WHAT OUR SHIPS WOULD DO.

If we were shipping out our wheat, cotton, corn, petroleum, provisions; locomotives, steel rails, iron pipes, &c., on American bottoms instead of foreign ships, we would benefit in many ways:

1. By building and supplying the materials for the construction of the ships.

2. By manning the ships.

3. By getting the freights which would go to our own shipowners and investors in shipping enterprises as profits to be distributed again, putting vigor into various branches of our national life.

4. By securing a more direct and a speedier service to foreign markets.

5. By obtaining a large postal fleet.

6. By developing a large merchant navy from which to draw auxiliary crusers and transports in time of war.

There are other considerations which enter into this shipping problem, but these are enough, it would appear, to move a mountain. It is in such a behalf that the real patrotism of the American people is afforded an opportunity to manifest itself. There are patriots who go to war and others who remain at home. If it be true that to attain ends in democracies and to arouse public opinion it is necessary to wage wars and annex islands in order to get object lessons in the matter of the American ship and an isthmian canal, then what we have just passed through and are passing through now will not be in vain. The true, destiny and glory of this country, however, will be attained not by maintaining garrison in Cuba or in the Philippines, or in the increase of our armament, though it may be needful to involve ourselves in much that does not directly concern our growth as we go along. The ever present duty is to build up these United States to commercial greatness and economic supremacy so that the whole world will look hither for what it needs to buy. This, of course, is a practical question. There is no romance or sentiment in it, and as a means to the end the American ship must be regarded as one of the principal factors. Until we have this and can haul more than 9.2 per cent of our imports and exports in our own bottoms, we will be a nation thriving, if we thrive at all, beyond our just deserts.—"Manufacturer."

REASON WHY.

The Walla Walla Union says:—The fusion newspapers in this state, while they advance conflicting views as to the cause of their party's defeat, are agreed upon the point that fusion will be eliminated from future political combination in this state for some years to come.

In assinging causes which led to the overthrow of the fusion party, they overlook the important fact that the prophecies, assurances and promises of the Bryanite party, in 1896, have failed to materialize in any fact as promised. The masses who followed their free silver leaders, and believed their prophecies of ruin and disaster which would certainly follow the continuence of the gold standard have, during the eighteene months since the inauguration of William McKinley seen the conditions of the country rise industrial stagnation to the higher stage of industrial and commercial prosperity. They have seen that money has been and is now more abundant and cheaper than ever before; and that a silver dollar will buy a gold dollar, and as much of the neccessaries of life as a gold dollar coin will purchase.

And then there were thousands whose eyes were open to the dangerous tendencies of the socialists theories of the platform of the fusion party, and the vicious legislation by the fusion legislature of 1897. Dispensary from tax exemption and other unconstitutional and injurious legislation; reaching a climax in the single tax, referendum, and other demands of the fusionists in 1897, exposed to the dangerous tendency of that party's demands should they be enacted into law. Intelligent and honest partisans, who had supported their isms in 1896, reasoned as to the consequences whice would follow the success of the people's party, and the various laws which its legislature would enact, and hence declined to follow longer the behests of their party and its leaders Thousands of these voted the republican ticket, and thousands will continue their support to a party whose policies are productive of prosperity.

STOCKMEN should make a note of this fact: The state law makes it compulsory to record both brand and mark used by owners to designate stock. No mark or brand can be used as proof of ownership in the courts of the state unless it is recorded in the county clerk's office. Therefore a man may fo to the clerk's office, and finding certain marks and brands not upon record, he may go upon the range and appropriate all stock bearing such unrecorded brands the same as "slick-ears."—Coos Bay News.

SAFETY OF ELECTRICITY.

Compared With Dangerous Explosives for Lighting.

HEPPNER, OR. Nov, 18, '98.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—

In this day of invention, no subject is studied more than that of artificial illumination. Electric lighting in points of safety, health, cleanliness, convenience and comfort, has distanced all competitors. Gasoline and acetylene or carbide gas through the argument of cheapness is now trying to win popular favor. Do they deserve it? Argument for and against gas illumination have filled many books, and from these, and more especially from parties using gas, I have gathered the following facts:

Gasoline lamps give out a greenish colored flame, the fixtures clog easily and must be cleaned frequently. When the flow of gas is irregular, black spots come and go on the mantle, which makes a wavering light. None but the best gasoline, costing in Portland 26 cents per gallon, should be used. In a close room the oder of gasoline is ever present, and at times very strong. It requires several minutes to generate gas and light the lamp. The mantle, costing one dollar, requires often renewal. One quart of gasoline will run a lamp ten hours. The burners claimed to give 100 candle power actually give but 16 candle power.

