NO REPRESENTATIVE CANDIDATE.

We do not pretend even to guess who the Democratic convention nominee for president will be, but no possible choice will represent the Democratic party, not even Dryden's butt, who was everything by fits, and nothing long. When Marion Butler was twitted in the senate the other day for representing a political fusion of Populists and Republicans, he asked somebody to name a single plank to which the Democratic party as a body would agree to cling. Nobody took up his challenge at the time, and nobody has tackled this job since, so far as we have seen. The Democratic party is split apart so widely and diversely that no living man can straddle it or represent it.

Just suppose that Richard Olney should be set up, a conservative gentleman of the patriarch mould, viewing the common people with the distrust of supercilious intelligence, a typical corporation lawyer, the attorney for the whisky trust until he was selected as attorney general to enforce the law against trusts which he had declared to be unconstitutional. How can such a candidate stand for the growling Western granger or the tobacco-chewing Southern "cracker," or the labor union man of the North, entirely out of touch with him in affiliations and instincts?

Or how would Bayard do, the representative of the old slave-holding aristocracy, naturally accepting the old Athenian conception of a republic made up of select citizens and serving helots, an American born a century too late for comfort, the devotee of a dictatorial ruler of "a violent people," the ambassador who misrepresents Americans in his congenial abode among the fastidious nobles of England? What a representative he would be of the great Irish-American Democratic wing, or of Democracy without a capital D!

Or take Hill, the bogey man of the mugwump reserve, the champion of Tammany and the saloon, the condenser of political principle into the unprincipled nut-shell, "I am a Democrat," the man who is ready to sacrifice anything except Hill, the politician who would shamelessly face to every point of the political compass in the time of one revolving moon—how will he suit the self-respecting, patriotic, Southern Democrats of true American descent, or the high-principled, old-fashioned Democrats and the independent voters of the North?

Or, grant that the masses of Southern and Western Democracy control the convention, as they certainly may, and who will their candidate be? Take their really representative men, like Crisp of Georgia and Bland of Missouri. Will these recognized champions of the free silver coinage cause find favor in Wall street, the regular purveyor of the sinews of Democratic campaigns, or can they enlist the support of the gold standard Democrats of the North, protesting so pretentiously their claim to be the only reliable defenders of the nation's currency and credit?

Even if the phenomenon of the Bay state, the precocious and politically seductive William E. Russell, be nominated, how will his doctrine of covert consideration for the industries that have made the wealth of Massachusetts appeal to the rampant free traders of the Roger Q. Mills stripe, and how will his well-known representation of the views of State street attach the votes of the woolly West and disgusted South? We observe that one inspired idiot, who has found somehow a vent-hole in a Northern newspaper, predicts that the nomination of this Democratic prodigy would make four New England states doubtful in the next election. We credit the young ex-governor with too much keen political sense to daub his wings in any such mess of taffy.

JAPAN AS A MANUFACTURING RIVAL.

A recent Tokyo letter from Colonel Cockerill to the New York Herald will attract the attention of American producers and manufacturers. It appears from the colonel's observations that the Japanese are not only learned and are making strenuous use of the military and naval teachings of the West, but are evincing a determination to follow up their conquests on the sea and in the field by advances in the business of mercantile activity, commerce and manufactures. In a generation or so, if the Japanese continue as they have begun, the world will have a powerful business rival in the Orient.

But still, time enough to come if our transcontinental railroad companies see their best interests. Japan promises to be a great customer for American cotton and wool; but, on the other hand, she can manufacture so cheaply that she will be able to place the finished goods on our own and other markets at prices that will paralyze the many Manchesters of the older civilizations. The Japanese spirit of today, Colonel Cockerill says, is to build and create everything possible at home, and to not permit a dollar to go abroad which can be kept in Japan. This, by the way, is the Republican doctrine of protection exactly, and a pretty good policy for this country as well as Japan.

A PUZZLED COMPLAINANT.

"Puzzled," a subscriber who claims to have paid rents in Astoria for fifteen years, writes to the Astorian in the following terms:

"I hear much about the building of good homes for respectable people, but so far it has not got beyond paper, and most of us are compelled to linger along in semi-hovels while we see on all sides the raising up of new saloons and new dance halls. Why is this?"

