Church Service.—Last Sunday Rev. E. Walker, Pastor of the Congregational church at this place, delivered the last sermon of his pastorship, which was an excellent discourse. Preceding his sermon, he repeated his former declaration that he would now cease his pastorship of that church. Prof. E. D. Curtis of Vancouver made some closing remarks pertinent to the occasion which were very appropriate and gracefully and eloquently said. Thus has one of our earliest pioneer preachers of Oregon retired from active labor. Earnest and faithful has he been in preaching the good tidings to men, and now he can look back over his life and feel that it has been spent in the service of mankind in the noblest vocation on earth. Mr. Walker came to this Coast in '37 or '38 and labored with Dr. Whitman for the conversion of the Indians in Eastern Oregon. After the Whitman massacre he moved his family to this Valley and has devoted his energies up to this time in preaching to this community. For a large part of the time he has ministered to the Congregational Church here. At his own pleasure he withdraws from his field of labor feeling that his strength is failing. Such men deserve praise for their efforts for the enlightenment of our frontier settlements.

Church.—Mrs. Dunlway has been out here for a week begging subscriptions for her paper and she comes into a dozen offices for the purpose. She solicited some to subscribe on account of friendship for her sister Mrs. C. But her checklist per omnes was with Illinois. She went to our Postmaster and told her that it was through her influence with Hoyt that she got the Postoffice and that therefore she should support the Mac Nechtlich. This seems just a little cool when it is known that Mrs. D. could not know that Mrs. McCrosky had been appointed until the fact was published in the Portland papers. Because Mr. Good Hill sent in his nomination unknown to the people here and added the name at a date of Mrs. McCrosky, at the same time Mr. K. Porter wrote Hill to Senator Mitchell asking that Mrs. McC. be appointed and Mitchell in his letter at the time that it takes and then to go East and then come back, let us raise accepting Mr. Good Hill's resignation and appoint in the present incumbent r. m. Verily fanticks that are dark and ways that are vain, etc.

Fair Ground.—We offer to sell the west half of the Block east from all the improvements for $1,200 in cash or on short time. It will be sold by the first of August next, so prepare to bid. Place to select one with a little or for at least a day.

Hand Mills for sale.—Corn and wheat burrow, wash machine and other articles of household furniture, books a hundred books, more or less.

Now is the time for any one wishing to purchase a beautiful residence lot in Forest Grove.

M. B. Brown will move his family to Amity Friday. He and route is from St. Joe to Lafayette City. Stockie what he gets per month for carrying a daily mail on this route. Mr. Brown will make money out of his contract. He has been at Salem for it already. The distance is sixty miles and the roads good. Mr. Brown is the applicant of the contract proposes to return to the Grove to take up his abode.

The first will open in Forest Grove and Amity regular stages for Monday. I have not received but one letter and that was for a lady of this place who therefore has the honor of receiving the first letter that came over the route.

News.—The Hillsboro in respect of the Granger's celebration at Hillsboro on the Fourth praises very highly Joe. I dare "caution," which it says he made on that occasion. This will be news to Mr. Hill and those who did hear his cents.

Prof. E. D. Curtis and Mrs. Curtis who are now visiting their parents at this place will take charge of the Puyallup Academy at Ainsworth. They have been connected with the Seminary at Vancouver, W. T., one to two years.

J. B. Morrison of the Bee Hive Store is the man to deal with in Forest Grove. He has on prices for his goods and sells as low as any other merchant in town. For proof of what we assert call and see for yourselves.

Fire.—Fire broke out in the chimney near the furnace in Lyon Johnson's planing mills yesterday and the smoke and flames ran out at the roof. Loom gave the alarm but soon put out the fire himself.

Mr. Lowe of this place has just returned from the South American coasts of beautiful varieties from Wm. Gunther's Gardener in San Francisco and Wood's museum in Portland.

Miss Jessie Cornell will start for California Saturday next. She goes to take care of Curtis' infant son whose mother died last spring, to a sister who lives there.

When you want a nicely dressed or "rustic" or other style of gate, post turned, or anything in the line of house building go to Logan Johnson of Forest Grove.

The weather is now quite warm and dry, and is good for the hay in swath which is up and for the maturing of grain.

Good judges estimate the number of people that attended the celebration at Hillsboro at 3,500.

It is reported that a child was killed at Hillsboro on the Fourth by a horse runaying upon it.

We are under obligations to L. C. Walker for vehicle all when the mazzard and the underhoit on us.

L. C. Walker, Surveyor, has Field Notes of the Legal subdivision surveys.

Good cordwood delivered for sale in this town at $2.50 per cord.

