The addition to the Pendleton mausoleum has progressed to the point where panels are being plastered. Marble will not arrive for three weeks, however, as it was feared that cold weather would intervene and prevent its placing earlier than the month of February.

Charities Duplication Matter Up.

While Pendleton is considering a meeting on Saturday to coordinate the work of the various charitable organizations in Pendleton and Umatilla county ,another force is at work in the state to bring about a similar organization of the various rescue homes and charitable institutions in Portland. The movement has begun with the Astoria Chamber of Commerce. In a letter from Secretary C. I. Barr to the Pendleton Commercial Association today the mtter of the various "homes" in the metropolis is declared in need of attention. A campaign is suggested that will eliminate duplication of effort and place these homes upon a taxation basis for support, preferably under state direction. The burden of maintaining these institutions falls upon the same few subscribers at present, Barr says and business men of Astoria, in their chamber meetings, have declared that they are tiring of the present system. Barr seeks to get sentiment from other commercial bodies in Oregon with a view to bringing this matter to the attention of the state legislature for action.

The meetings ended Sunday night with a full attendance. Rev. Mayfield, of Pendleton, assisted.

In a few moments he produced the money with which to pay the fine.

"But I don't understand what the lawyers are saying," protested the juryman.

"Neither does anybody else," said Judge Waste. "Sit down. You're a model juryman."—San Francisco Chronicle.

"MAN OVERBOARD" IN THE NAVY

B-r-r-r-r! Pretty cold to be about to plunge in for a cooling swim, isn't it? But don't be too sympathetic for there men are with the fleet at Guantanamo, Cuba, where the water is about 75 degrees now. And the dog is usually the first in—he doesn't wait until the bugle finishes its "Commence Firing" notes but on the first blast over he goes and enjoys it just as much as the bluejacket.
