FELL BEFORE SPANISH GUNS

One of Our Cruisers Was Destroyed at Cienfugas.

THE CRUISER MARBLEHEAD LOST.

It Was Destroyed in the Battle Before Cienfugos.

KEY WEST, May 14.—A full report of the engagement before Cienfugos last Wednesday has been received. In the engagement one sailor was killed and six wounded. The cruiser Marblehead was destroyed in the engagement, but all on board were saved.

The Marblehead was an unarmored cruiser of 2,089 tons displacement and had a speed of 18.44 knots. It was built in 1890 at a cost of $674,000. The Marblehead's main battery consisted of nine 5 inch rifles, and its secondary battery was six 6 pound and two 1-pound rapid firing guns

CARDENA IS IN ASHES.

Was Burned by the Gunboat Wilmington.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—A full report of the bombardment of Cardena last Wednesday, has been received by the navy department. The gunboat Wilmington continued to shell the city after the other vessels had left, and after the batteries had been silenced, burned the city.

Yesterday inspection boats found 115 dead Spanish soldiers in the masked batteries, and 300 dead Spaniards were found in the city. The dead will be buried by American seamen, and the wounded, of which there is a large number, are being cared for by the Americans.

THE COLORADO VOLUNTEERS.

They Are Given a Farewell Reception at Denver.

DENVER, Colo., May 14.—The Colorado volunteers are breaking camp and getting in readiness to move to San Francisco tonight. They will go by special train this evening, and will have right of way over all other trains.

This city is giving a grand reception to the troops. Patriotic speeches are being made and an ovation is given the soldiers wherever they pass through the streets. The regiment is enthusiastic over the prospects of being sent to the front. They will be assigned to duty on the Philippine Islands.

NAVY DEPARTMENT IS LIBERAL.

Men Will be Discharged at Expiration of the War.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—An order has been issued from the navy department that all men enlisting now will be given an option of being discharged at the close of the war if they so desire. This is intended to encourage men to go into the service during the time of an emergency, feeling that they will be free to return to their homes when the war shall close.

THREE HUNERED SPANIARDS KILLED.

This is the Official Report of the Manilla Battle.

LONDON, May 14.—The official report given out from Madrid of the battle at Manilla in which Dewey annihilated the Spanish fleet, is that 300 Spanish sailors were killed and 600 wounded. This is believed to be authentic, and is considered a fair estimate of the Spanish loss.

DEWEY GOT ANOTHER PRIZE.

He Captured the Spanish Gunboat Callao.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—A cable received from Dewey yesterday states that the American fleet captured the Spanish gunboat Callao on the 12th without any resistance. He also states that Manila has not yet surrendered, the Spanish authorities still holding the city and fortifications.

THE EXPEDITION A FAILURE.

Gussie Returns to Key West Without Making a Landing.

KEY WEST, May 16.—The transport Gussie has returned to this port with the supplies intended for the Cuban insurgents, after having made two unsuccessful attempts to land the supplies on Cuban soil. The Spaniards made a strong resistance at each point and drove the Americans back. It was expected the Cubans would keep the Spanish forces back while a landing was being made, but they failed to furnish any assistance. This was probably owing to the failure to establish communication with the insurgents.

SOLDIERS FOR PHILIPPINE EXPEDITION.

Thirteen Thousand Five Hundred Soldiers Will Be Sent.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The navy department has determined to assign an army of 13,500 to duty in the Philippines to support Admiral Dewey in retaining possession of the islands. Should this number be insufficient, an additional force will be sent there later.

At present there are 15,000 Spanish regulars and 10,000 volunteers on the islands, with which the American army will be compelled to combat in order to retain supremacy. It is presumed the Philippine insurgents will co-operate with the Americans as soon as they are convinced that Spanish rule is not to predominate.

ALL ARE HEAVY ARMORED CRUISERS.

Some of the Best Spanish Boats Suddenly Appear.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—A surprise was caused in official circles today by the receipt of dispatches announcing that three armored cruisers that were supposed to be at Cadiz, suddenly making their appearance at Martinique. The Spaniards had eluded the watch that was kept upon their movements and quietly moved their ships across unobserved.

The three vessels are the armored cruisers Catilina, Princess de Austria and Cardinal Cisnros. The Leonoria is also reported coaling at Kingston, Jamaica. Knowing where these vessels are, the department has issued orders to the commanders of the different fleets to intercept them at once.

GOOD BYE TO THE SOLDIER BOYS.

They Were Given a Splendid Farewell at Portland.

PORTLAND, May 16.—The White city at Irvington Park (Camp McKinley) is deserted today. The streets are dusty and show the footprints of the soldiers, but the tramp of soldiers there is no longer heard. The rows of white tents have disappeared, and all in all Irvington Park presents today a forlorn appearance.

The last companies of the First regiment left by last night's train for San Francisco, but before leaving were given a grand farewell reception. As they marched throgh the streets they were cheered from every quarter, and made to feel they were appreciated by Portland's patriotic citizens for the sacrifice they are making for the country's defense.

PEACEFUL BLOCKADE DOES NOT SUFFICE

A More Vigorous Policy Will Be Pursued at Orice.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The war debartment has abandoned the idea of a peaceful blockade of Cuban ports, and will adopt a more vigorous policy of prosecuting the war on the Atlantic ocean. The Spanish forces will be hunted down and made to fight or flee from the Caribbean sea.

