

WASHINGTON HOPS

Growers Are Still Holding About 4000 Bales.

TRICKERY HURTS THE TRADE

Western Washington Vines Are Thrifty, but Backward-Increase of Acreage Is Five Per Cent-Hoplice Due About June 10.

TACOMA, Wash., May 20.—(Special)—

The coming crop of hops in Western Washington is at present rather backward. A trip through the large Puget Sound Valley yards shows that the vines at the tops of the short poles and the trine trellises all strong and ready to receive their coming leads.

The present acreage in Western Washington is 309, and in Eastern Washington, which means Yakima, the acreage is 800. This is an increase of 5 per cent over last year, about evenly distributed in both districts.

The yards owned and worked by Harman, Klaber & Co., which firm now has the famous Meeker yards, comprise acres, located at Puyallup, Tacoma and Sumner. This firm has abundant resources and seems to be using them freely in introducing modern methods into the growing of hops.

Mr. Klaber made a special trip to England last Fall, and closely studied how they do things there. When asked today about general conditions, Mr. Klaber said to an Oregonian correspondent:

"Western Washington hopvines are not so far advanced as they should be, on account of the present cold weather. All vines generally are backward. Although they look healthy, if during the past week, we had had warm, forcing weather, the vines would have been further advanced than ever before at this date. Many growers fertilized their yards last winter. On our yards we applied barnyard manure, bone-and-blood fertilizer and bone meal on different tracts, and are now watching results. The fertilized spots are warming up to the occasion, and look better. At present a forecast of the outlook would be purely probabilistic, and two weeks of warm weather would make the vines start to change conditions very materially. The 25 acres that we added to our yards last year will come into bearing this year.

"Cultivation of the yards this Spring has been most excellent, for which last year's prices were the incentive. There are the usual number of what appear to be missing hills, but many of them will come later and catch up when the vines get to growing a foot a day. Many of the missing hills are re-implanted, and some are slow at starting. In the few spots where we consider our soil weak we allow three vines to go up each pole, but on the average of the yard only one vine to a pole. It is doubtful if the three-vine pole yields more hops than the one-vine pole. Some parts of our yards yielded a ton of dried hops to the acre, and we confidently look forward to all our ground yielding a ton to the acre this year.
