The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:

FRIDAY.....JUNE 15, 1883

—There will be the usual services in Grace church this evening.

—The last Australian steamer from San Francisco took out 9,334 cases salmon.

—The reserved seats for to-morrow night are fast being taken. The company are well spoken of and will have a crowded house.

—A strawberry and ice cream festival will be held on Thursday evening, June 21st, under the auspices of the Guild of Grace church.

—It was reported last evening that the body of the late Walter Pohl had been found and buried on the weather beach above the cape.

—E. L. E. White, the genial correspondent of the Northwest News is in the city, and yesterday favored us with a call. He is a pleasant gentleman.

—The Ullock has 8,000 cases salmon aboard; the Crowell 2,180; the Ryerale 29,000; the last named vessel will take on 8,000 more and clear about the 22nd.

—THE WEEKLY ASTORIAN for June 15th is published this morning. It is a number of more than ordinary interest. Extra copies can be had at this office.

—The grand lodge of Oregon I. O. of G. T. will meet in this city next Tuesday, June 19, 1883; session to hold three days. A large attendance is expected.

—I. C. Johnson who will preside with his usual grace and urbanity at the Seaside House this season, sends word that he will not be ready to receive guests before the 5th of next month.

—The amount of street improvements accomplished in Seattle from August 1, 1882, to June 8, 1883, was $65,989 91. The amount of street improvements ordered and under way, in addition to the above, is $118,200.

—A Victoria dispatch says Indians from the west coast report the seal fishery a failure. Owing to high winds the catch is insignificant. They say at least fifty of the coast tribes, while pursuing seals, have lost their lives since March.

—B. W. Blood, has a small water-power saw mill at his place on the Clatskanie, Columbia Co., which turns out about 2,500 feet of cedar lumber a day. There is a great demand for this kind of lumber, both here and in Portland.

—John Harvey, about 24 years old, a native of north Ireland, and recently from San Francisco, was drowned by falling out of a fishing boat June 12, 1883. The post office address of any of his relations is requested by the Astoria Packing Co.

—There are now five fish wheels in operation at or near the Cascades. Two are owned by F. M. Warren, one by J. R. Dodson and one by H. Williams. The fifth is made from gas pipes instead of wood, and belongs to McLeod & Wheeler. They are all doing well and catching a great many salmon every day. The run is increasing rapidly, and promises to be much greater.—Standard.

—The Astoria Gaslight company, occupies its new office to-day. F. C. Norris has handsomely fitted up quarters therein, and in the inside room will be found C. H. Page, the secretary of the company, who has a nicely fitted up apartment. The company will soon be in full operation. Last night Pythian castle was lit up, and as soon as Mr. Moon can get the meters in place our principal business places will discard the old regime and measure their light by the fascinating and truthful gas meter.

—The Redding Cala., Independent says: "Last week we met Myron Green, superintendent of the U. S. fishery on the McLeod river. He informs us that Fish Commissioner Livingston Stone will be here in July on his annual vist to the fishery, and that work in the hatchery will be pushed vigorously. Mr. Stone is now in Idaho arranging for the establishmen of a hatchery at the headwaters of the Columbia. The salmon supply in that noble river is found to be decreasing, and some means have to be taken to keep up the finny population of its waters."

—The ship William H. Starbuck, from Astoria at Falmouth, reports: Sailed from Astoria January 1st, at 5 P. M. Off Cape Horn, on March 5th, during a cyclone, the ship hove down 36 hours, and had lower topsails blown away and cargo shifted. On March 7th, at 2 P. M., saw a bark dismasted, the Chiara, of Genoa; kept off for her; found her wrecked, boats smashed, and bulwarks and houses gone. Rescued captain, four men and two passengers. The bark was abandoned in a sinking condition in latitude 57 south, longitude 71 west. The chief officer and nine men were washed overboard and lost.

ASTORIA BOYS AHEAD.

First Prize for Rescue No. 2.

