NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC TICKET

FOR PRESIDENT,

William J. Bryan.

OF NEBRASKA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

Adlai E. Stevenson.

OF ILLINOIS.

FOR PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS,

W. M. PIERCE, of Umatilla.
DELL STUART, of Multnomah.
J. WHITAKER, of Benton.
E. KRONER, of Multnomah.

SCHOLARSHIP OR MONEY GETTING?

It is admitted that Dr. Robert D. Sheppard was elected to the presidency of Northwestern university because he has the ability to secure money from wealthy men. Dr. Sheppard was financial agent of the university. Henry Wade Rogers was the president. A successor was to be chosen. A number of eminent scholars were candidates for the position. And Dr. Sheppard, his supporters making no claim of scholarship but urging only his ability to get money, was chosen.

A vital principal is involved. Has scholarship become a quality secondary in a college president? Is the university faculty merely a money collecting agency? And will not this selection operate to create a supremacy of sordid considerations over mental worth?

Certainly, the world has come upon peculiar times. Into every relationship of life enters the Almighty Dollar with its imperious character bidding all other things to move to the background. It would be as seemly for the church to make acquisitiveness the desideratum in choosing a pastor as it is for a board of university regents to select a man endowed with only financial ability for the head of a literary, scientific and classical institution of learning.

This realizes the prophecy of Abraham Lincoln who spoke in grave manner when he said he feared the future of the republic when the dollar would be placed above the man, or a sentiment of like import.

SOME MORE RAINBOW CHASING.

New York, Indiana, West Virginia and California, "et als" are doubtful states. The claim of 226 electoral college votes for McKinley is of a kind with the "rainbow chasing" of the late Senator Calvin Brice, when democratic national chairman, who went out to Iowa in a special car to capture the state for the democracy. Both the republican and democratic national committees are claiming the election as assured, when every intelligent person in the United States knows full well that it is yet anybody's race, and will be right up to the sixth of November.

THE POT AND THE KETTLE.

The state of Washington is between the devil and the deep sea. On the one side is the miserable trash produced by fake educators such as Harr Wagner, of California; on the other, the American Book Company's trust and its nefarious schemes. The pot calls the kettle black, and the kettle intimates that the pot is not of virgin cleanliness. Both are correct; eminently so. Of the alternatives offered, the people of that state have no good choice between stupidity and corruption. It is difficult to say which is the worse. Probably either of them is worse than the other.

The Portland Oregonian remarks that the democrats had a winning issue in holding up William McKinley to the gaze of the country. That is exactly what they are doing, Mr. Oregonian, and it's proving to be as you say—a winning issue.

"The letter of John Barrett on imperialism, published in another column, ought to bury that bugaboo beyond revival. Thinking men know there is nothing in it," remarks the Salem Statesman. Mirabile dictu!

Mark Hanna says there are no trusts! It is probably a proposition of "spot cash" with the republican chairman, who trusts no corporation when "standing them up" for campaign contributions.

Some of his warmest supporters believe that W. J. Bryan commits an error in paying so much heed to Mark Hanna. When Mr. Bryan made only a few light references to the Ohio politician, he maintained an advantage. But, of late, he appears to think the American people have some confidence in the foolish allegations of Hanna. By assuming the defensive against the republican national chairman, Mr. Bryan weakness himself throughout the country.

A COLUMN OF OLD JUNK.

There are some fine traces of lingering sentiment which cling to races of people, like vines upon a crumbling wall. These are so strong, that the jostling commercialism of the age cannot dislodge them, nor distance nor time efface their charm. One of them has recently come to the notice of the writer, in a stirring manner.

In a northern city, a grand musical concert was being given. It was a sort of musical medley, representing, not in language nor pictures, but simply in appropriate music, the different scenes from fireside to battlefield. The lover's good bye had been said so sweetly that we all felt its meaning. The gallant boy had left the old home, and you could hear the farewell of the mother chiming in the martial air which thrilled his spirits.

