AGED MAN HAS BATTLE WITH A WOUNDED COUGAR

"Old Man" Ramsey, of Douglas County, Badly Scratched by the Animal

Roseburg, Or., July 20.—To be attacked by a large and ferocious panther that he thought was dead and to have his clothing literally torn to shreds before the animal could be subdued was the experience of "Old Man" Ramsey, who lives in an isolated section of Douglas county, 70 miles north of Roseburg.

According to Ramsey's story, he was walking through the dense thicket, a short distance from his home, Thursday afternoon, accompanied by a friend and three dogs, when he suddenly noticed a large female panther perched in the crotch of a tree, fifty yards to the left of the trail. With a Winchester rifle Ramsey took aim and fired. The panther fell to the ground, bleeding.

Thinking the anima dedlar TaA03 Thinking the animal dead, Ramsey approached, and as he was about to lean over to determine where the ball had taken effect, the panther grasped him in its claws. Unable to extricate himself, Ramsey yelled to his companion, who was then some distance behind. In the meantime, however, the suffering animal had fought viciously, and by the time help came Ramsey was naked and bleeding from scratches and bruises upon his body. Securing Ramsey's gun, the companion was not long in killing the animal.

"Old Man" Ramsey is over 75 years old. For many years he has resided in the Purdue district, which is considered wild and unsafe, but never did he encounter a panther of such vicious disposition as the one killed by him Thursday.

WEEKLY REPORT OF PORTLAND MARKETS

PORTLAND MARKET REPORT.

As was predicted last week, the poultry market was a rather weak affair at the opening today. Carryover stocks were not very large, but they were enough, in connection with the limited demand today, to give the market a decidedly easy tone, and quoted at 18 to 19 cents, and broilers at 20 and 21 cents a pound. At 15 cents there was little or no call for young ducks and young geese were quite as slow at 12½ cents.

Commission dealers quoted Oregon eggs, case count, at 24½ to 25 cents a dozen, while strictly fancy candled stock went at 26 to 27 cents. Easterns were of course an important factor in the market. There is a fair demand in the north now for Oregon eggs, which to some extent relieves the local situation. Dealers do not look for any serious change in the egg market this week.

There was little doing in the fresh meat trade today, and no price changes were announced.

Bad Weather for English Hops.

Rain in England was the weather cable received by hop dealers yesterday. The London market for Pacifics was not affected, however, remaining unchanged at 90 shillings per cwt. for the best.

According to the New York Journal of Commerce, in Germany and other hop-growing countries of the European continent, the weather for some time past has been cold and wet, retarding the growth of the hop plant, so that latest cable advices from there in regard to crop prospects are not as glowing as they were a short time ago. The Journal of Commerce's estimate of the English crop is 370,000 cwt.

There was no new business in the local market yesterday. The Oregon crop, according to all reports, was in fine condition. Tim McNeff, who has just returned from a trip through Washington, says the Yakima crop is looking fine, but the western Washington hops appear a little light. There is no rice anywhere in the state. He estimates the Washington crop at 20,000 to 25,000 bales.

As to Spraying of Hops.

Harrisburg, Or., July 18.—I have carefully noted the particulars of T. A. Livesley & Co.'s circular letter published in a Portland paper the 6th inst., and so far as it relates to the improvement of quality in our hops well understand that quality is the principal factor in fixing prices on hops and every other product, both locally and for export.

In regard to spraying, I am of the opinion that there is ground for further experiment. Last year my neighbors expended heavy sums of money and labor in spraying, with a resulting loss from mould of 25 to 49 per cent, while I did not spray and suffered no loss whatever. However, I keep a full supply of spraying material for use when condition requires. Hop lands vary as to strength of soil and depth to moisture so much that each grower is compelled, in order to succeed, to solve the problem for himself. There can be no fixed rules.

As to the 1909s, we have none of them here, consequently there will not be any of them here that Livesley refers to as of less than 5-cent value to embarrass the market of 1910, and should supply and demand be allowed to continue to control the market, we have a hopeful outlook. However, the hop market has been so utterly in the hands of middlemen here that growers do not know what is before them. "A child dreads fire most after being burned." They look upon these circular letters from middlemen with grave suspicion and scrutinize them closely, with the expectation of finding a taint of commercialism lurking within their bounds.

J. R. CARTWRIGHT.

Portland Livestock Market.

Portland Union Stock Yards, North Portland, Or., July 19.—Cattle were weaker today because of the greater supply of poor quality offering. Only a small amount of good stuff came forward, but this received good attention from buyers and values remained about as previously quoted.

Packers say the price of poor stuff about 25c because they wanted to discourage the shipment of this class of stock.

Hogs remained about as previously quoted and sales were made as high as $10.25 for select quality.

The sheep market was dull.

General range of livestock values as shown by actual sales:

Cattle—Best Oregon steers, $5.40; ordinary steers, $5.25@$5.40; best California, $5.50; common steers, $4.00; poor, $3; heifers, $4.75@$5.10; bulls, $3@$3.75.

Hogs—Best east of the mountains, $10.15@$10.25; fancy, $10.15; stockers and feeders, $9.00.

FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL ACCUSES NEGRO PORTER

Coon Narrowly Escapes Lynching by Angry Grants Pass Citizens

Medford, Or., July 20.—Laura Moss, 15 years old, the daughter of Joseph Moss, United States land commissioner at Grants Pass, was the victim of an attempted assault at the hands of J. K. Sanders, a negro Pullman porter, early this morning on train No. 15, between Eugene and Roseburg.

The girl did not tell her story until she left the train at Grants Pass, and then only to her father, who immediately notified Sheriff Russell of Josephine county. A large crowd of men at the depot learned of the affair and their threats of lynching caused the sheriff to keep the negro on the train until ones Creek, four miles from Grants Pass, was reached.

According to the girl's story Sanders came to her berth in the early morning hours and offered her some candy. This she refused and then, she says, the negro insulted her. Further than this the girl will not tell her story, but she is uninjured. Her threats to arouse other passengers caused the negro to leave her. According to trainmen on No. 15 Sanders is comparatively a new employe of the Pullman company.

Reports from Grants Pass are to the effect that feeling is intense and that Sheriff Russell is taking full measures to protect his prisoner. Miss Moss is spoken of very highly in Grants Pass. She is of a retiring nature and is extremely attractive.

The girl's mother is a member of one of the pioneer families of southern Oregon and was born in Jacksonville. Her maiden name was Jennie Jackson.

ARE YOU THINKING
Of buying a lot for a home or as an investment? If you are let me show you some of my fine lots in College Hill Park. I will sell a couple of lots at an extremely low price if taken soon, in order to have money to improve some of my other lots. If you want a house built ready to move into, come pick out your choice of a lot and select plans and I will have a fine new house just to your liking ready for you in sixty days, cheaper than you can buy an old one.
