WILMINGTON, Del., June 22 -- A Northern mob, led by a Virginian, burned a negro at the stake tonight within a few miles above Mason and Dixon's line. The victim was George F. White, a negro, just of having feloniously assaulted and stabbed to death Miss Helen S. Bishop, the 17-year-old daughter of Rev. Dr. E. A. Bishop.

The crime of the negro was committed set Monday afternoon, and ever since there had been mutterings of lynching the man. An effort was made last hight to get White, but it failed. Tonight, a mob estimated at 4000 men and boys gathered in the neighborhood of Price's Corner, four miles from here. They came from everywhere, including Wilmington small towns to the south of Price's Cor-

Last night's lack of a leader was supplied by a Virginian, whose identity in the confusion and excitement could not be learned. of those who were pressing forward from

The warden did not wish to slaughter the mob in the prison corridor, and he directed that the fire hose be turned on the crowd. This held them for a time. Then a rush was made and the guards were brushed aside. White was quickly found. Begging for mercy be was dragged from the cell and the prison. Attempts were made to shoot White on the spot, but the leaders of the crowd would have nothing but his life at the stake. Resistance on the part of the

Then the march to the place of execution, just as though it was a march to the gallows in a prison, was taken up. With torches to lead the way, and with 4000 persons following the negro, he was led to the road and to almost the very spot where the assault took place. White was given a last chance to speak, and he confessed the murder of the girl.

A stake had been arranged by an advance guard. White was quickly chained to the post and the dry underbrush soaked with oil was ignited and the horrible execution was on. White, suffering intense agony, fainted, and his body hung limp. Shots were fired into his body, and the victim of the mob was soon dead.

DOCTRINE GOES TOO FAR Whitelaw Reid Discusses the Famous Monroe Dostrine.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 22.-The anniversary exercises of the Yale Law School were held this afternoon in Hen-dine Hall. The address was by Whitelaw Reid, of New York. Mr. Reid spoke on the ethics of the legal profession, on the Monroe Doctrine and on anarchism. He quoted an oration by Wendell Phillips

"In that lofty Valhalla of which Mr. Thillips spoke, you will look in vain for the statue of the modern ambulance chaser, or any specifs of the modern speculative suit lawyer. Far less will you find the tradesman in litigation who has found ways to combine champerty and maintenance with the practice of the courts. Nay, you will not even find there courts. Nay, you will not even find there that sort of brilliant corporate wealth how to evade the laws of the land; or that other whose practice lies in teaching trades unions how to conduct campaigns against property without imperilling their own incomes and campaigns against free labor by terrorism, by the bludgeon, by dynamite without incurring responsibility. dynamite, without incurring responsibility for such deeds while enjoying the victory for such deeds while enjoying the victory they secure."

On the Montoe docfrine, Mr. Reid said:
"The things that made the Monroe Doctrine have disappeared. Under such circumstances, it may be easy after a while for us to look over the Monroe Doctrine again in the light of the present situation of the American continent and of our present necessities. We will certainly not abandon it, but we may find if nobody

"Hands up!" came the order from a very small-looking man in the doorway, who had a white handketchief tiel over his face and held a small revolver pointing at the astonished man. Calof could not believe that any one would come into his barn and attempt to rob him, and took the matter as a loke. the matter as a joke.

"Hands up, and quick about it!" came the order from a larger man, and without waiting longer two shots were fired.
Both were wild of their mark, and save a scratch on one hand the young man was not injured.

"The platels were close to my face when they were discharged," said he after the holdup, "and I thought I was done for. I was so frightened that I could not for. I was so frightened that I could not stand up, and fell over on the oat box."

The robbers were not frightened away by their own shots, but rushed up to their supposed victim and commenced to search through his pockets. It is his custom to carry the money of his day's sales home with him, and he thinks that the robbers were men who knew him and his habits. This night, however, he had left the money and his gold watch in the house when he went out to feed the horses. The robbers went through his pockets carefully, but found nothing.

"Where is that money?" one of them asked, in an angry tone. "Pungle if up, and be quick about it!"

"I have no money. It is not on me," cried the frightened victim. "Leave me alone. I have nothing that you want."

They took some papers from his vest

They took some papers from his vest pocket and searched him again, when they heard the voice of the father, Max Calof,

"Come on, Rill; it's time to get out of here," said the larger one. "You stay right where you are and do not say a word," the two ordered their victim, and he compiled with their orders. The elder Calof, who had heard the shots from the house, was very badly frightened. He commenced to shout "Murder! Thieves! Robbers!" at the top of his voice, and started toward the harn. Several neighbors had been aroused by the shooting, and when they heard the old man's shouts, they rushed toward the scene. The robbers were almost caught, their only means of escape being past the old man. Elder Calof Shouts and Is Shot,