When the news came yesterday afternoon that our fire department had won the first prize at the Salem tournament, there was a general feeling of "well, that's just what we expected," but it made the department "feel good" just the same. Our report is rather meager, and is made up chiefly from private telegrams. It appears that The Dalles, Portland and Oregon City were not represented. The course laid out over which the race took place was a rough one. The steamer contest was won by Rescue No. 2, of this city, in 46⅝ seconds, Tiger No. 2, of Salem, making it in 49 seconds. Astoria No. 1, failed to get the nozzle on, and according to one dispatch, express considerable dissatisfaction thereat. It will be remembered a similar incident occurred on the occasion of last year's tournamant. The same contest last year was for steam engines to run 100 yards, hose company to run 300 yards, lay 100 feet of hose and throw water; this prize of $100 was won by Rescue No. 2, in 1 minute and 1¼ seconds. The contest which the same company won yesterday was similar, except that the hose company ran 200 yards, instead of 300. That Rescue No. 2, could go to Salem, and in a temperature far different from the bracing atmosphere of Astoria take their competitors' engine and beat them is good evidence of merit.

The contest for hose companies to run 200 yards, attach and lay one line of 300 feet of hose and get water, was closely contested; the first prize was won by capital No. 1, of Salem, in 61 seconds; second prize by Astoria, No. 1, in 68 seconds; Tiger No. 2, made it in 69 seconds, Rescue, No. 2, in 69, and Salem, No. 3, in 72. Our department has done well, and the boys should have a hearty reception when they come back.

Discoveries.

Some idea may be formed of the Columbia river bars from an experiment made at Government island, seven miles above Vancouver, a day or two since. A pipe well was driven down to a depth of 185 feet, the whole distance through sand resembling the tailings from a quartz mill. From this depth was pumped up bits of fern roots and leaves. No rock having been reached, it was deemed adviseable to pull out the pipe till the bottom was only 100 feet down, and the well then gave a fine stream of pure cold water. The experiment demonstrates several facts, one of which is that the Columbia at that place was once much deeper than it now is and has been filled up with sand ground up by the river. Another is that it is not possible to kill out fern by deep ploughing if the roots reach 185 feet below the surface.—Oregonian 14.

—Capt. Gray will send the Canby to the Cape next Sunday, if enough excursion tickets are sold to justify the trip.

—Beautiful furniture and fittings are constantly arriving for the Odd Fellows' building. In the first story I. W. Case has one of the finest banking establishments in the northwest. The main room is admirably arranged, and in the rear of the massive vault is a sumptuously fitted private office. His facilities for exchange, transmission of drafts, etc., are on a par with metropolitan banking institutions, and whether it be San Francisco, New York, or London, one can get a draft with as little trouble as in these cities.

—Cass street is at present in a demoralized condition, but it will shortly be set right. W. B. Headington is building a new eight-foot sidewalk, about eighteen inches above the present level of the street in front of the Odd Fellows' building, and C. H. Page has a sidewalk already in front of his new building. As soon as it can be done THE ASTORIAN building will be raised thirty inches, and a new sidewalk built, and when the street is next improved we will be on a level with the building across the street. Capt. Flavel is preparing to replank from Chenamus to Squemoqua, and from Astor south the street is also being raised, though the scarcity of building material necessitates slow progress. When the street is raised according to the ordinance recently passed it will be on a permanent grade of 19 feet instead of the present one of 16.54 feet.

Chinese Dainties.