Mrs. A. L. Jonsson is convalescing from a severe attack of bronchitis.

Joseph McMillen and wife have gone down to Clatsop county on a visit.

Prof. Lyman and son Horace returned yesterday from San Francisco.

LIFE.

Vision of life! with sombre mien,
I think thou stand'st before me now:
A shadow lurks deep in thine eyes,
And falls athwart my brow.

Where'er thy step falls slow and still
The dew lies warm like tears,
And where thy fluttering garments trail,
Upon the air a cloud appears.

Within thy flowing tresses free,
The laurels and the cypress twine.
Thou brinest the cypress unto me,
Oh, Life, let laurels too be mine!

THE FOURTH AT HILLSBORO.

K. W. Y. Z. WRITES FOR THE INDEPENDENT.

The morning of the 4th was foggy but glorious old Sol seemed determined to do justice to the occasion, so by the time K. W. Y. Z. had his best shirt on the atmosphere was clear and the sun was shining bright as anyone could wish. The day was ushered in by the ringing of bells, the firing of cannon and the crowing of roosters, which seemed to be in great profusion in this section of country. The day was ushered in, of the singing of larks, the lowing of cows, and the paternal warning that breakfast was nearly ready. Well to hurry up matters about half past eight, the sons being dispatched, the horses harnessed, the mare saddled, the mother of mankind, etc., etc., we proceeded to Hillsboro to get a drink. But all the buckets were gone, so it became evident that we would have to stick on our immortal 2 bits to the contractor. Proceeded to Smith's crossing where we found a large concourse of people already awaiting the train. Time dragged, we became one of the number. We sat down in a fence corner to await the train; we sat down with the intention of remaining there until the train came. We had no fault to find with the seat when we sat down, but somehow it began to grow hard. And fully (?) one hour before the train came we were tired out with that position. Just then to our utter relief we saw Joe Watt and some of the ladies pitching quoits with half dollars. We went, we watched, we felt sad when the game was over. What could we do? Time blistering sun to kill time. We even thought of giving Mr. Smith's cherry trees a visit, but we were afraid the cherries were all gone. Some one hears the whistle, we suppose at St. Joe. All made pell mell for the crossing! We did the same. You know the train might come at any moment. After waiting there some four hours, as it seemed, the train came. Then leaving it, we grabbed the carriage and were soon in the cars. Mr. H. was right under foot. Mr. W. watched all of him and Jake and clear in the lead. Soon the forward motion of our progress came to a dead halt, an hour and two quarters could distinguish Sake in the dense. Stops to the right of us, stops to the left of us, we packed till, I swear, so tight I he centre we took our position, with Jake behind in the rear. Some one said, Good old Jake! Mr. W. said, Go ahead Jake! Mr. H. said Go ahead Jake! We said Go ahead Jake, and clear back in the front part of the baggage car we heard the cry, Go ahead Jake. We will not say that Jake didn't go ahead, but we will say that that he stood in one place, all the way from Smith's to Hillsboro. We thought we had a decent crowd as long as we was compelled, but when we got to Hillsboro we found that it was a crowd in the broken. I tell you there was a crowd there and I tell you there were there with their fan with it eagles and joy was in many on the faces of every one. We did the march in the procession, and we tell that there was a thousand or two who followed our example. But that didn't break up the procession as there it was bigger than ever. Got around to the Court House. Organized, etc., etc., and the music was all by the Cornetic Band. Mr. Jolly, the Chairman of the day, commenced the exercises with a short and appropriate prayer. Mr. Upton read the Declaration of Independence in a clear and distinct manner. Then Mr. T. F. Campbell the Orator of the Day was introduced. Mr. Campbell at first seemed considerably embarrassed and began as if he hardly knew how to talk on the subject which he had chosen. We wondered very much at this, but have since learned that he had intended that his address was to be to Grangers exclusively and that it was not suited to the crowd before him. However in a few minutes his embarrassment passed away and he spoke with Demosthenic fluency and elegance. His address was not of the spread eagle class to which they are usually treated, but it was a good, practical, common sense talk to the people. He explained the nature, objects and working of the Granges and their duties to their country. His address was listened to with marked attention. After the address the crowd dispersed for recreation, refreshments, etc., and the rest of the day until five o'clock was put in dancing, feasting, playing croquet and strolling around the park. About five the train whistled and there was a rush to the platform. As the cars stopped there was a general rush for seats, and the nearest and strongest was the one who got one. K. W. Y. Z. being among the number who got one felt supremely happy. In a few minutes Smith's crossing was announced and we dismounted feeling that we had celebrated the 4th of July, 1871.

