Lee Moorehouse, the amateur photographer of Pendleton, whose Indian pictures were so generally admired by visitors to The Dalles carnival, spent yesterday in the city, says the Dalles Times-Mountaineer.

Baker City's fine water system is being pushed to completion. If weather favors as it did last fall, by December 31 the city mains will be filled with mountain water, as pure as that of Bull Run or any other mountain stream. A gravity system will take the place of the present pumping plant.

The commandery will meet on Thursday evening at Masonic Temple. The commandery has not yet been instituted, and the members are arranging for its institution and chartering in the near future, when Justice Frank Moore, of the supreme court, will be here. This notice is by the order of the eminent commander.

Art Minor this week delivered 200 head of 2-year-old steers to Vincent & Wattenberger, who will winter them on Butter Creek, says the Heppner Times. That is getting to be great feeding headquarters, and there is now about 3000 head of catte there already to be wintered. It is the great hay region of Morrow county, and one man alone, Oscar Thompson, this year cut 800 tons of fine alfalfa.

The Heppner Times registers a great, big kick against The Dalles for the treatment received by the Heppner football team while here on the 13th, saying they were not given a drink or cigar by The Dalles while here. It is hardly likely the Times voices the sentiment of the ball players, for they appeared while here to be perfectly satisfied with their treatment, says the Times-Mountaineer.

"Pendleton is to have an organization. Mr. Stone met the board of directors, which was organized recently, and together they canvassed the situation. The Y. M. C. A. organization will have probably 100 charter members, but the grave difficulty in the way of getting established is the fact that there are no proper quarters available, and they may have to build," said H. W. Stone to the Portland Telegram.

PEOPLE HERE FOR A DAY.

Robert Smith, of the Grande Ronde Lumber Co., of Perry, Or., came up from Portland this morning and will remain here until tomorrow morning, when he goes on to Perry. Mr. Smith and his partners in the Grande Ronde Co. have before them a big year in lumber sawing. They will, by the end of February, have twenty million feet of logs skidded, which will be five million more than was sawed at their mills during the season just closed, when fifteen million feet were sawed. The lumber business, says Mr. Smith promises better things to come even than have been seen in times past. Demand keeps ahead of supply and is all the time increasing.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. Jake Born and daughter, Miss Lottie, of Ukiah, are in the city the guests of Mrs. R. Martin.

Mrs. Alice M. Sheridan and daughters, Misses Gertrude, Maude and Leo, left Monday evening for New York city, where they will spend the winter.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL.

Candidates for Places on the Team Constantly Practicing.

Roy Conklin, manager of the athletics of the Pendleton high school, has a good list of candidates for positions on the football team. The boys are working faithfully and every day sees them in better condition than the day previous.

The Baker City high school team will be here on Thanksgiving day, for a game, and the Weston normal school and the La Grande high school teams are arranging to come. Return games will probably be played with each team.

The candidates here are: Harley Rothrock, Fred Hartman, Tom Milarkey, Arnold Sheuerman, Byron Hawk, Earl Boyle, Will Hession, Will Wyrick, Jim Wyrick, Omer Stevens, Clyde Gard, Dell McCarthy, Carl Christian, Robert Cronin, Roy Salisbury, Roy Blakley, Glen Ironspiger, Arthur Renn, Lawrence Wells, Will Lyons, Earl Peterson, Andrew Kidd, Leonard Larone.

NEW YORK MARKET.

Reported by I. L. Ray & Co., Chicago Board of Trade and New York Stock Exchange Brokers.

Oct. 23.—The wheat market was very weak today, and touched the lowest point since June.

Liverpool closed 5—11 1-8, a penny under yesterday. New York opened ½c lower, 78 3-8 and under free liquidation by tired holders declined to 77¼, closing 77½. Primary receipts were 902 cars compared with 1052 cars last year, same date. Stocks steady. Money, 3 per cent.

Close yesterday, 78 7-8.
Open today, 78 3-8.
Range today, 77¼ to 78 3-8.
Close today, 77½.

Grand Master of Odd Fellows.

Jas. W. Welch, grand master of Oregon I. O. O. F., will visit the Odd Fellows of Pendleton officially, on Wednesday evening, October 24. There will be a joint meeting of Eureka and Integrity lodges. The grand master will arrive on the 2 o'clock train, from Milton, Wednesday, where he expects to visit this evening. He will visit Weston, Thursday; Athena, Friday; Helix, Saturday. He will then go east of the Blue mountains for two weeks, before returning home to Astoria.

AN ALLEGED CONFESSION.

