THE COLUMBIAN.

U. S. OFFICIAL PAPER.

When It Is Ten O'clock?

We may think this question easily answered by saying, "It is ten o'clock just sixty minutes after nine, and just sixty minutes before eleven." Not so thought an eminent judge of New York State. He was very strict—and justly so—in requiring jurors to be in their seats in court when the clock struck ten, and the panel was called. A tardy juryman was invariably reproved and fined.

Once, a few days after having rebuked and fined a delinquent juryman, something occured to prevent the judge from being in his seat at the appointed hour. Court and jury were obliged to wait for his appearance until long after ten o'clock.

When he finally arrived, the jurymen who had been fined for tardiness a few days before, with more boldness than discretion, rose and asked for the remittance of the fine he had paid "Why," he said, "we all see that circumstances may occur which unavoidably detain even the presiding officer until after ten o'clock."

But the judge rose with great dignity and said, "I wish this jury, and this juryman in particular, to understand that it is never ten o'clock till the judge is on the bench!" The unlucky juror was not convinced, but he certainly was obliged to submit to the amazing assumption of the irritated judge.

It used to be an old custom on shipboard for one of the officers to call out "Seven o'clock!" when that hour arrived, and another to respond, "All right! make it so!" which meant assembling the crew aft for their daily grog.

Cost of Scotch Shooting Grounds.

An "intending offerer" must decide first on the rent he proposes to pay; next what kinds of game he wants to shoot; whether he desires to fish, and, if so, salmon or trout, or both; then as to the accommodation he will require at the lodge. Rents vary from £190 up to £5,000. Small places will afford plenty of amusement, and, even if the bag is not large, there are the pleasures and benefits of entire change of air, scene and mode of life. But nothing can be got under £400 if plenty of sport is desired; and to the rental must be added the wages of keepers and collies. If ith deer and grouse are necessary, a rental of at least £1,600 will have to be paid. Black Mound Forest, in Argyleshire, which is leased by Lord Dudley from Lord Breadalbane, extends over 80,000 acres and affords every description of shooting, and excellent loch fishing. It is offered at £2,000. Balmacaan, Lord Seafield's forest, in Inverness-shire, has been let to Sir Henry Allsopp (who rented Black Mount last season) at £3,000. It extends over 28,000 acres. Moy (Sir John Ramsden's), on the shore of Loch Buncan, is let at £400, with 5,000 acres of moor, last year's bag being about 180 brace of grouse; but the lodge here is exceptionally good, and the fishing is excellent. Lord Middleton's forest of Applecross, in Ross-shire, which extends over 60,000 acres, is let at £2,500. The six great sporting counties of Scotland contain over 8,000,000 acres of shooting ground. The shooting rentals of Inverness and Perth are each larger than was paid for the whole country at the commencement of the present century. Sir John Ramsden receives nearly £2,000 for his Badenoch shooting; renting the great forest of Ardverikie in his own hands. Sir G. Macpherson-Grant receives £5,800 pounds for three forests in the same district, and Lord Seafield's rental exceeds £12,000. The principal shootings of Forfar belong to Lords Dalhousie and Airlie; the sporting rental of the former exceeds £6,000, and he keeps a large extent of ground in his own hands. Perhaps the finest "all-around" sport in the country is obtained in the Island of Arran which belongs to the Duke of Hamilton, and is a vast game preserve. Shootings are generally let for four months from the middle of July, but sport on the grouse moors ceases, as a rule, early in September, and, although the season lasts till Dec. 10, it is rarely that a lodge is inhabited after the beginning of October.

The prospects of the grouse harvest seem to be tolerably favorable in most districts, and almost everywhere there are excellent accounts of the deer. The old calculation that each brace of grouse costs a tenant a sovereign, is perhaps now rather below the mark, and the reckoning of £50 for each stag is certainly not too high; but of the 1,700 shootings which are to be found in Scotland, few will be unoccupied next week.