He had joined his regiment beneath the fluttering flags and starry banners. You had heard the measured pulsebeats of the assembled army marching away in the distance. Then, arriving at the battlefield, the fife and drum had roused them into a fighting mood. The "Star Spangled Banner," "Hail Columbia," "Rally Round the Flag" and all the other stirring airs had been sung. We heard the assembly call, the pickets quickening shots, and then, near us, the splendid band played "Just Before the Battle Mother" so sweetly, so sadly, that every man in the audience had a moistened eye and quivering lip.

A silence followed. It was just before the opening of the cannonade. You could hear the whispering breezes among the flags. Not a sound of the coming fray broke the stillness of the moment. Then in the distance, faintly, feebly, there sounded the soft muttering of a drum. It was the mimic Southern army coming to the battle. Only the regular boom of its drum was audible. It was an age to the listeners. Nearer it came, louder and more distinct were its measured heart throbs. Then music could be heard. Faint at first, but stirring and grand. Then as the tread of the coming army reached our ears, its band opened in full and its rattling drums followed in chorus. Not more than two bars of its air had been played, when fully one-half of that 2000 listeners raised to their feet, threw hats and fans and handkerchiefs into the air and shouted. They cheered and shouted and shook hands and cheered again. For five minutes it was a babel of shouting. Then they sat down and listened while the music went on. The band of that mimic Southern army was playing "Dixie." It was such a strong appeal to that old clinging sentiment of the Southerners in the audience, that it only found utterance in these cheers.

There is only one appropriate place for the use of the word "can't." That is when you are asked to do wrong. In all other cases it is a coward's answer.

Sister Lease can find a grain of consolation in the recent egg-throwing contest at the (almost) crowned head of Governor Roosevelt. A poor lone woman, in a strange land, fighting in the cause of the oppressed while her husband was patiently learning to "bach," was a very sacred object for the ruffians to throw eggs at. But the audacity of that crowd has been eclipsed in the irreverence of the one which singled out the foremost "Rough Rider" of the land, the brave hero who lead the charge on San Juan, as a target for more eggs. It is very uncertain what the pathway of the great may be strewn with.

Why do people in a democratic government go into delirium over "queens" and "Duxes" in all their jubilees? We all go into a frenzy over the crowning program, and yet we would spurn the thought, if suggested to us, in reality. We profess to believe in popular sovereignty, in personal rights and freedom to the uttermost, and yet involuntarily, we give vent to our lingering love for kings and queens. It is another vine clinging to the walls of memory; another altar at which we all worship, it may be not in letter, but in spirit. It is hero-worship; nothing more. The same instinct causes the flock of geese to follow the leading gander; it is an unseen, yet powerful force which makes some men leaders, and others followers. As long as the planets go round the sun, men will follow, and worship somebody. Democratic government will never lessen, nor freedom utterly destroy, this olden inclination of the human heart.

It is getting to be old fashioned to talk about the narrowing opportunity and decreasing liberty of the masses, but it will never be so entirely old fashioned that it will cease to be talked of. It is true, a thousand untold gateways to undreamed-of fortunes lie open before the poor; but this is not the issue. One man in one thousand men finds this open gateway. Fortunes and fame are not the things hoped for by the toiling throng. If these come to some few, well and good; but, what is wanted, and sought after by these other nine hundred and ninety-nine men, is a condition of life in which families may be reared in decency, respect, morality and enlightenment. A remuneration for labor, equal to the worth of that labor; a return of capital equal to the time, effort and skill expended in its service. It is true that the liberty of the masses is being narrowed. Any condition which raises the price of rent, fuel, clothing and provisions, without an equal raise in income, narrows the opportunity of the laborer, because it requires all his effort for the sustenance of life, and leaves none for culture, for luxury or for pleasure. It causes the children of this man to grow up ignorant, and it crowds the comforts of life away from his fireside, drives him like a machine, and in every sense of the word narrows his opportunity for making the best out of life, which is certainly the right of all. That this heritage of the poor be rescued, and restored to them, that ignorance and crime be banished from civilized society, and that justice and happiness and contentment be our reigning deities, we have instituted the free government among men, and hope that its holy mission will not be unfulfilled.