JOE CRAIG SAYS GEORGE TOLD HIM ALL.

Question of Jurisdiction Raised by Defense.

The sensation of the murder trial of Columbia George was sprung when Joe Craig, an interpreter, was placed on the witness stand, and swore that Columbia George confessed to the poisoning of Annie Edna. Craig's story was:

On August 28, four days after the killing, Craig talked with Columbia George about the killing.

Columbia George was on the inside of the jail proper, while Craig stood in the sheriff's office. They talked through the barred door. The story as related by Columbia George at that time and told in court by Joe Craig is substantially as follows:

Was Toy Toy's Fault.

It's not my fault at all. It was Toy-Toy who made the whole plan. I have been told to deny the charge, but want to tell it all. On Friday morning, August 24, Toy-Toy and I were drinking back of Damain's saloon in Pendleton. I bought a pint of whisky and we drank it. "Toy-Toy said, 'Let's kill that old woman. I want to kill her. I have two bits—let's go to the drug store after the poison.' Toy-Toy insisted. We went to the Pioneer drug store. I hesitated for a while. Toy-Toy stayed outside. He couldn't talk English. He staid outside as he said to watch that no one saw me buying poison. I told the clerk I wanted strychnine to kill some coyotes that had been eating watermelons. Got 25 cents' worth in a little bottle. Toy-Toy came in and said, 'let's get a pint of alcohol. There's no one around.' Toy-Toy says, 'let's go up river.' We were on horseback and went from Pendleton beyond the lines of the reservation. We went down to the river above the big bridge and got off our horses.

Here They Fixed the Poison.

Toy-Toy took a half pint empty bottle and filled it half full of water. Toy-toy put the poison in, shook it up and put in the alcohol. We waited on the road awhile. Toy-Toy, said, 'let's go down to meet her,' thinking she was in Pendleton. We started, met Ty-ko-na, Bill Lavack and others, stopped and traded vests with Ty-ko-na. He wanted to drink out of the little flask in my vest pocket and I told him the bottle was not for him. Toy-Toy told him the same. Toy-Toy kept telling me to give that to the old woman (meaning Annie Edna). I went on out and gave it to her and she drank part of its contents."

On Cross Examination.

Joe Craig, on cross examination, said that he talked in Cayuse Indian, while Columbia George used the Umatilla Indian language, during the conversation or confession. No one was near. Columbia George kept watching on the inside to see that Toy-Toy did not come to hear what they were talking about.

Columbia George claimed that the reason Toy-Toy wanted to kill Annie Edna was because she had killed his father, Telayne, during the previous summer by malpractice, she being an Indian doctor, or "Medicine woman."

Dr. Cole's Tests.

Coroner W. G. Cole told what he had seen at the inquest August 25, and of tests he had made on Sunday and Monday, August 26 and 27. He had taken possession of the bottle of poison found by Jay McElroy on August 25 and had kept it in his possession until delivery to Judge Fitz Gerald at preliminary hearing. He had tested it and found the contents of the bottle to be alcohol, water and strychnine. He gave a teaspoonful of the mixture to a kitten a month old and it had died within five minutes.

B. F. McElroy's Story.

B. F. McElroy testified that he had seen Columbia George, the defendant, talking to Annie Edna at her cabin on his leased lands 15 or 20 minutes before her death. Columbia George rode off north through the lane. He himself went to his home, then back to the place where his cook house was, close to Annie Edna's cabin. She in the meantime had gone across a little gully to the tent in which a woman named Mrs. Lamar lived. His boy, Jay McElroy, yelled to him to hurry, that Annie Edna was dying. She was in convulsions before he got there, so they said.

Annie Wanted Grease.

A. P. Woodard was at the tent shortly after Annie Edna came running over from her cabin. She had three convulsions after he saw her, and died after the third one. She said to Ruth McElroy repeatedly, "me die, me die." She wanted grease, saying that Columbia George had given her poison. Witness gave her warm water and mustard.

Witness was asked if he knew anything of the Indian belief regarding the hereafter and future punishments. Deceased had claimed to him that she was a doctor. Toy-Toy claimed that she had doctored one of his children and it had died.

As Mr. Woodard left the witness stand, after having been excused by both sides, he said something about a custom that would allow the surviving members of the family to gill Annie Edna if she had wrongfully allowed a patient to die.

Colonel Parsons called him back and had him explain his remarks, and further that he had been around Indians for 48 years. He knew nothing about the Indian beliefs in future rewards and punishments, or the white man's either, except his own.

