Answers Ad. After Five Years

Ludwig, Bauman & Co., a large New York furniture concern, recently received a reply to an ad. printed five years ago. The answer came from Australia, the writer finding the ad. in an old paper which he found in an old trunk.

The Cottage Grove Commercial Club has received replies to ads. printed during the first of its publicity campaigns years ago.

A Baltimore firm had a more remarkable experience than this. One day it received an order from India for an article that was advertised twenty-seven years ago.

THIS LEADS ONE TO BELIEVE that an advertisement lives till the last sheet of paper on which it is printed is destroyed. As a general thing, however, advertisements are destroyed a few days after they are distributed. The wise merchant, therefore, does not depend on last year's, last month's or even last week's advertising. He advertises regularly and persistently, not only for new customers but to hold old ones. Newspaper advertising is the most effective and the cheapest; and advertising in the Cottage Grove Sentinel (The Live Wire Newspaper) will do much to help you sell more goods to old customers and to bring new ones to your store.

The Sentinel reaches four times as many people in the Cottage Grove country as any other paper, daily or otherwise. On the basis of circulation its rates are not half as high as those of any other paper covering the same field.

Society

Mrs. H. F. Alden gave two interesting affairs last week, entertaining groups of her friends Friday and Saturday afternoons.

Mrs. F. W. Robbins and Mrs. S. V. Allison entertained the Constellation Club at the Masonic Temple Thursday afternoon. The afternoon passed in needlework and conversation was most pleasant and the hostesses served a delightful luncheon.

A party of friends pleasantly surprised Mrs. Lyllian Bryan Monday evening previous to her leaving tomorrow for an eastern visit. Refreshments were served and games played. The guests were Messrs. and Mesdames O. L. Nichols, Van Allison, Ben Groff, Harry Short, Bert Richmond, Horace Cochran, F. L. Ingram, W. B. Cooper, C. E. Frost, Elbert Bede, C. E. Umphrey, S. L. Godard.

Mrs. J. H. Chambers entertained the high school graduating class last evening in honor of her son Victor, a member of the class. Progressive rook was played, Miss Marian Hooper and Robert Atkinson winning the prizes. Mrs. Chambers served a luncheon late in the evening.

About thirty members of the Rebekah Club spent a delightful afternoon with Mrs. S. W. Boyd Friday at her home on Coast Fork where they were joined in the evening by their husbands and all spent a pleasant evening together. During the afternoon the guests were entertained with their needlework and in conversation and in the evening music and games were enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd served a delicious buffet supper, consisting of sandwiches, salads, strawberries with whipped cream, several kinds of cake and coffee. The affair was without doubt one of the most enjoyable given this year.

About fifty members of the Junior League of the Methodist church enjoyed a picnic at the German picnic grounds west of the city Saturday. Members of the church furnished automobiles and other conveyances to take the children to the picnic spot.

FADS AND FANCIES.

By Harriette

Large hairpins of pretty design studded with brilliants are justly popular for evening wear.

A very seasonable recipe is that for the delicious spiced rhubarb which is given herewith. This is an extremely delightful jam:

To seven pounds of rhubarb use the same amount of sugar, one pint of vinegar, ½ teaspoonful each of ground cloves and cinnamon, two pounds of raisins and the juice and grated rind of three oranges. Cook ½ hour and seal in small jars or glasses.

If the children are fond of cookies there are none which are better and more wholesome than those made by the following recipe:

Sugar Cookies.

One cup of butter, two cups of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of milk, and flour enough to roll very thin. Sprinkle with sugar after they are cut, and bake.

If you wish to have fine chrysenthemums when autumn comes, now is the time to procure your cuttings.

For one who expects to travel there is a delightful suggestion in the little "suitcase towels" which have just come into vogue. These are obtainable in both turkish towelling and in the linen towellings, and can be ornamented in the usual ways. These are also very popular with the men for use as shaving towels.

The new "kiss-me-quick" curl is the latest word in hairdressing. The hair is drawn upward and done in a high knot on the top of the head, the ears are left entirely uncovered rather than entirely covered as has been the style recently, and the "kiss-me-quick-curl" is a tightly pasted down one that falls just in front of the ears. It is most quaint. Many extremists are wearing large hoop earrings with this new coiffure.

Very attractive white "nubuck" "sneakers" are being worn by the younger girls for informal and sporting wear.

Among the cunningest and quaintest of the flowers which one sees on the mid-summer hats are those made of brass or gilded tin. Usually these flowers take the form of very stiff, old-fashioned looking roses.

Some of the new sash ribbons for the summer frocks are most unusual. They are of ratine in cotton, and of other cotton materials rather than of the silk and satins to which society has become accustomed. They come chiefly in extremely gay floral patterns and are remarkably effective on the dainty summer gowns.

The fashion for serving elaborate luncheons or dinners for afternoon affairs has quite died out and at present one is given a cup of tea, coffee or chocolate and a couple of sandwiches or piece of cake, or merely a cooling ice at afternoon functions, rather than the elaborate course luncheons which were served a few years ago after the bridge or five hundred game.

Attractive girdles of shirred ribbon are beingdisplayed in a local window. These girdles are made up in a number of different color combinations and are very pretty and stylish.

A pretty finish for a turkish towel is crochet in either white or the color corresponding to the border, if there is a colored border. This crochet is worked into the towel itself, in what is known as the old-fashioned knitting cotton.

