Monmouth Meditations

Exit the big pumpkin from the stage while the call boy is making his departure in search of the Thanksgiving Turkey.

Selling rug or debating an armistice, the Turk insists on a regular schedule of bargaining.

It takes more than a general rain to spoil an Oregon fair.

It is sad but true that many good people would think it perfectly consistent to go to war in the Orient in the name of the Prince of Peace.

The start made by the Normal this year is an auspicious one. President Landers, in one year, has acquired the confidence of the students as well as his fellow citizens in Monmouth. He has progressive ideals and is a good man to work with.

In appointing a woman 84 years of age as U. S. senator the governor of Georgia fixes it up so he can run for the job himself. Women as senators, however, promise soon to reach past the complimentary stage.

There were at least three editors in Polk county to whom the prospect of a free feed was not sufficient to entice them to Albany to listen to the views of Candidate Pierce Wednesday night. Thanks to thoughtful neighbors the square meal is no longer such a rarity that "ye ed" is willing to travel half way across the state to get it.

The new tariff bill provides that if a duty shall be found unjust the president shall have power, upon recommendation of the tariff commission to raise or lower the rate to the extent of 50 per cent. This makes the rates flexible to meet changing conditions in the way of costs at home and abroad and is the first time in our history such a regulation has been adopted. It should help to take the tariff out of politics.

The most natural thing in the world is to criticise the man who is on the job. His public acts are no longer promises or theories; they are facts. Olcott was never noted as possessing a plausible tongue but his record as a business executive is a good one and will stand comparison with most of them.

It is pretty hard to acquire the confidence of the public when we have no confidence in ourselves. One of the most hopeful signs in Monmouth is the general confidence which its citizens have in its future.
