have had a rather hard time, between shipwreck and shipping too much supplies in here. Pumping plants that cost $2500 outside are sold here for $500. Potatoes costing $4.25 a crate to land them here sell for $1. Saloon outfits costing $5000 bring $2000. There has been very little buying and selling of real estate, and trading in mines has hardly begun, but I look for activity later in that line.

Success Came After Disappointments

After a series of disappointments, things are coming my way. My cargo of vegetables on the "Pitclarn" was almost a total loss, but I am doing well with my pumps, one of them, at Topkok netting me now $400 a day. Another pumping plant I will have in operation in a day or two on Penny river.

I have purchased a one-fourth interest in a quartz mine, from which I expect good returns. It is assaying $33.87 on the surface, is a well defined ledge eleven feet wide, and is in my opinion the best quartz proposition in Alaska. We were offered $10,000 for our bargain this morning, but refused the offer. We have men developing the claim, and will soon know whether we are right in thinking so highly of the prospects.

Exchange is very high. It costs enormously to send out money, and in selling the gold dust here one loses 20 per cent. HENRY F. PIERCE.

Salt Lake Physician Confirms the Above.

Dr. J. C. Christie, of Salt Lake, was seen on the train by W. M. Pierce. Dr. Christie is directly from Nome City, and is emphatic in his statements that the government must take hold of the matter of the Cape Nomers being brought home, else there will be awful suffering and bad conditions there during the winter. Dr. Christie says thousands are stranded, in fact, most of those who went to that country are now without a dollar, and will be unable to secure work or strike anything that will yield a revenue. It is not a case of mere discomfort, said he, but one of actual necessity, and conditions demanding relief. He stated that exorbitant prices are charged for anything which is limited in supply, an instance being the demanding of $100 for the privilege of setting up a tent on some of the land in Nome City, for even persons desiring a place in which to live. For three miles on the beach merchandise is scattered, and there is enough liquor to supply Nome City for the next five years. People seem to have invested mostly in saloon fixtures, liquor and gambling devices, and these are now a drug on the market.

PEOPLE WHO ARE HERE FOR A DAY.

Quite a group of railroad men [illegible] uninstructed onlooker it seemed to be indicative of something remarkable scheduled to be pulled off by the railroad people. But, upon following for a moment the news trail, and running down the information to be obtained from the visitors, it was found that merely a coincidence brought them to Pendleton. There were John Hale, S. W. Aldrich, two of the most prominent railroad contractors of the Pacific coast, who have done a great deal of work for the O. R. & N. Co.; and D. W. Campbell, assistant superintendent of the O. R. & N., and Major D. E. Hall, claim agent of the O. R. & N.; and O. H. Ballinger, H. C. Bellinger and Grant Bailey, the three constituting a corps of O. R. & N. engineers who came in from Hilgard and went west; C. C. Berkeley, an engineer formerly employed on O. R. & N. work between here and Portland, and who also does contract grading for the same company; G. W. Hunt, who built the W. & C. R. R. road, which was then called the Oregon and Washington Territory Railroad. The party of distinguished railroaders, [illegible] here and [illegible] Pendleton from the points above here, and this morning scattered again in half a dozen directions. "Absolutely no news," said each one, Mr. Bellinger surveying the questioner in a manner indicating that he spoke the truth, Mr. Hale contracting his lips.

Judge Ellis today confirmed sales in these actions: E. Whitcomb vs. Mary M. Green; Plattnecker & Minger vs. Geo. W. Merrow et ux; James Chadsey vs. H. Key and A. Walker; American Freehold Land Mortgage Co. vs. G. K. Strahorn et ux. In the case of Lina H. Sturgis vs. W. Baker, demurrer was overruled and first day of term set for answer.

Bark Embleton Wrecked.

The British bark Embleton, which was sunk Sunday on the Atlantic by the Cunard liner Campania, has made many voyages to Portland. While sailing in the Portland trade about 15 years ago, when she arrived off the mouth of the Columbia in ballast, from Acapulco, over half of her crew were dead, and the remainder down with fever. The cause of the disaster was attributed to water taken aboard at Acapulco.

We have clipped

the following from the La Grande Journal:

"About three months ago the San Francisco Examiner contained the news of a damaged vessel in the harbor containing coffee and sheep dip. The two articles of commerce were found floating in the hold, and the merchants to whom they were consigned refused to accept them, not only because they were water soaked, but because the sheep dip had not had a salutary effect upon the coffee. One of our home merchants at that time predicted that Eastern Oregon would soon be overrun with cheap coffee. There is now in this section a man who offers to sell for eight cents a grade of coffee which our merchants cannot buy wholesale for twelve. There may be some connection between the two incidents."

J. W. GURDANE KICKED TO DEATH

WAS EIGHT MILES SOUTHWEST OF LA GRANDE TENDING SHEEP CAMP.

Particulars of Tragedy Lacking, Mr. Gurdane Had Been There Since Spring—Father Goes Tonight.

A telephone message was received this afternoon by Robert Potwine from La Grande, saying that J. W. Gurdane was kicked to death by a horse, at the sheep camp of Potwine & Gurdane, eight miles southwest from La Grande this afternoon. The message contained no particulars further than these given above.

Mr. Potwine at once informed the parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gurdane, who live near the Peringer & Simms racetrack east from Pendleton, of the latter news. This evening he brings his son's body home.

J. W. Gurdane was about 30 years old, was unmarried. He bought one-half of Robert Potwine's sheep last spring, and was tending camp for them and for Mr. Potwine's. He had been there on the Potwine ranch since early in the spring.

The body was to be brought to La Grande this evening, and then to Pendleton tomorrow.
