The theory of Indian Louie as to the death of the Heikman party is a more plausible one than that of the doctors. The trouble with expert testimony in cases like the one in question is that it starts out to sustain a preconceived theory. The first conclusion as to the death of the men was, naturally, that it was due to poison. The doctors started out on that assumption and hunted for evidence to sustain it. It is true they found it, but while it tends to establish that preconceived theory, could it not yet be just as well be applied to an opposite or conflicting theory. We do not believe either Dr. Fulton or Dr. Tuttle is very positive in his opinion that the men came to their death from poison—it only looks that way, and at the time of the examination there was no more plausible theory. Both doctors state that the stomachs of the men were inflamed, BUT WERE EMPTY, except for a slight trace of onion. Now the Astorian would not presume to put its opinion in such a matter against that of physicians of such admitted learning and experience as Doctors Fulton and Tuttle, but mightn't inflammation of the stomach arise from other irritating causes besides poison? Another thing we would like to ask the doctors: Isn't the empty condition of the stomachs rather incompatible with the theory that death was due to eating canned meats or vegetables since one of the symptoms of the action of the peculiar poisons in such substances is an arrest of the process of digestion, leaving almost the entire mass of food unchanged in the stomach? The Astorian does not mean to criticise the esteemed physicians who conducted the post mortem, but merely ventures to suggest a more careful consideration of the practical woodsman's opinion along with other hypotheses advanced to account for such a mysterious series of fatalities.

PRAYER AS A POISON CURE.

That "faith without works is dead," is an old Bible truth declared by the Apostle James, which has just had an emphatic exemplification in the city of Newark, where there appears to be a "Faith Cure" colony of more or less power for harm.

It appears that a young woman—she was only 22—named Dora England, in a fit of melancholia superinduced by a quarrel with her lover, swallowed paris green. She kept the fact from her mother until her deathly sickness attracted the elder woman's attention. This was two hours later. Then the mother, instead of sending for a physician, sent for one of Newark's Christian Scientist leaders, a woman. All this "divine healer" did was to pray over the girl for an hour. Then the faith of the family seems to have weakened, and they called in a regular physician, who administered antidotes and sent the patient to the hospital. Heroic efforts were made to save her and they nearly succeeded, but a relapse came and the girl died. Too much precious time had been lost and the poison had taken too firm a hold.

It seems that the faith cure woman prayed over the girl when first attacked with the malady, but without success, and resort was had, as in the later instance, to the regular physician, who succeeded in toning up the girl's nerves. But she became fighty again, perhaps sufficient care was not taken to divert her mind from her supposed trouble.

It seems a strange infatuation that possesses these people who seek to heal all physical ills by mental means, unaided by other treatment, despite the fact that there are no authentic recorded instances of successful treatment of this sort. "Mind treatment for imaginary ills may be well enough sometimes, although in this case it does not seem to have had any result—but the power of mind over matter, of which we hear so much from the philosophers, appears to be inoperative in cases where the physical trouble is due to deadly poisons, or, in fact, in any case where disease has taken a good hold. The parents of this unhappy girl can blame themselves largely for her death, for had prompt and rational measures been taken when it was found she had taken poison, she would more than likely have been alive today. The facts deserves wide-spread comment and publication as a warning and example to others.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

It isn't much trouble for a really healthy man to be good humored. Jollity and exhuberant health are a proverbial combination. The hearty man who is always laughing doesn't have any trouble with his digestion. It has been said that laughing makes people healthy. The truth is that health makes people laugh.

It is impossible to estimate the tremendous influence of health upon human character. A man with a headache will not be in a happy, contented frame of mind. A man who suffers from a weak stomach and an impaired digestion will sit and grumble through the best meal ever prepared. A bilious man who is not a bore, is deserving of a place in a museum. A nervous man who is not petulent and fault-finding is a curiosity. All these conditions lead to grave diseases, when the victim becomes not only disagreeable, but dependent as well. A wise wife will realize that while the old saying that a "man's heart is in his stomach," is not literally true, it is a fact that his stomach sweetens or sours his character according as it is healthy or unhealthy. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best of medicines for the conditions described. It makes the weak stomach strong, the impaired digestion perfect, invigorates the liver, purifies and enriches the blood and tones the nerves. It tears down half-dead, inert tissues and replaces them with the firm muscular tissues of health. It builds new and healthy nerve fibres and brain cells. It dissipates nervousness and melancholy and imparts mental elasticity and courage. It is the best of all known medicines for nervous disorders.

"Through your skillful treatment I am once more a well man," writes J. N. Arnold, Esq., of Gandy, Logan Co. Nebr. "I suffered for years and could not find relief until I commenced taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I suffered with constipation and torpidity of liver which resulted in irritation of the prostate and inflammation of the bladder. I had only taken one bottle when I found great relief. The medicine has effected a permanent cure."
