OF BENEFIT TO ALL

Kasparilla is the name of a new remedy most successfully prescribed for a "world of troubles." For derangement of the digestive organs it is a natural corrective operating directly upon the liver and alimentary canal, gently but positively stimulating a healthy activity. Its beneficial influence extends, however, to every portion of the system, aiding in the processes of digestion and assimilation of food, promoting a wholesome natural appetite, correcting sour stomach, bad breath, irregularities of the bowels, constipation and the long list of troubles directly traceable to those unwholesome conditions. Kasparilla dispels drowsiness, headache, backache and despondency due to inactivity of the liver, kidneys and digestive tract. It is a strengthening tonic of the highest value.

THE DALTONS.

In those days, when the Indian Territory was almost exclusively a cattle country, with from Texas, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas still great herds there, and the country was taken up with big ranches containing thousands and thousands of acres, herding cattle was about the only occupation, and to become a cowboy and learn to rope and tie a steer was the first aspiration of the growing territorial youth. To aspire to be a good cowboy and finally foreman of a ranch was a laudable ambition. It was a free, easy, careless life, with few restraints and every man was practically his own master. If grass without asking, for all appearances did not turn out good cowboys, and the opportunities to drift into some other easy channel of employment were numerous and tempt one. It has been frequently observed that the emblem of the outlaw be with the cowboy. It may cowboy, they believed, outlaw. When a cowboy became dissatisfied and reckless enough, the direction quickly caught him as a possibility, and as the way there was an opening he became a bandit. It is well known in the territory that the older boys of the Dalton gang were responsable, well-to-do men, while the younger had furnished the outlaws.—George Elmer Cobb in The Pacific Monthly for September.