This is a question that the "capitalists" of the city are able to answer much better than the Astorian. That our correspondent's statement is true nobody will deny. We are not overstating the case when we say that out of the total population of Astoria there are three hundred and fifty families who are compelled to put up with filthy, moss-grown shacks for want of something better, and who would move out of their present quarters tomorrow if they could secure houses that were fit to live in. The largest property owners of Astoria, with very few exceptions, possess rented property over one-half of which consists of mildewed, unsightly shacks, a disgrace to themselves and an eyesore to the city. Places that have been tottering for years have been made to yield a rental which every twelve months more than equals their total value.

A miserable half-shingled roof begins to leak; it is patched, the capitalist landlord as often as not acting as an amateur carpenter and doing the job himself. A chimney falls, and the landlord becomes a bricklayer, taking, of course, due precaution to use the most decayed bricks he can find. A door rots off its hinges, and after a few months of persistent entreaty from the tenant it is put in place again with lead nails. And thus he finds in the "deepest depths of his picayune economy a deeper still."

His accumulated savings out of the rents of his weather-board huts, and from the pockets of citizens who are forced to live in them for want of something better, he puts into new buildings dedicated to the uses of vice in all its forms. It is worse than silly to think that he will ever change his policy or better his morals. Our only chance of being lifted out of the rut and of seeing this class of vampires bankrupt and their revenues shut off is in attracting capital from elsewhere. Once the true situation is made fully apparent to moneyed men of business sense, our city will contain all the good residence property it needs.

THE CLACKAMAS HATCHERY.

Although a full record of all proceedings in connection with the formation of the hatchery on the Upper Clackamas river has been published more than once in the Astorian and other papers of the state, there are a great many people who are still in ignorance of the actual efforts of the individual cannerymen to assist the proposition. For the benefit of these readers we present this morning a complete list of the cannery firms operating on both sides of the Columbia river, with the amount of money each has subscribed toward the project:

A. Booth Packing Co., $1,000; Eureka and Epicure Packing Co., $1,000; Samuel Elmore, $1,000; J. O. Hanthorn & Co., $1,000; Astoria Packing Co., $1,000; Pillar Rock Packing Co., $1,000; P. M. Warren & Co., $1,000; Aberdeen Packing Co., $1,000; J. W. & V. Cook, $500; David Morgan, $500. None of the following firms have subscribed: Cutting Packing Co., Fishermen's Packing Co., P. J. McGowan & Sons, J. G. Megler, Hapgood & Co., William Hume.

One of the great questions today before congress, and which is almost, if not quite, equal in importance to the questions of finance and tariff, is the settlement of the problem of the relations between railroad companies and the public and the maintenance of stable rates of traffic. An article appeared in yesterday's issue on the subject, and, while there is hardly room for controversy as to the rights of carriers, as well as the people, it is plain to everyone that the time has now arrived in the United States when definite action should be taken by congress and such laws enacted as will mete out justice to all. Railroad companies are entitled to fair earnings; the people are entitled to fair rates of transportation. Under existing trade conditions there appears to be but one way in which the roads can secure remunerative earnings, and that is by combination. There is, perhaps, only one way in which the people can secure equitable rates, and that is by legislation. The solution of the entire difficulty, and the placing of the railroad companies and the people on a common ground of justice, would appear to be by means of combination, properly restricted by legislation. The interstate commerce act, as it now stands might be most effectually amended, so as to make it a governmental railway clearing house, with full authority to enforce obligations as between transportation companies, and a court of final jurisdiction as to what constitutes equitable rates, both as between individuals and communities. No greater calamity can befall a community or a country than to have its great railway systems in a state of bankruptcy. The prosperity of any people under modern laws of commerce depends very largely upon the prosperity of its carrier companies and the stability of rates and transportation.

A Southern dispatch says, with characteristic recklessness in the use of the superlative, that Dr. John A. Brooks, the late Prohibition leader of Missouri, now living in Memphis, has been called to the London Tabernacle, "the largest Christian church in Europe." But since there is only one church of the Christian denomination in Europe, it possibly may be the largest.

Mr. Cleveland has contributed several phrases to our popular speech, but his last one, flung with the force of a paving stone against the glass window of a newspaper office, is his best. He must have been boiling over when he said the office was "maliciously mendacious."

Don't invite disappointment by experimenting. Depend upon One Minute Cough Cure and you have immediate relief. It cures croup. The only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. Chas. Rogers.

STATE NEWS.

Interesting Items Culled From Oregon's Leading Newspapers.

The death rate among the Indians of the Klamath reservation is reported to be very high owing to the whooping cough epidemic, and the redskins having returned to the aboriginal sweat-house treatment of the disease.

