MAN'S CLOTHES

n Amateur Detec- er Boy and Wait- a Restaurant

Aug. 29.—Flora Langdon, a quick-witted English girl of 20 summers, has been masquerading as a man in New York city for years, working successively as an amateur detective, a grocer boy and a waiter in a Broadway restaurant. With her hair close cropped, and still dressed in man's clothing, she is now under the care of a police matron at her own request. She will don women's attire today and be sent back to her home in England by the next steamer.

In Miss Langdon's capacity as a private detective she spent considerable time in the Chinese and Italian quarters, and came near getting the $5000 reward for the finding of a kidnapped child.

Three years ago, she told a New York magistrate she left a comfortable home in London and took a steamer to Boston, then coming directly to New York. Her money went quickly, and before she realized it she was penniless. She was too proud to write home for aid, and got a place as a waitress. Her experience as a waitress was not pleasing or profitable, and she decided to disguise herself as a man. She went to a little store on the East Side and bought a complete outfit from shoes to straw hat, cut her hair and started to look for a job as a man.

VOTERS REGISTER SLOWLY AND MANY MAY BE TOO LATE

Registration of voters at the courthouse is creeping upward slowly, but the work today should bring the number to 3700.

Now is the time to register to save worry. Busy men will find long lines of tardy ones the last week, and all will have to await their turn, with clerks working under high pressure and greater liability of mistake.

The clerk's office will be open from 7 to 8:30 p. m. this evening and Friday evening for the accommodation of those who cannot get away during working hours.

INDIAN METHOD OF FIRE FIGHTING WOULDN'T GO NOW

Redmen Burned Leaves and Brush While Forests Were Growing

"The least said about the Indian method of fighting fire the better," said E. T. Allen, of the Western Forestry and Conservation Association, discussing yesterday the means which should be employed to prevent destruction of forests, says the Portland Journal.

The Indian method is to burn over the ground whenever twigs, leaves and brush have accumulated. This, says N. F. Throne, of Ashland, Or., was practiced by the red man for hundreds of years while the forests were growing.

"It was under the false but attractive theory that it was necessary to protect our water supply and also to assure a future growth of timber with the result that the brush and rubbish accumulating for years is now the cause of destroying millions upon millions of feet of our finest timber," says Mr. Throne in writing to the Journal.

"Use of the Indian method or allowing the brush to remain on the ground are alike mistakes," said Mr. Allen. "Burning the ground over destroys the young trees, while allowing the brush to remain on the ground constitutes a fire menace from which the best of forests suffer danger all through the dry summer season."

This opinion is evidently shared by Mr. Throne, for he says in his letter:

"Let every timber owner begin this fall to clean up his forest. It will be a big job because it has been neglected so long, but it will have to be done, and if the timber is worth anything it is worth protecting from destruction by brush fires. Better employ men at reasonable wages spring and fall to clean up the surface of the ground and make timber safe from fires in the dry season than be compelled to pay them big wages in the dry and busy season when men are hard to get and the battle is so hopeless that in many cases it could not be won by all the men in the world.

"Control the fire situation lostead of letting it ruin you through the policy of neglect and prayers.

"No penalties can be made severe enough to prevent fires from starting because fire bugs are not easily caught.

"Let our legislatures make laws requiring the immediate building of fire trails and the cleaning up of the surface of the ground in forests and burning of all debris in logging camps and provide for state and county aid in making the timber safe from fires."
