

SOCIALISTS WIN OUT

Reichstag Election Proves a Big Victory.

SAXONY NOW THE "RED LAND"

Escape of the Late Crown Princess Costs the Government Forces Many Votes—Women Bring Out the Laggards.

BERLIN, June 16.—The leading feature in the Reichstag election, which was held today, was the success of the Social Democrats, who have probably increased their representation in the Reichstag by 15 seats, and their total vote to 250,000, or 60,000 more than in 1898.

An extraordinary feature of the pollings in Berlin was the part taken by Socialist women. Hundreds went from house to house bringing out laggard voters, waiting at the factories and mills, and accompanying the indifferent electors to the polls.

The affair of the late Crown Princess appears to have had some influence in the elections in Saxony, where great Socialist gains were made, for example, 500 at Chemnitz and 600 at Leipzig.

There are just two kinds of stores today: The one living from hand to mouth, depending upon the open market, taking the ruff-ruff along with the good, getting stilted second-hand, going to sleep and staying in it, only coming out long enough to whine when the "Different Store" hurrahs.

The other planning ahead, creating styles and fashions, getting merchandise made to order, using the open market only when it is to advantage to do so—the "FOREHANDED"—"DIFFERENT" STORE. Which do you deal with? Yes—we want your trade—be honest enough to ask for it, and square enough to tell you just why we deserve it.

TRAINING IN DUTY. "One of the Weak Spots in the Modern Public School System." Chicago Tribune. The Rev. Edward Everett Hale spoke to the students of Yale on Sunday last and gave them some important advice in the matter of training in duty. The speaker was not applying his advice specially to Yale, but to all colleges, and particularly to public schools in general. He regretted that this kind of training is no longer a fundamental part of education; that "in the average school training is limited to some one day of the week," and that "the average boy or girl under our training has a connected notion with regard to his or her importance." Dr. Hale has hit one of the weak spots in the modern public school system—the lack of training in duty—duty to parents, to superiors and to education. To that is due the lack of respect for authority and obedience to discipline. There was an illustration of this the other day at the Elgin High school. The pupils of that school, who are old enough to have known better with the exaggerated idea of their own importance, of which Dr. Hale justly complains, undertook to do just as they pleased in every respect without regard to the regulations of the school or the authority of the principal. In a word, they were running the school and laughed at any attempt to restrain them or to preserve order. One day, when the insubordination and disorder became too intolerable to bear, the principal lost his temper and, foolishly, perhaps, assaulted one of the offenders, instead of suspending him or dismissing him altogether. Whereupon he was assaulted in turn, and came near receiving severe punishment. Fortunately, in this case, the people of Elgin who are on the eve of electing a new board of education and a new superintendent, the old one being deemed too severe, have changed their minds and will now re-elect the old superintendent, with the view of the restoration of authority in the school. The case at Elgin is not exceptional. In the city of Chicago there are children who have no respect for the authority of teachers, and fancy they are running the school, and, worse still, there are some teachers who have no respect for the board of education, and fancy they are the managers of the school system. Today is the day when the board of education is electing a new board of education, but his criticism is none the less true, and it applies to everything in this country that is or should be subject to higher authority. Disrespect for the governing power in the state, in the school, in the home is a growing weakness in the republic. Cruelty to children is obviously not a serious matter in Austria. A father who punished his child by ill treatment was, the other day, punished by eight days' arrest.