The Polk county tax levy is 14 mills, of which 4 8-10 mills is for the state; 4 2-10 for the county and 5 for schools. This is an increase of 1 mill over last year's rate. The county's valuation has been left by the state board at $14,977,207. Umatilla county's is 18 mills.

Southern Oregon is coming to the front quite prominently in connection with the revival of gold mining. Two giants are running night and day at the Hampton and Lewis mine on Grave creek. It is one of the largest placer mines in the state, having a water supply of more than 4,500 miner's inches, which will be increased 1,000 inches by next season.

The expenses of the public schools of Del Norte county during 1895 were $8,745.45, according to the annual report of the school superintendent. Of that amount $6,700 was for teachers' salaries, $1,141 for contingent expenses, $864 for buildings, $104 for library books and $125 for school apparatus. The average number of months taught in the various districts was 7 2-15. The average salary paid teachers was $66.42 per month.

A company of the enterprising business men of Bandon and the lower river are investigating a recent coal discovery at Riverton in view of opening it up in good shape. Yesterday a party consisting of J. P. Tupper, Peter Loggie, J. M. Upton, Rube Mast and Captain J. Parker visited Riverton to investigate the new find, which promises to excel anything in the line of coal in Coos county. The mine is being opened by Mr. Gleaves, of Coquille. The parties named above have taken hold of the enterprise and will organize a company with $150,000 capital to work the mine.—Recorder.

The severe storm of the past week delayed our newspaper mails, and for three days no papers were received here. The fellows who were keeping close track of England began to get nervous for fear John Bull had annexed New York, and Governor Lord was about to be deluged with letters offering to raise companies of deer skinners and gopher hunters, when the papers arrived and relieved the strain by announcing that England was busy down in Africa. Some of the warriors have enlisted for the Chetco war, while others will wait and fight the fight that is bloodless—in June next.—Webfoot Gazette.

A sensation was created in colored society circles the first of the week by the attempt of a married man to elope with a woman from Beaver Hill, says the Marshfield Sun. They came to Marshfield together, but shortly after their arrival the man's wife appeared upon the scene and tried to induce the deputy prosecuting attorney to institute legal proceedings, but he could not see it that way. The eloping couple started for Empire City on the Yarrow, but, fearing interruption on their journey by officials in Empire City, got off at the stage landing, and returned to Marshfield, giving it up as a bad job.

The Roseburg Review says: "The rich placer gold deposits of the lower Rogue river and Mule creek are fast being developed, and it is being practically demonstrated that they have not been overestimated in point of value. The trail to the mines leaves the Southern Pacific railroad at West Fork, in the southern part of this county, and on account of the snow in the mountains it is sometimes a hard trip in the midst of winter. It is said, however, that a wagon road, or at least a much better trail, might be constructed into this district at no great cost, provided the people of Douglas and Curry counties would take hold."

"While good roads are not very much in evidence in any part of Oregon, the society organized in this city for their establishment is decidedly to the fore. It has already provided itself with an attractive clubhouse and furnished the people of Portland with the best operatic entertainment ever subscribed by home talent, and just as soon as the proper season for road building opens it will probably extend its energy to the promotion of that industry. May its success as a provider of good highways be as emphatic as its triumphs as a social factor."—Portland Telegram. We heartily join in the wish. But we have precious little hope of ever seeing any permanent highways in Oregon as a result of billiard and bowling alley practice and high society entertainments. The way to build roads, we wish to again be permitted to remark, is to build them.—Statesman.

PIRATE'S BURIED GOLD.

Treasure Believed to Be Hidden Away in Louisiana.

A story comes from Lake Charles, Louisiana, that not long ago a Mr. Palmer, of this place, purchased a tract of land situated on the south bank of English Bayou, at its junction with the Calcasieu. This property is about three miles from town and is commonly known as the "English Bayou Bluffs." To all intents this gentleman made the deal simply for purposes of speculation. So it may be that Mr. Palmer was overwhelmed by the legend which was told him a few days ago.

