CUBA DECLARES HER INDEPENDENCE.

The news that the Cuban revolutionists have formed a regular government with Salvador as president, will undoubtedly prove extremely disagreeable to the administration and its organs. Mr. Cleveland's whole attitude toward the insurgents in their heroic struggle for liberty has been formed on the theory that the revolt in Cuba was nothing more than a large riot. Spain has at least 60,000 troops in the island and a Spanish fleet of thirty or forty vessels continually patrol its shores. More soldiers and more ships are being forwarded as rapidly as the overtaxed resources of the Spanish monarchy can furnish them. Yet in the face of this fact that the insurgents absolutely control more than half Cuba today the president obstinately refuses to regard them in any other light than that of mere rioters, whose fate is of no earthly concern to the United States.

The formation of a Cuban government which supercedes the preceding provisional organization and which has just solemnly declared Cuba's complete independence from Spain, will make the Cleveland policy of wilful blindness more absurd than ever. All chance that Spain might crush the revolution before the meeting of congress and release Mr. Cleveland from an uncomfortable dilemma has now passed. It is evident that the Cubans will be able to maintain themselves for an indefinite time, and when their newly established government knocks at the doors of the national legislature and appeals for recognition, its request will be speedily granted.

The prospect of receiving a scathing rebuke from congress is a decidedly unpleasant one for Mr. Cleveland. But he has only his own obstinacy to thank for it.

The city of Philadelphia is called slow by people who judge the town by what they see in envious New York papers. It does not seem to be generally known that Philadelphia has the cleanest and finest streets; the finest churches, hospitals orphan asylums and the most elegant private residences of any city in the country. Philadelphia contains more buildings of all kinds than New York and Cincinnati combined. It has the most costly public building aside from the capitol at Washington, in the United States. Cable cars were introduced in Philadelphia ahead of any other city but San Francisco, and now it is the first city on the continent to put into practical use the newly invented horseless carriage.

Somehow people of deep religious feeling, no matter how diverse their creeds, cannot help "getting together," as the politicians put it. They may not do it very often, but it occurs with sufficient frequency to show that the underlying elements of true religious feeling are peculiar to neither race nor region. The "Independent" says: "One of the oldest of late religious events is the Mohammedan prayer offered by the son of the Ameer of Afghanistan at the tomb of St. Peter in Rome for the repose of St. Peter's soul. Not quite as grotesque, perhaps, is the fact that it was a Jewish judge who decided last week, in Brooklyn, what would be done with a fund of $3,000 given to the American Missionary Association to start an impossible Christian mission in the Soudan."

A recent writer set forth an article based on the stinginess which marks the contributions of even professed Christians in behalf of religious work, and mentioned, with other curious facts, that in California, where any coin smaller than a nickel is regarded with contempt, coppers rarely appear except upon the contribution plate in churches. That free giving to religious objects is the exception rather than the rule is well known, but nothing could show it more plainly than the following statistics, collated by W. H. Rice from the Year Book of the Congregational churches, and relating to contributions to foreign missions. Mr. Rice found an apparent increase of 144 in the number of contributing churches over the number reported in 1893; an increase of 5,060 in the active membership; a decrease of $35,413 from the amount contributed to all causes, $9,974,905, or per active member, $17.16; amount contributed to all other causes, $1,815,584, or per active member, $4.41; amount contributed to foreign missions, $574,627, or an average per active member of about 91 cents; 1,622 churches, with an active membership of 86,161, are put down as giving nothing to foreign missions; 59 churches, with a total membership of 2,446 gave $59, or $1 for each church; 77 churches, with a total membership of 3,878, gave $144, or $2 for each church; 76 churches, with a total membership of 4,381, gave $228, or $2 for each church; 68 churches with a total membership of 3,537 gave $272, or $4 for each church; 159 churches, with a total membership of 10,054, gave $795, or $5 for each church. This is almost as bad a showing as is furnished by some of the leading denominations of Christians in Astoria. Our people do not realize it, but one of the most discreditable things noticed by strangers about Astoria is the niggardly support given the clergymen and churches of the city.

A PROFITABLE ARRANGEMENT.

It is announced that arrangements have been completed by which the firms of R. P. Rithet & Co., Ld., Robert Ward & Co., Ld., and A. Bell Irving & Co., of Victoria, B. C., in connection with American houses with which they have become associated, will, very shortly establish on this side of the line canneries supplemented with traps and the most modern appliances for the taking of fish. The companies which are being incorporated will have practically unlimited capital and propose to carry on the business in the most energetic manner and upon a most extensive scale. The parties concerned have, they state, been driven to this course by what are regarded as the unfortunate Canadian restrictions which have been placed upon the catching of salmon, the supply of which though practically inexhaustible so far as actual numbers are concerned, is diverted from the Canadian waters, and, as it were, penned up on the American side by the elaborate system of traps and nets which are stretched across what happens to be the portion of the straits most frequented by the fish at that particular point, the result being that the Point Roberts and other canneries have the advantage over the Canadian establishments, most of which are located some distance up the Fraser. Naturally these firms, seeing that the Dominion government has shown its disinclination, if not inability, to assist Canadian enterprise, though repeated called upon to do so, have met the difficulty by adopting the only other alternative which presents itself. Since they cannot employ their capital to advantage at home they are taking it abroad and this country will have all the advantage—and it will be by no means small—that is certain to accrue.