Jay McElroy, 14 years old, son of B. F. McElroy, was present just before the death of Annie Edna on August 24; found the bottle of poison about 9 o'clock the morning after.

Ty-ko-na was a witness, with Joe Craig as interpreter. The principal interest in his testimony was what he said in regard to meeting Columbia George and Toy-Toy on the afternoon of August 24 as he was going toward the reservation and they were coming toward Pendleton. They all stopped in the road and witness and Columbia George traded vests. In George's vest was a half pint flask. He went to take a drink from it. George said not to—it was for an old woman (Annie Edna). Columbia George then went back toward Annie Edna's house.

Not Deep Interest Shown.

This murder case, Columbia George on trial for his life, does not attract as many people to the court room as an ordinary dog fight on the main street of a country village. Not a woman, with the exception of the wife of accused, was present this forenoon, and the proceedings were interesting only to the legal, medical and journalistic professions.

At the opening Dr. W. G. Cole was on the stand under cross-examination by Colonel Parsons, for the defense. Tetanic convulsions, toxines, toxic ptomaines, bacteria, bacilli, were discussed and extracts read from several medical works. The doctor reiterated his testimony of the previous day, that not a great deal is known concerning ptomaines, that kind of poison having practically been known only since the advent of the science of bacteriology. It was the effort of defendant's counsel to show that the poisoning of Annie Edna might have been caused by decayed canned meat or fish. In answer to a question, however, Dr. Cole stated that in his opinion it was caused by poisoning from strychnine.

Joe Craig was recalled and on cross-examination said Columbia George lives on the Umatilla Indian reservation, three miles east from Pendleton.

Ula Slate, of Koeppen's pharmacy, was called, and testified that he sold 30 grains of strychnine to Columbia George on Friday, August 24; that Columbia George had told him that he wanted to use it to kill coyotes.

The prosecution rested.

QUESTION OF JURISDICTION.

Defense Claims That This Case is One for Federal Courts.

It was now the time for action by the defense, and it was equal to the occasion. R. J. Slater, of counsel, arose and deliberately addressed the court as follows:

"Counsel for the defense moves the court at this time to dismiss this action for the reason that the evidence discloses the fact that the crime that is charged, if it is a crime, was committed upon the Umatilla Indian reservation in Umatilla county, state of Oregon, by the defendant, who is an Indian living upon said reservation, against an Indian who was also living upon said reservation, and each being a member of the consolidated tribes of Umatilla, Walla Walla and Cayuse Indians; said reservation being a United States Indian reservation and under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States."

That was sprung at 9:45, and for two hours and fifteen minutes the motion was argued. Mr. Slater occupied the greater part of the time, while Mr. Hailey also offered remarks and cited authorities. Colonel Parsons wished to be heard on the motion, so an adjournment was taken to 1:30 p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Motion of Defense, Claiming Lack of Jurisdiction, Was Overruled

Colonel William Parsons addressed the court for nearly 45 minutes in support of the motion of defense, and strongly and ably quoted the laws and acts in reference to the subject.

Judge Ellis concluded a brief opinion with the declaration that "this court has jurisdiction in this case," and overruled the motion.

Colonel Parsons took an exception to the ruling, and the exception was allowed.

The question raised upon the motion to dismiss made by the defense, was whether or not the state courts have jurisdiction to try an Indian allottee for the crime of murder committed against another Indian allottee upon allotted lands, within an Indian reservation.

A recess of 10 minutes was thereupon taken to allow counsel for defense to confer privately with their client through the medium of an interpreter.

Defense was proceeding with the taking of tenstimony at 3:30 this afternoon.

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTION.

"A Stranger in New York," Hoyt's Best Comedy

The Frazer offers tonight Hoyt's "A Stranger in New York," the best from his pen.

Somehow there is an unnamable strength in the Hoyt trade mark, which appeals to the most fashionable as well as the masses. This fact is very forcibly demonstrated by the enormous demand for seats for the return engagement.

"A Stranger in New York" is reported as being this popular author's greatest work, and as a money-maker it has eclipsed all records, even surpassing the record of his famous "A Trip to Chinatown."

This successful comedy comes to us this time in almost an entirely new garb. Every particle of the music, as well as the specialties, are new; and, best of all, the scenery and stage accessories are said to be the most extravagant ever seen on a comedy stage.

Sunday's Shoot.

There was a large crowd in attendance at the special shoot of the Pendleton Sportsman's Association, Sunday. Notwithstanding the wind was blowing a gale, the trap as usual worked to perfection. The following scores were made:
