SOME REFLECTIONS—THE NORTHWEST PIONEERS.

This week marks the ending of the academic year of most of the colleges and normal schools of Oregon and Washington. The newspapers are full of accounts of the commencement exercises, the graduations, the class days and the various entertainments. It is noticeable, to those who observe closely and who are concerned for the progress of higher institutions of learning, that each year brings the colleges and normal schools to a higher level.

The progress is eminently pleasing to those who look with concern upon these institutions and give them the place of importance they deserve in the development of the west. The higher culture of the great west is to be gauged by the advancement made by the schools, common and higher. Any section of recent settlement must pass through a process of evolution such as now is in evidence in the west.

During the earlier years, the task of providing the necessities of life absorbed the most of the time of the brave and hardy men and women who conquered a wilderness and paved an easier path for the generations that have followed them. These left a rich heritage of character and a record of splendid accomplishments. Intrepid, untiring, farseeing, patriotic, they laid deep and enduring the foundations of a social order that now begins to rise into a superstructure that has the embelishments possible only when the beginnings have been made by those who possessed high qualities and deserve the undying fame now given to the pioneers of the northwest.

Not many of those pioneers lived to enjoy the easier life now possible in the west. Theirs was one of hardship, of unremitting toil, of anxious thought for an immediate future. They had no surplus of money and therefore no surplus of time. The needs of the hour were paramount. But, because they worked so faithfully, because they served to patriotically, because they did the harder tasks of the pioneer, the present generation can take thought unto itself for the embellishments that are now possible.

And the advancement of the schools is the chief means of attaining that more desirable status, as it is also the best evidence that that status is being attained. The progress of the schools is a criterion by which to judge the improvement. The meeting in Portland of the northwest pioneers makes these remarks pertinent and timely. There gathered the men and women who came here from the far east, or were born of parents who had previously come. Those men and women broke prairies, cleared forests, prospected mountains, navigated waters, began agriculture and husbandry, formed settlements and built cities.

They often faced danger. Without exception, they endured hardness as good soldiers of an advance army the main body of which is now here and is enjoying comparative ease and comfort, with leisure to look to the matters of higher education. It was good brain, that came westward in that pioneer army of scouts. It was good courage, that was displayed. Industry and of frugality and largeness of heart and all the component elements of greatness were characteristic of the couriers, as a class, that crossed a continent, eschewed the ease of the east and chose to take upon itself the work of which so great results have been reached.

Nations are taught to honor the forefathers and foremothers that laid the foundations of a republic or a kingdom. That is patriotism. And the nation in which the young do not exhibit a healthy spirit of patriotism is in a bad way. For the same reason, sectional patriotism is right and essential. We, the younger generation of the northwest, will get in a bad way when we fail to do honor to the men and women who came before us.

The Roman idea of piety was veneration for one's parents and ancestors. The Chinese worship their ancestors. We may well attain the Roman standard of piety, even though we do not go to the length of deifying our forebears. No man will be a good Christian or a patriot who has not honor for the gray hairs of those who went before him.

INCIPIENCY OF OREGON'S CAMPAIGN.

Portland, June 15.—Politics is commencing to attract attention, although the election is a year distant. The reason assigned for this premature agitation among the supposed aspirant is charged to the direct primary law. In the coming state election, the democrats propose to make a fight with a hope of winning. Among republicans, it is generally supposed that the candidates for the nomination for governor are T. T. Geer, Phil Metschan and W. M. Cake. In the democratic camp there is considerable timber available, in fact there is enough interest aroused and prospect of success so that the nomination for governor is already being disputed.

George E. Chamberlain, district attorney, has informed personal friends that he will accept the nomination, although his present term of office does not expire until 1904. Chamberlain is thought to be unusually strong in the country, as he made a notable race for attorney-general several years ago and won.

Against Chamberlain is State Senator Robert Inman, who is a holdover senator. His strength is supposed to lie among the laboring men. Inman was once within an ace of defeating the late George F. Frank for mayor of Portland, and there is still an impression that Inman was cuchered out of the victory.

E. H. Robinson, formerly a gold-democrat, is considered a likely aspirant, but it is said he will not enter the convention for the place if there is any show for Chamberlain. Inman may be sidetracked in favor of Chamberlain and given the nomination for mayor, for he stands a better show of being elected mayor than governor.

