ALL PERIODS, ALL RANKS ALIKE TO DAME FASHION; ALL HAVE TEA TOGETHER

BY MARGARET RHOE
(Written for the United Press)

The dear dead ladies of the past
Seem resurrected now at last
Parading down the Avenue;
Or at the restaurants on view.
You see Marie de Medici
Or Queen of Sheba and maybe
Fair Beatrice by Dante sung
And Paul's Virginia pure among
That dashing dame La Pompadour.
And divers worldly beauties more
Of course it's just the way they're dressed;
From every age we've picked the best

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—It's a bit of a shock just at first to glimpse a Mediaval maid and a mid-Victorian charmer having tea together at the Ritz or a Roumanian peasant girl strolling down Fifth Avenue arm in arm with a Pagan princess. But you're bound soon to get used to these little descrepencies in rank and periods.

As a bridger of years and a leveller of rank Fashion has no equal. Such a conglomeration of fashions from all climes, ranks and ages make up the latest' model modes for 1829 that "you pays your money and you takes your choice" according to your fancy and your figure or perhaps their figure when it comes to a decision.

Sihlouette Modes at War

It would seem that there is to be a fight to a finish whether the slim straight lines of the past few years are to win out of the round bodiced fouffant hip creations that are struggling so hard to make over our silhouettes. The straight narrow lines just stubbornly refuse to be ousted and for day wear the plain chise frocks are quite as ubiquitouse as the panniered bodiced ones. For evening although the airy insouciance of the hoop skirt is the newest note still the swathing straight hung lines reminiscient of the Italian renaissance glorifier in gold and silver brocade cling to fashion and the form divine.

About the only point of unanimity between these warring factions of what's to be what in the modish outline is embroidery. You find it always and all way on every smart gown, suit, wrap or blouse. Russian and Roumanian peasant embroideries in brilliant hued wools, gold and silver from the Orient—it matters not a whit what kind of color just so there is some of it somewhere about you. Bead embroideries are a bit passe except on the evening gowns and then all over solid masses of irridescent globules make up the entire gown rather than a mere garnishment of beaded motifs.

Entire gowns of glistening black or gold pailletes'sheat the wear so fraugally that you shudder to think of the consequences should a spangle or two drop off.

Creations Bouffant

Lovely pompadour silk and changeable taffetas in pale shades turn you into a veritable Dolly Varden with puffed panniers and flowers garlanded underskirt or a demure Victorian damsel with lace trimmed fichu, pointed boned bodice and raveled fuchings. The hoop skirt models are developed mostly in lace garlanded with ribbons, fur or flowers over undersips of metal cloth in gleaming gold or silver. In gold or silver lace these bouffant creations are exquisite and in the black cobwebs of Chantilly she is a pretty poor little spider that can't tangle many hearts this season.

There are so many ravishingly feminine accessories to make up your costume these days too. The quaint little clusters of false curls that the milliners are sewing in our broad brimmed hats to bob seductively over each ear which are already adrip with large and ornate pendant errings turn you indeed into an old time "hairoine." Colorful and barbaris necklaces of beads and scarves of lace and gauze and fur add to the shoulders' burden and odd and original rings and bracelets, lace mitts, bags and beads, embroidery of metallic brocade furnish an arm and handful and startling new belts and girdles of metal embroidery or any old odds and ends lets everything go to waist. With such a headful and so much on hand you wonder how the fair frail feminine can hope to have any headroom left for politics or a free finger left to stick in the ballot box, but I'll say she does.

War Veteran Is Dead.

M. M. Kelliher, a Spokane pioneer, is dead . He came to the city in 1884 and conducted a mercantile business. He was a veteran of the civil war, and wounded at the battle of Bull Run.
