FOUND ANY INDIAN REMAINS?

The Smithsonian institution, bureau of American ethnology, Washington, D. C., suggests that boy scouts who discover Indian remains report their discoveries to the bureau of ethnology. The bureau may be able, at times, to let scouts assist in excavations.

A Pittsburg scout found and dug up a complete skeleton in a cave while on a lonely hike in the mountains. The Carnegie museum is studying it to determine if it is the skeleton of a prehistoric man.