Acetylene or carbide gas as an illuminant is superior to gasoline. The flame is a succession of explosions similar to a discharge of rockets. It is a high explosive, igniting at low temperatures. When exploded even in small quantities its shattering force is very great. The odor (like unto that of rotten eggs) when filling or cleaning the generator, or handling the carbide, escapes into the room, and even out of doors is strong enough to offend the olfactory nerves. It dries up the joints in pipes and starts leaks; it leaves a residue in the pipes and burners clogging them so to require constant care and cleaning, and the operation of unscrewing and taking apart of the fixtures must soon wear them out. The generator must be cleaned often; some as often as once a day. The carbide and water leaves a residue that soon outsizes the ash heap of the stove. Many deaths, injuries and loss of property have resulted from explosions of acetylene in Europe during '96 and '97. In 29 accidents there were 19 deaths. Some of the generators in Oregon have already blown up. There is no connection between makers of generators, who number hundreds, and the syndicate who owns all carbide patents. Allowing no one but their licensees to manufacture,—it is the most complete monopoly of the day,—thus enabling them to quote low prices in order to introduce the light. What they will hereafter do remains to be seen. The agent selling generators having once supplied a customer has no further interest in him. In this and in foreign countries, except on the Pacific coast where tolls are so high that they can afford to take the risk, insurance companies and fire boards prohibit the storage of carbide in lots not exceeding 25 pounds, and it must be kept in hermetically sealed heavy tin cases. The generators are to be kept in a separate and fire proof building—at least 50 feet away from any other—and no artificial lights to be in use near them. Why? All carbide must be packed in air tight cans. Accidents are as a rule the results of carelessness, but with the same care gunpowder and dynamite are as safe. Carbide costs in Portland six cents per pound, and at any other points add freight at the rate of 1½ cents to each pound of carbide. At this price the light costs five hundredths of a cent per hour for each candle power: one of the 25 C. P. flames costs one and one quarter cents per hour for carbide; or, burning three hours per night, it would cost $1.12 per month. As compared with electric light rates the cost prohibits its use for long hours of a saloons, hotels, liveries and allnight lights, etc. No burner yet invented has high illuminating efficiency faultless operation, durability or cheapness. When in good operation the flame is clear and good color, but has not the penetrating diffusing power of the electric light.

Both gasoline and acetylene or carbide gas has the following common objections:

1. The danger of an open flame light.
2. Required time and some other flame agent to ignite.
3. They are not so convenient as the electric light,
4. They have unpleasant and unhealthly odors.
5. The lamps and generators require constant care and cleanliness and experts to repair them.
6. Apparatus costing from ten to two hundred dollars is short lived; burners and mantles require frequent renewals.
7. They are dangerous explosives.
8. The price of material in the control of the most powerful monopolies in this country.
9. The candle power overestimated.
10. Fixtures clog easily.
11. They are not cheap. In Oregon some users have discarded them and say they prefer the electric light at increased cost of service.

Lamps and generators are handled by agents who cannot, and will not furnish a reliable guarantee for the cost of lighting, the candle power of flame, the long life of apparatus, or the price of material they consume.

The electric light has all the virtues of gas illuminants and none of their faults except in the renewal of lamps, where the cost is in comparison very light. I believe acetylene will in time be the strongest competitor that electric lighting will have; it is not now, and when the time comes will electric lighting (which never sleeps) be ahead if its only imperfection, the renewal of lamps;

I challenge any agent to test these statements, the test to be conducted by and before a jury of citizens, and as a gauge of good faith, I and they to deposit one hundred dollars each with the jury, the money so deposited by the losing party to be given to any worthy charity, the winner to receive his deposit back.

Yours truly, H. V. GATES.

At the aquarium in Berlin there is a big gorilla whose habits are about as correct as those of the most of his distant relatives. He gets up at eight in the morning, takes a bath, and uses soap without hesitation. When his toilet is completed he takes a cup of milk, after which he eats two loaves of bread with Frankfurt sausages and smoked Hamburg beef, all of which he moistens with a glass of weiss beer. At one p. m. he takes a bowl of soup, with rice and potatoes, and a wing of a chicken. He uses his knife and fork and his napkin; but when he thinks that his keepers are not observing him he discards the impediments of civilization and plunges his muzzle into the bowl, as if to give evidence of the melancholy fact that even a gorilla can be a hog.

Returned from Alaska.

The many friends of Mr. Lee Matlock, son of our sheriff, gave him a hearty welcome yesterday morning on his return from the "frozen north." Most of his time has been spent rt Skaguay, and he has stood a witness to most of the hardships encountered by those who went in search of gold. Mr. Matlock authenticates the reports of others regarding the uncertanty of "fortune making" in Alaska, and congratulates himself upon being fortunate enough to spend the winter here at home. We have up to time of going to press been unable to detail his experience in Alaska.