A DESPERATE ENCOUNTER.

A Hand-to-Hand Fight with a Panther —A Brave Hunter.

We have been put in possession of the details of a desperate encounter between a hunter and a panther, near the headwaters of the Tualatin River, the other day, by Mr. A. J. Darpre, of Washington County.

The panther, it seems, has been a great source of annoyance and trouble to the farmers of that locality for a month or two past, killing young cattle, sheep and pigs and committing other depredations, and on Wednesday last a party came together for the purpose of hunting the animal down. There were four of the party—Mr. Darpre, Geo. Walker, George Boyce and Will Weed—and the hunt began early. The first tracks of the beast were found on the morning of the day in question. After searching some time each other hand soon within sight of a single track of their game, it was suggested by one of their number that the hounds separate and take different rivers from that which they had traversed homewards. Weed was sent down a canyon, and the others followed the hills on each side.

Weed had not proceeded more than a mile and which he was hurrying over the dense underbrush impeding his progress, his attention was arrested by a low, savage growl to the right and above him. Glancing in the direction from whence the sound came, into the overhanging branches of a tall fir, behold! the object of his tiresome search crouched down upon limb, eyeing him in no pleasant manner, and growling all the while. Without a moment's hesitation the hunter raised his rifle and, taking deliberate aim, fired. Unfortunately, as his finger touched the trigger the panther moved, and the bullet struck him about the foreshoulder, inflicting a wound which served only to more terribly enrage the now infuriated beast. With a howl he sprang from the limb and bounded towards Weed, and the hunter, seeing his danger, and not liking the prospect of a rough and tumble fight with the brute, held to his rifle, and commenced running around the trunk of a large tree near by, the panther following close upon his heels and doing his utmost to overtake him. This the race continued for a minute or two, the hunter in the meantime endeavoring to reload his rifle. This he succeeded event which in a moment, alas, he discover that in running he had dropped the box containing the caps to his gun, and this instrument, as a weapon, was altogether useless.

At this juncture, the hunter began to wear a decidedly crippled. The speed he was traveling around he tires it was impossible for Weed to hold out much longer, and the panther's rage and exertions appeared to increase with every bound he made. It was painfully evident that the hunter must sooner or later succumb to the panther, and he inwardly resolved that he would be the last.

Suddenly he fell by the hand to reload a cartridge. The blow was repeated, and the panther fell, hugging the hunter to the ground with him. Over and over they rolled; first the panther was uppermost, and then the hunter—both howling and screaming, and both struggling with the determination and desperation that is only witnessed or experienced when the alternatives are victory or death. Weed's only hope was in a large knife he wore in his belt, and the panther lay so close to him it was very difficult to reach. Finally, however, with his eyes filled with blood from scratches of the animal and its claws sunk deep into his left shoulder, he grasped the hilt of the knife and plunged the blade into the panting sides of the beast several times. The blows told with rapid effect, and the panther began to show signs of weakening and a desire to abandon the contest. But the hunter's blood was up now, and after suffering as he had, he was fully determined to bag his game at all hazards. The Panther loosened its grasp upon him and turned toward the timber, reeling and bleeding at every step; but, before he had gone very far the hunter reached him, and plunged the knife deep down behind the shoulder-blade, and the animal turned over on its side dead. After the battle Weed laid himself upon the ground completely exhausted. As soon as he was sufficiently rested, he proceeded to bind up his wounds, and staggered in the direction of home. Strange his friends happily come to his assistance, which is assured nine feet from tip to tip, the two started down the canyon, and arrived at their destination just as the sun was going down in the west. Weed's wounds were painful but not serious, and at last accounts he was improving rapidly. and after skinning the panther, —Evening News.

Mr. Joseph Southwell informs the Mounta neer that he raised 5,787 lbs. of wool from a band of 800 sheep (an average of a little over seven pounds per head,) which he sold for 25 cents a pound, realizing the snug little little sum of $1,465 75. he has also an increase of 500 lambs, which he values at $2 per head; this makes $1,000 more. Total increase from 800 sheep one year, over $2,400.

The Legislature failed to elect Governor and Senator. Some think the result will be a special session. Democratic papers and exchanges in Oregon are silent on the subject. The popular feeling is very bitter against the Legislature for its extravagance in the expenditure of money. This popular feeling is not confined to any one party, it is with the liberal sections, and they are offering great bargains, though that is generally understood by all who know the men. Leave your money at home and we assure you that satisfaction will be given in every game.