All great men make mistakes and it is not strange that Lord Sackville should have missed his chance of fortune. Following the Murchison letter, he says, a Chicago museum offered him $2,000 a week and he did not accept. Thus he missed the flood tide. The Murchison letter was a mistake, the failure of the administration to stand by its friend was another mistake. The scorning of the museum man's offer was another and a third error. Lord Sackville will never make a great statesman. The case is hopeless.

The Japanese troops here defeated the Black flags in Formosa. This incident has no particular interest in the world at large, perhaps. The defeat of an army of savages more or less is not a matter which particularly concerns civilization. Only the French did not defeat the same Black Flags in Tonquin.

There is a dearth of whales in the Arctic. Those people who have not laid in their winter whales had better be stirring themselves. Think of the awful deprivation of finding yourself out of whales, way along about the middle of January!

Mr. Cleveland proposes to send an agent to Cuba, and this is as good a way as another of keeping out of trouble. By the time the agent finds out anything the whole question will have adjusted itself.

Mr. Parelli, the waterworks sub-contractor, is beginning, properly enough, to refer to Mr. Hamshaw as "my most intimate enemy."

Unquestionably John C. New intends to be the steady company of the Harrison boom.

THE CONSULAR SERVICE.

The president has at last so far yielded to the pressure for reform in the consular service as to order that henceforth no consuls of commercial agents of a certain grade shall be appointed unless they have served in some other position under the department of state, or shall have furnished the customary evidence of character, responsibility and capacity, and have demonstrated by an examination that they are qualified for the post. The last of these provisions nullifies the first. Politicians who aspire to be consuls can always furnish evidence of character, responsibility and capacity, and can pass an examination under the civil service rules; thus the new order will not supply the service with a much better class of officials than those who have brought it into disrepute.

The American consular service has always been the opprobrium of the government. In the British and German service it is a profession. Young men are put into subordinate positions in consulates, and are required to learn languages, political economy and the usages of trade. As they progress in their studies they are gradually promoted. When they are proficient they may then expect to become vice-consuls, and then consuls. If in the latter capacity they show marked ability they may pass from the consular to the diplomatic service, and they may rise to be ambassadors, as Sir Harry Parkes did, who entered the British consulate at Canton as a boy with the duties of a roustabouts, and gradually rose through the grades of interpreter and consular clerk until he came to represent Great Britain in Eastern Asia. Unless the incumbent has grave faults he holds his post for life. The effect of this regime is to supply England with a body of well-trained, highly-experienced and thoroughly devoted officials, in comparison with whom our consuls are children.

In this country consulates are the reward of political service during Presidential campaigns. When a president has nothing else to give he can always find a consulate for a friend who has laid him under obligation. Thus consulates whose duties are one of considerable moment to our foreign trade are bestowed upon lawyers and editors and traders who have no knowledge of the commerce they are expected to foster, or of the country to which they are accredited. Not one in a score knows the language of the people among whom he is to live. Their foreign confreres walk around them, and when a question arises whether a certain class of goods shall be got from Great Britain or Germany, or the United States, they have no influence to wield. This fact is one of the chief causes why Great Britain and Germany sell $10 worth of goods to China and Japan against $1 worth sold by this country.

For twenty years men of business have entreated the government at Washington to reform our consular service so that our consuls should be able to hold their own against the corps of European competitors. The appeal has fallen on deaf ears in consequence of the unwillingness of presidents to part with patronage. And Mr. Cleveland shows in his recent order that he follows the example of his predecessors while affecting to yield to public clamor. If the president can appoint a "person who having furnished the customary evidence of character, responsibility and capacity, is found upon an examination to be qualified for the position," all his appointees may be of this class, and there is no guarantee that experience or knowledge will cut any figure in the selection of consuls.

Our diplomatic service has long been a joke. The ambassadors and ministers plenipotentiary who represent the United States at foreign courts have nothing to do, but they do that very well. International business is transacted by newspapers with the aid of the telegraph. But the consular service ought to be a serious branch of the administration. It rests with the consuls in China to say where that empire is going to get the goods it proposes to buy, and the odds are that those nations which are best served by their commercial representatives will get the cream of the business.

OVER THE RIVER OF DROOPING EYES.

Chicago Interior.

