OREGON CITY, OCTOBER 2, 1890.

The anti-lottery bill passed by congress and signed by the president is now in operation. Its provisions are stringent and have only to be enforced to suppress the demoralizing traffic at which it is aimed, striking as it does both at the agents and patrons in any lottery company. It is made criminal for any officer or agent of the company, or any persons in any part of the United States, to mail any lottery communication, letter, postal, circular, ticket, money order, check or draft, and closes the mails to every newspaper publishing advertisements of a lottery or announcement of its drawings. The bill also aims an effective blow at any bank or other concern, under whose cover a company may seek to do its business—the postmaster-general being empowered to direct any local postmaster not to deliver any registered letters to any person or company engaged in the lottery business, or the agents of such person or company. The old lottery law was rendered worthless by the indisposition of the courts in Louisiana to enforce it, but the operation of this new law cannot be baffled in this way, as its enforcement is not left solely to the courts.

There is a growing sentiment among the people in favor of having the laws published in the newspapers. The people have a right to know what their laws are, and the newspaper is the only medium of intelligence. Publication in book form is practically no publication. The law is worth passing if it is worth publishing. They should be published in the newspapers as they are enacted, so that the people may have a chance to read and study them. The expense of publication would be more than saved in the enforcement of laws that would result, and when legislators are aware all their acts are being constantly scrutinized by the people they will be more careful in the laws they make. County Court proceedings should be published even to the smallest bill allowed, as claims are often allowed which are withheld from publication, whereas if the statutes provided for their publication in every detail, county commissioners would be more careful of the bills allowed, a correspondent saying would result.

Circuit Judge R. P. Boise has rendered a decision to the effect that the special acts of the last legislature making appropriations for state roads is unconstitutional. Representative Maxwell, of Tillamook, who was superintending the work under the appropriation, brought suit for the reason that the county court of Tillamook county refused to pay him for the work done, he having been in trouble with his constituency. He brought suit against the county, laying a change of venue to Yamhill, where the case has been thrown out of court. [illegible] that the act of the legislature appointing the [illegible] was unconstitutional.

Clackamas county names is all fixed to have a county fair next season. The opportunities presented by surrounding fairs this season have not been taken advantage of by our citizens, and as a consequence Oregon City and Clackamas county have not been advertised abroad. No county on the Pacific coast affords a greater variety of produces suitable for a grand exposition of industrial and natural products.

For the first time in many years the Sunday law was brought into effect and the saloons in Corvallis were closed on Sunday last. It is needless to say that many of our citizens were very much inconvenienced, says the Benton Leader.

The law does not inconvenience the citizens of Oregon City, East Portland, and many other places that could be mentioned. No difficulty is experienced in getting in at the back door.

Brownsville's sawmill is daily shipping considerable quantities of furniture stock cut to order, to Portland. While this is a pleasing indication of the manufacturing products, it would be much better to have the raw product all manufactured at home. With the unequalled facilities for manufacturing here, it could certainly be worked up with greater advantage.

It is the bill of possibilities that the recent treaty which virtually has negotiated with Russia, and by which Portugal surrenders so much of her colonies in Africa as to make the people consider it an act of national humiliation, may result in a revolution and the establishment of a republic.

The British manufacturers are rushing in the linen they can manufacture across the sea, so as to get it into the United States before the new tariff goes into effect. And the money that is going abroad to pay for it is causing stringency in the market here at home.

A [illegible] has been raised by the citizens of Vancouver, Washington, to secure the establishment there of a large pork packing establishment. The building will be 100x42 feet in size, and will be supplied with necessary appliances for packing 150 hogs a day. It is expected the business will be in operation soon after the first of October.

After all the vigorous effort made to obtain a request of the census of Oregon, it is probable the request will not be granted. But while the state is smarting under the injustice done, we will have to rest content that Portland and Salem obtained a recount, and make preparations for the year 1900.

The repeal of the usury and mortgage tax law in this state is being urged almost unanimously by the boards of trade, the press and people all over the state. Oregon will get results the influx of Eastern capital that will develop her resources.

Reciprocity is growing in Canada. It is now announced that the Coalition government contemplates dissolving Parliament and appealing to the constituencies on the question of unrestricted reciprocity.

