EUGENE RADIATORS STILL SING PRAISES OF CHERRIAN HOSTS

The Radiators who went Salem last week to attend the Cherrian banquet are talking about it yet. In fact, some of their wives accuse them of talking of it in their sleep, and not a few are said to be worried lest they may have said too much.

The Cherrian banquet, according to all accounts, was one of the most enjoyable events ever held in Western Oregon, and representatives of "booster" organizations from many points were present. The Royal Rosarians of Portland were out in force, and the Prunarians of Vancouver, Wash., also sent a large delegation.

Unfortunately, the train schedules were not made to fit the Radiators' plans and Uncle Sam declined to furnish them a sleeper; therefore there was a wild rush to catch the train for Eugene just as the fun was really getting started. Five Eugene heroes, however, stayed it out and got back to Eugene just as the milkman was getting well started on his rounds.

The delegation carried a poet laureate, and he chronicles the great event in verse thus:

The Radiators went to Salem
To attend the Cherrian ball;
The Cherrians were hundreds strong;
The Radiators sure looked small.

Four Radiators went out walking
And saw a policeman, big and tall.
Fisk said: "Look out, he will get us."
But the cop began to stall.

"You're safe this time," he told them,
"Don't worry, boys," he said;
"For I am just the night cop.
The dog catcher's in bed."

And next they met a crowd of boys
Who stopped to take a look.
"Oh, see! A new show troupe's in town—
"Somebody get the hook."

The four of them went to the armory
And the dinner dance was fine;
Lee Travis sought to cut them out
And started in the shine.

But Walter Griffin stopped him,
And then Earl Fonda butted in.
But Dr. Graves he stole the miss—
These doctors always win.

The banquet lasted two full hours.
And when the music began to play
The old folks who came from Eugene
Quite soon were on their way.

Yoran grabbed his dicer hat
And shouted: "The banquet sure was fine;
Come Radiators, or we'll miss it,
The 10 o'clock is right on time."

This took our red hot Radiators.
All but five, who went to stay.
They danced till 2 o'clock in the morning.
And had things all just their own way.

Republican Women Urge Naturalization Law Change

Owing to the necessitated absence of Mrs. C. P. Bishop, present encumbent of the president's office of the Marion County Women's Republican club, the elections, which were to have been held at the regular meeting Monday afternoon, were postponed until the next gathering. The meeting day was also changed to the second and fourth Thursday of every month.

The Japanese question was the topic of discussion and resolutions were passed favoring a change in the federal constitution, so that children born in the United States of Japanese, Chinese or Hindu parentage be deprived of citizenship the same as their parents. It was moved and seconded to present a copy of the resolution to the legislature Tuesday.

The next meeting of the club will be held Thursday, January 22 in the auditorium of the Commercial club. The topic of study will be announced later.

Delegates To Pan-American Congress Begin To Assemble

Mexico City, Monday, Jan. 12.—Leon Salinas, under secretary of industry and commerce, left tonight for the United States to attend the Pan-American financial congress to be held in Washington. He will lay before that meeting exhaustive data relative to the petroleum industry in Mexico, it is said.

Washington, Jan. 13.—Delegations representing Brazil, Chile, Guatemalia and Honduras had arrived in Washington today preparatory to the opening next Monday of the second Pan-American financial congress. Representatives of other Latin-American countries are expected within a few days.