It is reported that if Geer is renominated, ex-Governor Pennoyer would like to enter the race against him. All of those mentioned are residents of Portland. There is a sentiment in favor of Eastern Oregon, however, and a few people are booming State Senator William Smith, of Baker, for governor.

This city is becoming a profitable field for swindlers who operate the "check game." During the past three years there have been check men working here almost every month and many arrests were made, yet the police have but a single conviction to their credit. Worthless checks are being passed on local merchants with astonishing frequency and the swindlers are escaping punishment. Every leading business house, almost without exception, has suffered, yet the business men themselves, condone the bunko game by always standing ready to refuse to prosecute providing the swindler will compromise.

When a check man is arrested by the police he has more liberty than any other class of prisoners. The police are simply being used as a club over the confidence operator. A swindler cashes several large bogus checks, and, if he is caught, all he has to do to regain freedom and to prevent his being sent to the penitentiary is to offer to refund the money. This scheme is becoming more and more common, because the men who make a practice of living by their wits have come to understand that they can turn the check trick here without risk. The method of passing one of the bogus checks is simple. The swindler writes out a blank check and then goes to some store, where he buys a few dollars worth of goods and then presents his check. The check is considerably larger than the bill of goods, so the swindler receives the difference in cash.

So sure are the police now that a check worker will not be taken into court that they are not over particular with keeping him guarded. When under arrest, the swindler is a prisoner in name only, and the chances are that there is not even a charge booked against him. After making the police station his headquarters for a few days, the check man raises enough money to satisfy his victims and is released, only to go to some near by town and repeat the same game.

ANENT THE PRESS DELEGATION.

Salem Journal: A lot of people calling themselves the Press Association of Oregon have recently left in a special car for the Buffalo exposition. There are a few newspaper workers among them and several ministers of the gospel, but nine-tenths of the crowd are hangers-on and parasites of the newspaper business. Railroad managers are as yet unable to cut off the barnacle element that exists in every walk of life, and this is written merely to rid the public of the idea that the workers of the profession or any considerable number of them have left their desks or have any connection with the Oregon Press Association so-called. The Salem Press Club has one member who is at Buffalo entirely on his own account, at his own expense. The newspapers that are booming the dead-beat organization and helping run up a big deficit against the state treasury ought to be in better business.

Albany Democrat: Some of the editors attending the Buffalo exposition wouldn't know a stick from a broomhandle. In fact, they never saw the inside of a print shop except when they entered to sponge a newspaper.

Salem Statesman: The real newspaper men and women of Oregon are very busy just now, while the Journalists are enjoying the pleasures of a junketing trip to Buffalo to attend the National Editorial Association. That is one of the troubles with Editorial Associations.

LA GRANDE LAND OFFICE.

The Portland Telegram of June 10 has an aritcle relating to the La Grande land office, saying: "Thus far the greatest clamor apparent is for a berth in the land office at La Grande. Among the most formidable aspirants for the office of register is Asa B. Thompson of Echo, who represented Umatilla and Morrow counties in the lower house of the last session of the legislature. Mr. Thompson is making a strong pull for the place, having been in Portland several times of late in consultation with Senators Mitchell and Simon. But Mr. Thompson is not the only man who would relieve Register Bartlett of the responsibilities of the La Grande land office. M. A. Butler or Harry Hendryx, of Baker City, would take the office if it came handy, as would also George Shinn, formerly of Baker City, but at present a deputy of Collector Dunne in the internal revenue department. These aspirants of federal favor, it is understood, are not so particular whether they get the office of register or receiver of the La Grande land office. Either would be acceptable, and neither would be turned down."

"Nerve Waste."

One of the most helpful books on nerve weakness ever issued is that entitled "Nerve Waste," by Dr. Sawyer of San Francisco, now in its fifth thousand. This work of an experienced and reputable physician is in agreeable contrast to the vast sum of false teaching which prevails on this interesting subject. It abounds in carefully considered and practical advice, and has the two great merits of wisdom and sincerity.

It is endorsed by both the religious and secular press. The Chicago Advance says: "A perusal of the book and the application of its principles will put health, hope and happiness into thousands of lives that are now suffering through nervous imparement."

The book is $1.00 by mail postpaid.

One of the most interesting chapters—chapter xx, on Nervines and Nerve Tonics—has been printed separately as a sample chapter, and will be sent to any address for stamp by the publishers, THE PACIFIC PUBLISHING CO., Box 2658, San Francisco.