He was one morning in his office, when an old Creole came in and introduced himself. After a few minor remarks he suddenly inquired if Mr. Palmer had not made a deal for the land about the mouth of the bayou. On being answered in the affirmative he told this story:

"Along in the first part of the century things were rocky in these parts. There was no town here then, and, with the exceptions of a few scattered ranches, the country was held by the Quelquesho and Choctaw Indians. The Calcasieu river, however, and its tributaries were in possession of the pirate Lafitte. For years he made this section one of his hiding places, and a secure one it was, for once across the bar with his clipper built schooners he was beyond the reach of the average deep-water cruiser. But it is said that on his occasion his pursuers crossed the bar and chased him up the river, for he sailed up as far as English Bayou, and there on these high banks, in the angle formed by the two streams, he buried $600,000 in gold. Then, going about 200 yards further up the Calcasieu, he sunk his vessel, and, with his men, took to the dense swamps, leaving his pursuers no clew as to his whereabouts, and they probably never knew what became of the vessel or its crew."

Whether this man spoke the truth or not is not known, but in all probability there is some ground for the legend. At all events, the story leaked out, and one morning before a week had passed, freshly dug holes in the bluff showed that some one had been prospecting for the lost gold.

Up the Calcasieu, about a mile from this spot, there is a locality which has always borne a special charm for the fortune hunter as well as for those in search of ancient legends. As with the other place, Lafitte is the hero of the tale, but the treasure repose at the bottom of the river. It seems that the pirate suddenly found himself in a tight place with one of his vessels. On board were heaps of costly jewelry—diamonds, rubies and pearls—which he had taken from merchantmen on the high seas. Either from a notion of his own or because he did not have time to do otherwise, Lafitte filled one of his cannon with this fabulous wealth, and, sealing it up, threw it overboard in a bend of the river.

"Father," said the young man, as he knelt before the venerable confessor, "thou knowest I have sinned. Through human weakness and ill-curbed passions have I sinned. I have come to do penance and gain pardon."

"My son," replied the old man, "there is no pardon to be gained or given in a day for the misdeeds of a year. Thou art on the eve of thy marriage to a virtuous soul. Confess to her and thou will have no need of churchly penance or extraneous punishment."

J. W. Pierce, Republic, Iowa, says: "I have used One Minute Cough Cure in my family and for myself, with results so entirely satisfactory that I can hardly find words to express myself as to its merits. I will never fail to recommend it to others, on every occasion that presents itself." Chas. Rogers.

THE OASIS OF THE COLORADO DESERT

A New Health Resort

BELOW THE LEVEL OF THE SEA

Absolutely Dry and Pure Tropical Climate

Pronounced by Physicians the most Favorable in America for Sufferers from . . .

Lung Diseases and Rheumatism

Many Remarkable Cures

The objections urged against Indio in the past by the large numbers who otherwise would have been glad to take advantage of its beneficial climate, has been a lack of suitable accommodation. The Southern Pacific Company takes pleasure in announcing that several have just been erected at Indio station, that will be rented to applicants at reasonable rates. They are furnished with modern conveniences, supplied with pure artesian water, and situated as to give occupants all the advantages to be derived from a more or less protracted residence in this delightful climate.

(From the San Francisco Argonaut.)

"In the heart of the great desert of the Colorado—which the Southern Pacific road traverses—there is an oasis called Indio, which, in our opinion, is the sanitarium of the earth. We believe, from personal investigation, that for certain invalids, there is no spot on this planet so favorable."

G. T. Stewart, M. D., writes: "The purity of the air, and the eternal sunshine, fill one with wonder and delight. * * * Nature has accomplished so much that there remains but little for man to do. As to its possibilities as a health resort, —here is the most perfect sunshine, with a temperature always pleasant, a perfectly dry soil for rain is an unknown factor; pure oxygen, dense atmosphere and pure water. What more can be desired? It is the place, above all others, for lung troubles, and a paradise for rheumatics. Considering the number of sufferers who have been cured, I have no hesitancy in recommending this genial oasis as the haven of the afflicted."

HUGHES & CO.

EXTENDED SYMPATHY.

"Do unto others as you would have others do unto you," is sympathetically shown in the following lines, the presumption being that sympathy is born, or akin to pain or sorrow:

"Gentlemen:—Please send Krause's Headache Capsules as follows: Two boxes to Flora Seay, Havanna, N. Dak. Two boxes to Lillie Wilcox, Brookland, N. Dak. I have always been a great sufferer from headache and your Capsules are the only thing that relieves me." Yours very truly,

FLORA SEAY,
Havana, N. Dak.

They Lack Life

There are twines sold to fishermen on the Columbia river that stand in the same relationship to Marshall's Twine as a wooden image does to the human being—they lack strength—life—evenness—and lasting qualities. Don't fool yourself into the belief that other twines besides Marshall's will do "just as well." They won't. They cannot.