According to Pallus, the natives of the coast of Belgium once considered the muscular proboscis of the seamouse as a delicacy, and to-day the spinculus is eaten by the Chinese, many of whom make a direct living by collecting them for the market, and probably no nation in the world has such facilities for the compilation of a novel cook-book. Very few animals escape them, and innumerable articles that are rejected by other peoples find market there. For the one item of sharks' fins they pay the natives of Southern India $100,000 yearly. These dainties, that are in point of fact, from being all muscle, the toughest part of the animal, boiled and pounded into soup, find acceptance mainly among the lower classes, and to the man from the west are more pleasing to the eye than to the stomach, which rule holds good when applied to the average Chinese "spread." The dinner table is profuse in its declaration of flowers, and if the host is a man of wealth or a merchant, the walls of the room are also often completely covered with rare flowers and plants; but to offset this are the viands. Here is a savory dish of stewed pigeon. We are about to partake, but in the language of a friend with sporting proclivities, the dish has been handicapped by a sauce made up of a fungus that grows upon certain caterpillars. It attacks the living larva, and after it has entered the ground the fungus shoots up in a long stem, is plucked, and forthwith made into a condiment. Another curious Chinese delicacy is pickled eggs that have been buried for years that their flavor may, like wine, be improved. A similar custom prevails at Manilla, where ducks' eggs are brooded until the young is formed, and then are boiled and sold in special stalls, as are oysters here. This, in point of fact, is no worse than the "high" hare and venison affected by our epicures of to-day, a little of which goes a great way when the wind is fair, nor the sportive cheese esteemed by many. The latter would, without question, disgust Chinamen, to some of whom the act of eating a raw live oyster is a deed of the greatest valor. Often at the Chinese banquets the women fare badly, receiving only the seeds of watermelons. Several kinds of seaweed form delicacies for these people, and many of the poorer classes obtain a living by collecting it for shipment and home consuption. Various starfishes are also much esteemed, but the choicest member of this class is the long, hideous, worm-like sea cucumber. The trade in these animals is a lucrative one, and carried on in different parts of the world, the bulk of the merchandise finding its way to China. In the Ladrone Islands another species is esteemed, while yet another is the famous delicacy of the Chinese. The Malays have hundreds and even thousands of junks in this business. The vessels drift along the flats, and the animals are speared by the fishermen or dived for, and as soon as a load is secured they are taken to the nearest shore, where large sheds are erected and boilers placed filled with boiling salt water. After boiling a few minutes the animal is taken out, cut open and cleaned, and tossed into a second cauldron and soaked with mimosa bark; after this they were laid in the sun, dried, and finally stowed away in the hold of the vessel. The price for trepang cured in the Chinese market is about $7 for a picul or 125 pounds. The Chinese are well-known lovers of the squid, and even in San Francisco the uncanny creatures are to be seen hanging in the markets for the delectation of John. The meat of the octopus, however, is not unpleasant, being white like chicken or frog meat, but lacking in firmness.

Why are King's Combination Spectacles the Best?

1st. They are composed of a Combination Frame, set with the finest French polished lens; they do not rust, and are the most durable in use.

2d. The lenses are of different shapes, so as to correct imperfect sight in youth as well as old age, both for reading and seeing at a distance.

3d. They can be so adjusted that the cone of the lens will come before the eye, which is very important for distinct vision.

4th. They will neither confuse the sight nor cause dizziness by long and continued use, as is the case with common spectacles of unequal focus.

5th. They supply the deficiency that occurs from the flattening of the crystaline lens and will enable one to see as well as in youth.

6th. They are recommended by the leading opticians of the country, are not expensive, over a million of them are now in use.

As the need of glasses does not depend on age alone, it is very important to have the eyes properly tested, and not fitted by guess.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. The genuine are marked KING'S PATENT, on the nose piece. Peddlers cannot obtain the genuine.

Don't trust to travelling opticians and pay exorbitant prices, but call on the only authorized agent, who has King's new system by which defective sight can be corrected on scientific principles.

N. P. R. R. Matters.

In answer to an Oregonian reporter's questions, T. F. Oakes, vice president of the N. P. R. R., in a recent Portland interview said:

"We do not propose to stop work until the courts require us to stop. The people of Portland want us to build a bridge, but if work on the structure is stopped it necessarily follows that we cannot build the Union depot. We would have no use for it if we could not reach it with trains."

"What will be the policy of your company concerning the building of a rival city on Puget Sound?" asked the reporter.

Mr. Oakes answered: "We do not consider it any part of the operations of the Northern Pacific railroad to build up a rival city on Puget Sound or elsewhere. Our policy is to recognize trade centers and all will be on such equal footing as the best judgment can dictate. We are content to receive and deliver our business where the people want it. To-day the great important commercial center is Portland. We have endeavored to treat Portland fairly, and we think the sentiment of the commercial public is approval of our acts."

"When do you expect to have trains running from Portland to St. Paul?"

"Very few days after the last rail is laid. We have been putting the road in running order close up to the construction force. We are three days ahead of time at Helena, having reached there yesterday. We did not expect to get to Helena before the 15th. There is no doubt that regular trains will run through before September 15."