Secretary Long has cabled Schely, Clark and Sampson to chase down the Spanish fleet on the Caribbean sea and destroy it immediately. Their orders are to use no delay in finding the enemy's fleet, and to give battle wherever found.

HURRYING AFTER THE ENEMY.

Two American Vessels Sent to Intercept the Spaniards.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The St. Paul and Yale are hurrying across the Caribbean sea to intercept the Spanish fleet. If they meet the Spaniards there will be a decisive engagement.

CAPTURING ELEPHANTS.

Sport That the Maharajah Occasionally Indulges In.

The enterprise is organized for the amusement of the maharajah, and takes place only once in about four years, else the forest would be denuded of big game. A small army, consisting of about 5,000 men and perhaps three elephants and a few horses, take part in the hunt, says Chambers' Journal, and they carry tents and provisions, just as if a campaign against a powerful enemy were in progress. When the pad marks of the elephant are found he is steadily tracked down, and as soon as he is found a trained fighter of his own species is urged against him.

As a rule, he steadily retreats upon sight of his pursuers, and their object is to press him so as to tire him out. He then stands at bay, and the tug of war commences. The opposing animals butt at one another with their heads down, and should one show his flanks, he is quickly brought to earth. When finally conquered, the wild elephant is pressed by his pursuers toward water, of which he is so much in need after his exertions that his hind legs can be shackled as he drinks. He is then kept attached by ropes to other elephants until he gradually becomes accustomed to bondage, and in a few months he is completely under control. The sport is a bloodless one, and the elephants when captured are most kindly treated.

AN AMUSING HAT STORY.

It Resulted in Heating the Heads Instead of Cooling.

Necessity is the mother of invention, and among those which this hot weather has called into existence chapeaux a glace are perhaps the most ingenious and extraordinary. This new article is neither more nor less than a top hat fitted with an inner apartment for the reception of a fair-sized lump of ice, which freshens the layer of air about the head, and is yet so thoroughly waterproof that you may wear it for hours after the ice is thawed without experiencing the slightest discomfort. An individual who, wise in his generation, was provided with one of these head-refreshers took his seat outside a cafe on one of the boulevards the other afternoon, shortly after the dinner hour. The seats on the sidewalk were almost all taken, and he was about to retire in dudgeon, when the waiter espied a free table and invited him to take it. After he had freely indulged in bocks of Munich beer, it occurred to him that now was the time to renew the ice in his hat. No sooner thought than done. He poured out the water from the receptacle, and then noticed that there was no ice about, whereupon he replaced his hat on the ground and called out to the waiter, who usually takes a good deal of calling at that busy hour of the day. Meanwhile another individual, whose curiosity was moved by the strange spectacle of water issuing from a silk hat, surreptitiously took the headgear in his hand, inspected it, and put it back, but not, as it chanced, in exactly the same place. Now, there were many top hats on the ground at the moment, for the heat was excessive, and the bulk of the visitors had indulged in abundant dining, and were eager to be refreshed. When at last the ice came, the gentleman for whom it was intended was busy conversing with a friend who had just arrived, so he took the ice in his hand, and, without looking under the table, temporarily placed it, as he thought, in the watertight receptacle of his patent topper, intending to arrange it properly later on.

But the conversation was long and interesting, and might not have ended as abruptly as it did but for an unforeseen accident. A neighbor of the possessor of the patent hat, having paid the waiter, leisurely donned his own silk headgear, rose up, stretched himself, and then exclaimed hurriedly to a friend: "Tiens! it is killing hot this evening. The perspiration is coming off my head in torrents!" "Ah, yes; it's enough to make a man melt where he stands and leave nought but a stagnant pool to mark the place he occupied," replied the friend. "Do you know what it is, mon ami?" said the other, in a sepulchral tone, as he slowly resumed his seat. "I am seriously ill. That accursed fever that I contracted in Greece is on me again, and I feel as if-- Good heavens, look at that?" he exclaimed, as little streamlets of icy cold water flowed rapidly over his eyes, nose and chin on to his white pique waistcoat. His companion looked in sheer amazement at the horror-stricken face of his friend, which was as pale as a sheet. Then he said: "We had better drive home at once. Whatever have you been eating for dinner? Not mushrooms, I hope? But first take off your hat and unbutton your vest." The moment the hat was removed a large chunk of bluish ice dropped into the wineglass on the table, knocking it on to the ground, where it smashed with a loud crash that aroused the attention of the public. "Millie tonnerres!" cried the white vested individual; 'what mauvais drole has been trying to play his practical jokes on me? What the —— is th's?" he continued, looking at the patent headcovering; and then, in a fit of passion, he caved in the unoffending crown against his humid knee. "Nom d'une pipe," shouted the owner of the chapeau a glace, "how dare you treat my property in that unceremonious fashion? I will teach you manners;" and with that he seized upon a hat that lay near the offender, and reduced it to a shapeless pulp. "Ma's, mon Dieu! that's my property," exclaimed a third individual, putting his face provokingly up beside that of the other. "What right have you, monsieur——?" "He is a madman, who carries ices and soups in his hat and pockets," exclaimed another. "Then he should be sent to Charenton," remarked a bystander. "No, Francois; no fighting," whispered one man to his friend, the hero of the hat. It was with extreme difficulty that a free fight was avoided, but the gentlemen duly exchanged cards, and, having nearly lost their heads, went home hatless and cooled to bed.—London Telegraph.