What have the board of trade accomplished in reference to the establishment of hourly transit between Oregon City and Portland? Rapid transit is one of the principal factors in the upbuilding of cities.

The tariff bill has passed the senate, only three republican senators voting against it. The bill now awaits the signature of the president. Protection has at last won the victory.

To the Enterprise: It is amazing how little is known by the general public of this upper part of the same county, and a few lines in your paper in regard to it will no doubt be of interest to many.

Larch Mountain rises here to an altitude of 3000 feet above the sea. Clear creek takes its head on the south, Mill creek on the west, a stream putting into the Clackamas on the east, and Scott, Molalla on the south.

I have settled in a little valley on the south, eleven miles from the nearest house and thirty miles from Oregon City, and have employed myself in building a house, burning brush, grubbing timber and sowing grass seed. I see timothy and white and red clover do well on the section adjoining me, where the elevation is much higher than here.

Here is one of Jack Ball's claims, consisted thirty-five and forty years ago. Then the country was new, and necessaries of life were dear. The children would stand the pangs of hunger as long as they could, then they would run and beg, first to mother and then to father for meat; and then Jack would take Old Gray," take down his rifle, hunting accoutrements, his boys and mother and children go to this camp in the mountain in two or three days with the choicest of horse loaded with the choicest of deer meat. Then the neighbors would gather in, and have a barbecue. Polly was a good cook, and Jack's table was as free to all as the water that runs. Old Gray was a horse used to such [illegible] and Jack was accustomed to [illegible] along. In the oats was [illegible] which became scattered around the yard and gave to that part of the country the name of "the timothy patch." There many a hungry horse in years past owed a tear of gratitude to Jack and his stomach with the timothy he found there.

Here the mountain [illegible] begins, and extends in [illegible] twelve miles. They say, persons, the richest berry that grows. Two little boys who reside at the foot of the mountain have picked 120 gallons this year.

As one ascends the mountain, [illegible] gets up to an altitude of 1000 feet [illegible] see now and then a tree [illegible] than any of the rest, beginning at about fourteen inches from the [illegible] and continuing smooth and [illegible] limb from sixty to one hundred and twenty feet. That is hard [illegible] all other timber. It is not usual to find less than 1800 feet above the sea [illegible] ing at it, nor more than 3000 feet [illegible] It is timber that will not split. With malice toward none and charity for all, it invites and welcomes to its temple upright, honorable men everywhere. It is liberal and broad in its spirit, and philanthropic and fraternal in its purpose—seeking in all honest [illegible] good of its members.

It is the uncompromising foe of intolerance and oppression in all forms, and its origin, growth and success are due largely to the spirit of independence and manhood which has characterized its members. While it is not distributive [illegible] a charitable organization it [illegible] acceptance of the term, the [illegible] trade is given to every [illegible] to provide pecuniary aid for members in case of sickness, accident or death. Its influence for good cannot be questioned. It supplies all that is beneficent, elevating and useful in other secret organizations at a small cost involved in obtaining like benefits in similar societies.

This temple is known as Oregon City Temple No. 1, Patriarchal Circle, Oregon. The Order has now spanned the American continent from the Atlantic on the East to the Pacific on the West. This temple was organized by Deputy Supreme Scribe A. E. Gibbs of Ottawa, Illinois, assisted by Patriarch Wood, Past Commander of Oregon City Temple No. 5.

The Best Remedy for Cholera Morbus

From the Des Moines Leader.

Some weeks ago a Leader reporter went into a drug store and asked the question, "What is the best remedy for cholera morbus?" He was told "Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy." The medicine was purchased and worked like a charm. It proved to be very effective and since we found by experience in our own household that this particular remedy was of real value, we hesitated hesitated to speak of it as merits so deserving deserved. Hop Warehouse at Aurora.

The Southern Pacific Company has contracted at Aurora a large warehouse, but not long by about fifty wide, for the accommodation of hop shipments. This warehouse is to be used for that purpose only. The company had a good-sized freight warehouse at that point, but the cultivation of hops has grown to such proportions in that vicinity that it was impossible to accommodate their shipment without additional room. The hop growers of that section appreciate the enterprise of the railroad company in its efforts to accommodate them. Hop picking about there is now for the most part finished, and shipments will commence at once. A considerable portion of the hop crop of Clackamas county is shipped by way of Aurora.