Over the river of drooping eyes
Is the wonderful land of dreams,
Where lilies grow as white as snow,
And fields of green and warm winds blow
And the tall reeds quiver, all in a row—
And no one ever cries;
For its a beautiful place for boys and girls,
And there's no scolding, and lots of noise,
And no lost balls or broken toys—
Over the river of Drooping Eyes
Is the beautiful land of dreams.
Over the river of Drooping Eyes
In the wonderful land of dreams,
There are horns to blow and drums to beat,
And plenty of candy and cakes to eat,
And no one ever cleans his feet,
And no one ever tires!
There are plenty of grass plots for play,
And birds and bees they throng all day,
Oh, wouldn't you like to go and stay
Over the river of Drooping Eyes
In the beautiful land of dreams?

General Alejandro Ybarra, ex-minister of war in Venezuela, who was in New York recently, is one of the most prominent men in Venezuelan affairs. It was he who assisted in tearing down the Guzman Blanco idol in Venezuela, and his name has been prominently mentioned as a candidate for the presidency. This honor he has sturdily declined, however, and he says that he will not run for that office until certain things are accomplished in Venezuela in the way of turning Great Britain out of the land which the Venezuelans say she has unlawfully encroached upon.

The Berlin city railway has experimentally introduced automatic ticket sellers at the stations of secondary importance. The apparatus used is consideraby wider than other slot machines in use before, and contains a number of slots for tickets to various destinations. If the supply is exhausted the money is returned by pressing a button just beneath the slot, return being made only if no ticket was delivered by the apparatus. The general introduction of these small machines in the suburban stations for commuters trains will result in a considerable saving to the railroad company.

The Midnight Hour.—"William," she said in terror, "the clock has just struck thirteen."

"Has it?" he replied, with a yawn.

"Yes. Isn't it dreadful?"

"No. It's all right."

"You must get rid of it. I won't have it around the house."

"It's none of my clock," was the impatient response. "You bought it yourself, you know."

There was silence for a time, then she remarked complacently:

"It's all right, William."

"What's all right?"

"The clock. It's a bargain clock, I guess the man threw in the extra strike for good measure."—Washington Star.

A church has been organized in Bollinger county, Mo., with Ida Deckard as chief divinity. She is young, fair haired and given to seeing visions. Her neighbors, rude, unlettered, superstitiously devout, believe her to be an angel in human form. They worship her as such, and the "church" is based upon their faith in her. The girl is apparently single-minded and sincere. From her trances she awakens with messages for the faithful, messages claiming sometimes to be from the Deity himself, guiding them as he guided the patriarchs of old. Also, she brings word from the blessed dead in Heaven—according to the belief of her followers—and from lost souls in Hades. Her communications are listened to by these primitive people with all the reverence due to anointed sainthood. The "new church" of the mountains has now a membership of about one hundred—a centurian band of mountaineer neighbors, firm and ardent in their remarkable faith. They propose from now on to "proselyte" for their church and to spread their belief throughout the world.

It is rumored that the reason Pierre Lorillard has recently disposed of so much of his New York property is because he intends to make his home in England. The rumor could not be substantiated, but a family connection of Mr. Lorillard's says that he has heard that Mr. Lorillard had expressed such intention. Two years ago Pierre Lorillard sold his residence at Fifth avenue and Thirty-sixth street. Recently he sold most of his stable of racing horses to William K. Vanderbilt, and now it is said that Mr. Lorillard is trying to sell his New Jersey estate and his famous houseboat in Florida.

TWO LIVES SAVED

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had Consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her, and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thomas Eggers, 139 Florida street, San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching Consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in Coughs and Colds. Free trial bottle at Chas. Rogers' Drug Store. Regular size 50 cents and $1.00.

Every man who has an eye for beauty will solemnly endorse the sentiments uttered about the hideous bags called bloomers by the physicians in convention in Detroit. A GOOD WORD

Mr. J. J. Kell, Sharpsburg, Pa.
Dear Sir: I am glad to say a good word for Krause's Headache Capsules. After suffering for over three years with acute neuralgia and its consequent insomnia (which seemed to baffle the efforts of some of our best physicians) you suggested this remedy which gave me almost instant relief. Words fail to express the praise I should like to bestow on Krause's Headache Capsules

They Lack Life

There are twines sold to fishermen on the Columbia river that stand in the same relationship to Marshall's Twine as a wooden image does to the human being—they lack strength—life—evenness—and lasting qualities. Don't fool yourself into the belief that other twines besides Marshall's will do "just as well." They won't. They cannot.

IS THERE?
—o—
Is there a man with heart so cold,
That from his family would withhold
The comforts which they all could find
In articles of FURNITURE of the right kind.

And we would suggest at this season, nice Sideboard, Extension Table, or set of Dining Chairs. We have the largest and finest line ever shown in the city and at prices that cannot fail to please the closest buyers.