If you are doing over your sleeping room this spring, a suggestion as to a new way of rehabilitating your old, and perhaps not altogether pleasing dresser or bureau, might not be amiss. This is what one woman did: She had an old and really ugly dresser of impossible design. She first knocked off all the pasted on "carving" and had the objectional curly-cues sawed off smoothly. After she had righted the lines and removd the unsightly embellishments she enameled the dresser white (the popular french gray enamel may be used if desired), and after it was thoroughly dry laid on the top of the dresser a slab of plate glass, the size of the top, under which was carefully fitted a piece of the cretonne in which the hangings and day-bedspread were done. The effect was astounding in the change which it made in the whole appearance of the room, as the dresser had been the last really impossible article in the room. Dressers are rather costly things and when one can accomplish a change like this one, one feels well repaid.

All programs of radical legislation seem to be off in Oregon, and the recent primaries served a warning to politicians to let industries and business alone in the future.

J. A. McEachren & Co., Seattle, have the contract for constructing the first unit of the Astoria public docks, to cost $135,715.

The new Meier & Frank building at Portland is to cost $1,250,000. The steel superstructure is to be fabricated at Portland.

The new high school at McMinnville will cost $30,000.

The defeat of all candidate with fads and fancies in the recent primaries indicates that Oregon is coming into a more sane condition.

Running Water.

Have you ever noticed, when the water has almost all run out of the bathtub, how the light particles on the surface seem then to race out much faster than the water? As a matter of fact, they are traveling faster than most of the water, but no faster than that on the surface.

The reason is not far to seek. Running water, even in a river, goes at different rates, but fastest on the top surface right in the middle of the stream. Friction with the sides and bottom makes the water there go more slowly. So the light particles on top of the water in the bathtub, along with the surface water, rush ahead at a good rate.

This particular peculiarity in rivers is utilized by boatmen when they have to go up a swift stream; they always paddle up near the bank. And at curves, as the water swings outward, they take the inside bank, for there the water is almost still. On the other hand, in coming down the very center of the stream is chosen.—St. Louis Republic.

Washington Official Life.

Dinners and social functions are conspicuous features of Washington life. The new senator or congressman always feels that he must keep up the pace, but his older colleagues do not hesitate to send in their regrets now and then. One senator whose young daughters make severe demands upon him as an escort to official functions, said:

"I have cut out all dinners and functions except those I feel under obligations to attend in my official capacity.

"I have done this for two reasons: First, because I have not time to attend them. I have too much to do. Second, Mr. Spofford, so long librarian of congress, once told me that most public men and army and navy officers who died in Washington 'dug their graves with their own teeth'—a saying which I have taken to heart."—National Magazine.

A Chinese Superstition.

When a Chinese baby takes a nap people think its soul is having a rest—going out for a long walk perhaps. If the nap is a very long one the mother is frightened. She is afraid that her baby's soul has wandered too far away and cannot find its way home. If it doesn't come back, of course the baby will never awaken. Sometimes men are sent out into the streets to call the baby's name over and over again, as though it were a real child lost. They hope to lead the soul back home. If a baby sleeps while it is being carried from one place to another the danger of losing the soul along the way is very great. So whoever carries the little one keeps saying its name out loud, so that the soul will not stray away. They think of the soul as a bird hopping along after them.

Clever Elephant.

"Elephants are clever animals," said a trainer, "and I once had one that could read. He was a quarrelsome beast, and one day he got into a scrape with the Bengal tiger, and before we could get them separated he had his trunk badly damaged. After the scrimmage was over the elephant broke loose and started down the street fast. 'He's going wild!' somebody shouted. 'Don't you believe it,' says I. Now, where do you suppose that elephant went to?"

"Went to the surgeon's, I suppose. Can't you get up a better yarn?"

"No, he didn't go to the surgeon's. He went straight to a little shop where a sign read, 'Trunks repaired while you wait.' Of course he had made a mistake. But what do you expect of a poor dumb brute?"—London Globe.

Tale of Two Dogs.

Sir John Sebright, a prominent society man of the early nineteenth century, owned a remarkable dog. In "Coke of Norfolk" Mrs. A. M. W. Stirling relates that "Sir John Sebright often brought a favorite dog to Holkham, who was remarkably clever at learning tricks. Lord Erskine also possessed a dog which he declared the cleverer of the two. A wager was laid as to which animal in the course of a twelvemonth could be taught the most extraordinary trick. The trial took place at Holkham at the end of a year. Erskine's dog cleverly took a roast oyster out of the fire without injuring himself, but Sir John's dog actually carried a glass of wine without spilling a drop to any gentleman in the room pointed out to him."

Nothing Too Good For Her.

Mrs. Newlygilt—That's a pretty good looking one. Show me that. The Piano Salesman—That's one of our finest instruments. I sold one just like it to Mrs. De Frazzle. Solid mahogany, seven and a half octaves. Mrs. Newlygilt—Seven and a half? Send me one with eight.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Something Comic.

Brownbigge (to waitress who has handed him a newspaper)—Ain't yer got nothing comic? I likes to have something funny to look at while I'm a-heating. Waitress—There's a looking glass straight in front of you, sir.—London Tit-Bits.

Making Headway.

Nervous Traveler (to seat companion)—How fast would you say you were traveling? Companion (who has been flirting with the girl across the way)—About a smile a minute.—Life.

No Need of It.

"Don't you ever play cards at your house?"

"Never. We got so many other things to quarrel about."—Detroit Free Press.