THE HORSE BREEDER.

The long-headed farmer who kept right on breeding good horses when his neighbors ceased in disgust a few years ago, is now beginning to reap the reward of his foresight, says the Rural Spirit. At no time during the past seven or eight years has there been such a demand in the middle western states for good horses as at the present time. When horses became so cheap most farmers ceased breeding, the use of their breeding stock and the feed being of more value to them than the colts they would raise. The nautral consequences are that but few good young horses can now be found on the market. Iowa and Illinois, at one time two of the largest horse breeding states in the union, and where but a few years ago there were raised some of the finest blooded draft and all purpose horses in the world, is now importing from Europe for breeding purposes.

Many of the horse ranches of Oregon, which furnished the middle states with the greater portion of their cheap horses have been diverted to the raising of cattle and sheep, the horses having been killed or permitted to die for want of care. Thus it transpires that when there is a demand for good young horses there are but few to be found and they bring a fair price.

House Work

Seems easy to a man, but there is a great deal of lifting and reaching to do; a great many trips up and down stairs to make in the course of day's house work. It's hard where a woman is well. For a woman suffering with some form of "female trouble" it is daily torment. There are thousands of such women struggling along, day by day, in increasing misery. There are other thousands who have found a complete cure of their disease in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It stops debilitating drains, cures irregularity, heals inflammation and ulceration, nourishes the nerves, and gives vitality and vigor. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. It contains no opium, cocaine nor other narcotic.

"For a number of months I suffered with female trouble," writes Miss Agnes McGoerne, of 122 Bant St., Washington, D. C. "I tried various remedies, but none seemed to do me any permanent good. The doctors said it was the worst case of internal trouble they ever had. I decided to write to you for help. I received a very encouraging reply, and commenced treatment at once. I had not used your 'Favorite Prescription' a week before I began to feel better, and, as I continued, my health gradually improved. It is improving every day."

ORDINANCE.

An ordinance providing for the improvement of Jackson, Raley, Logan, Lincoln, Jefferson, Madison, Bush, Bluff, Railroad, Tutuilla and Court streets.

The people of the city of Pendleton do ordain as follows:

Section 1. That that portion of Jackson street between the north end of the Railroad bridge and Blaine street, and that portion of Raley street between Logan street and Railroad street, and that portion of Logan street between Jackson street and Raley street, and that portion of Lincoln street between Jackson street and Raley street, and that portion of Jefferson, Madison and Bush streets between Jackson and Washington streets, and that portion of Bluff street between Thornton and Aura streets, and that portion of Railroad street between Aura street and the O. R. & N. railroad crossing west, and that portion of Tutuilla street between Garden and Railroad streets, and all of Main street, and that portion of Court street between Jackson and Railroad streets, the Eastern boundary of the City, be and the same are hereby ordered improved by being graveled and graded in accordance with the profiles of said streets now on file in the office of the City Surveyor; provided that the grading of said portions of said streets shall be dispensed of gravel to the depth of six inches.

Section 2. The gravel used for the improvement of said streets shall be as small as can be conveniently secured, and no gravel shall be used on said streets which, in the opinion of the Street Commissioner, will be a hindrance to travel, or that will hereafter render necessary its raking up and hauling off.

Section 3. That in case the improvement of said streets is not made by the owners of the property adjacent to where such improvement is ordered, by the 1st day of November, the street commissioner shall advertise and let the same by contract to the lowest bidder, and collect the cost thereof, together with all expenses, from the owners of the property adjoining and abutting the street where such improvement is ordered made, and in the event of non-payment the recorder shall enter the same against said property in the record of liens provided by ordinance No. [illegible], and collect the same as therein provided.

Section 4. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage by the Common Council and approval by the Mayor.

Passed the Common Council this 2d day of October, 1900.

F. W. VINCENT, Recorder.

Attest: J. E. BEAM, Recorder.
