THE NEW MACADAM.

How Road Builders Have Improved on Scotchman's Idea.

IDEAL HIGHWAY NECESSITIES

Careful Grading, Good Drainage, Substantial Foundation and a Wearing Surface Necessary For the Up to Date Macadamized Road.

In a recent speech on the construction and maintenance of macadam roads Austin B. Fletcher, secretary of the Massachusetts highway commission, said:

Macadam's road is a thing of the past. In fact, the road of the kind built by the Scotchman John Loudon Macadam and named in his honor has been obsolete in this country for some time.

Macadam knew nothing of machine broken stone, and he did not dream that a broken stone roadway could be made as smooth as a billiard table by the use of steam road rollers.

In those days when we speak of a macadam road we mean a road with the following characteristics:

A road with easy gradients, usually not exceeding a five foot rise in 100 feet of length.

A road with drainage appliances so perfect that substantially no water reaches the broken stone from below.

A road with a foundation consisting of either the natural soil, if suitable, otherwise of artificially placed gravel or unbroken stone, so that the foundation with the superimposed broken stone will have sufficient strength to distribute over the underlying soil any load to which the road is likely to be subjected.

A road with a wearing surface of two or more layers of broken stone, small in size, those at the bottom usually not more than two and one-half inches in diameter and those at the top generally varying from one and one-quarter inches to one-half inch in diameter, each course or layer compacted by spades, uniform in depth and rolled thoroughly with a steam roller before the next course is placed. By this process, the rolling being done on this layer, the stones become thoroughly compacted and the void spaces or interstices between the stones are largely eliminated. The final process consists in spreading over the surface of the upper layer of broken stone a thin covering of the screenings which result from the machine breaking of the stones and which consists of considerable proportion of fine dust. Upon finishing, or grouting, the screenings from each voids as nearly between the broken stones and filling the road with the stones solid.

So far as the treatment of macadam roads is concerned, the writer seems to be in the application of protective coats or coverings of a bituminous nature.

Before any of the bituminous materials are applied it is essential that the road surface be cleaned up and packed where necessary, rolled and swept clean of all dust. The bituminous materials are then applied hot by the road surface by means of spraying machines or gravity distributors or by hand in quantities varying from one-quarter to three-quarters of a gallon to the square yard and immediately covered evenly with sand, fine gravel or broken stone screenings.

The usual maintenance will be done by the use of renewing the covering periodically. Thus, it costs in a certain region, say, two cents per square yard per season. In this method no wear whatever will take place on the broken stone, and in a sense this process of the ordinary macadam road which takes the wear will therefore be only a foundation for the bituminous wearing coat.

The process has proved to avoid publicity in boulevards for traffic, and the nuisance of bituminous bridges, like the voids between the broken stones, would be necessary.

A good deal of work of this sort is being done now in an experimental way by taking the bituminous material with the broken stone before it is placed on the roadway or by giving the bituminous material first, the spaces between and spread the broken stone after it has been placed and partially rolled.

The use of the ordinary macadam road is probably due to be in certain parts of the country, and the heavy traffic is developing according to local conditions. In two years, it would be considered by any town the appropriate expenditure of the fund. The the national fund of thousands, walks, etc., and at the same time should receive a free circulation of air all around it. If the sun shines on the macadamized the glare patterns and the moisture are heard above the composition of the surrounding soil. In the same way the heat from the side of a building or from the surface of the ground may make the thermometer warmer than the free air.

The best place to organize a demonstration is in the center of a city which has two or three feet on a side, with a free opening to the north and south, leaving a double road, with an open between.

In one such a similar center to be second, or questioned, the road has an opening in the north wall of a building where the instrument will be placed as much as possible. Thus the main sun and from the feel of surrounding stones.

Another instrument used is recording, "automatic" conditions in the bulb gauge. And cylinders could be placed in an open space, where surrounding trees or buildings are the strength they not to stop the rain will indicate the amount of rainfall. An outlined in the sun with straight sides will serve the purpose. The rainfall is measured monthly, showing and reading in inches, a day and affecting how high the rain is second.

The ordinary rain measure of 3 inches and automatic of an inch may be used, but it seems to compare the results with the records of the weather bureau is to be used in a rain measure of 3 inches of an inch.

Such a simple rain gauge has the advantage that its method is not one that is liable to get out of order. It is frequently so small that it may be mounted on a post, or on a post in the yard, or on a post in the yard. The Southwest corner of the Dominion Land Office at St. Boniface, Section No. 1, 2, which point is 1 1/2 Chains West from the Southwest corner of Township 7 South, Range 1 West of the Willamette Meridian, and running thence West 20.75 Chains, thence South 15 Chains to the place of beginning, containing 30 acres more or less in Polk County, Oregon.—Dated, 3 a. m. and would be beneficial to said when the weather was warmer should be more the method of Dean Hayter, Esq., advance the best standard.

Proper Exposure of Thermometer, Plans For Rainfall Gauges.

No matter how good a thermometer may be, it will not indicate the true temperature of the air unless it is properly exposed. The variations in temperature reported by neighbors in discussing how cold or how warm it was at a given time are more frequently due to lack of uniformity in the exposure of the instruments than to errors in the instruments themselves or to actual differences in temperature at the various localities.

In a proper exposure the thermometer should be protected from the direct rays of the sun as well as from

WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION.

In September 1908, "Woman's Home Companion" assumed its final regular price of $1.50. The larger and better magazine and the increase in price have been endorsed during the past year both by our old friends and by our numbers and 100 thousand new readers. We are proud of the success of the Greater "Companion." But next year the "Companion" will be better still. It will be larger and better than ever and will contain new features never before attempted by a women's magazine. The greater "Woman's Home Companion" at the Dollar-and-a-Half price will be the most interesting, the most useful and the most beautiful women's magazine published. With nearly a score of different departments for women, every one a specialty, the "Woman's Home Companion" is the best women's magazine in the world.

THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS

is the magazine which is permanently up-to-the-minute in reviews the topics of the day. Non-partisan in its attitude, international in its scope and judicially impartial in its findings, it is not only the busy man's shortcut to keeping abreast of the times, but the "necessary" magazine for people of culture and discretion. Each month Dr. Albert Shaw, editor-in-chief, reviews with a clarity and accuracy that are born only of a keen insight and a rare knowledge of men and affairs, in his previously illustrated articles, "The Progress of the World." "The Review's" character sketches of notable people are invariably interesting, of world-wide fame are its articles and comprehensive reviews of the events which the expression of the world.

McCLURE'S MAGAZINE

Optimistic, sympathetic, progressive and fearless, "McClure's" is admittedly the real exponent of the "Good Good Time" in the magazine world. Its point of artistic excellence and its every month, "McClure's" leads, is distinct in the best—being the most popular class that of any other periodical magazine on the market. Every cover is never you will find a distinctive snap and sparkle in "McClure's" that will compel your attention. The problem articles are treated not only for their timeliness, but in straight-from-the-shoulder manner and a regard for the truth, and when "McClure's" deems it necessary to point the searching finger of scorn and shame at the social, political or moral evils of the day, it is done in a fearless manner, that "McClure's" is the most talked about and very famous. That is why it
