It Draws Thousands to Irvington Track.

FAVORITES MOSTLY WINNERS

Hunt Club Cup Captured by E. M. Lazarus on Adnoor—Starter Shuts Out Horses Which Sulk—Ladies' Day Today.

Irvington track was never in its history more attractive than it was yesterday afternoon, when the gates were thrown open for the opening meeting of the Multnomah Fair Association.

Adnoor Wins Hunt Club Cup. The crowd was early in arriving, and spent some time in inspecting the fat stock show and the fine blooded horses.

Sulky Prince Tom Is Left. The work of Starter McCarthy was the best ever seen at Irvington. In both the harness events and in the running events he got the horses away quickly and always well lined up.

Behind Wins in Straight Heats. Behind, the sweet-tempered daughter of Cheslie, won the 2:22 trot in two straight heats. She was a heavily paced favorite, and won practically as she pleased.

Running Events Are Lively. No races anywhere could have been better than the five running events, and with the exception of the side hat, Madox gave Thibbe in the last race on the card, every race was won by the best horse.

Chub Wins the Mile. Scratchers reduced the best race of the day to five starters. This was the mile handicap, and the talent was at sea in efforts to pick the winner.

The last event of the day was a six-furlong affair, and the talent, as if to make the cleaning up good and hard, plunged on Remark, and the speedy son of Chevot did not disappoint his backers. He was away in front, and no horse in the race got close to his colors. David rode Bold, Liechtenstein had all the way, but Remark was out of danger, and he finished second and beat Thibbe by two good lengths. The 2-year-old Resigned was slightly interfered with or she might have made better showing. Mrs. was by a year too young for the company she was in, but, on account of the 85 pounds she carried, many thought she had a chance for a place in the money.

Programme for Today. The most interesting event of this afternoon's programme will be the one-mile dash, pacing, for gentlemen drivers, members of the Riverside Driving Association, the winner to get a handsome silver cup. Following are the entries for this afternoon:

First race, 2:34 class trot, two in three—Briney K. or Idylwild, Oreta, Dr. Bunnell, Swift B. Deputy, Mac Mac.

Second race, one-mile dash, pacing, Gentlemen's Driving Club silver cup to driver of winner; horses and drivers to be announced from juries' stand and posted on bulletin board.

EDGAR M. LAZARUS WINS SILVER CUP ON ADNOOR.

has all been placed and the prizes will be awarded this afternoon. The exhibit is in charge of G. Gammie and, considering the short time he has had to work, the show is a fine one. There are 70 head of Short Horn, Herefords and Red Polled, Angus, 10 sheep, ten hogs and a stable of 12 fine stallions.

Browns Leave for Seattle. The mix-up in which Eley figured delayed the Browns in their departure for Seattle, and the players did not get away until yesterday afternoon, Charley Shields missed this train, but he left last night. The change in management seemed to have a demoralizing effect upon many of the players, and it is rather doubtful whether they would have had a look in at the game had they played yesterday.

No Game at Seattle. SEATTLE, Sept. 22.—The Portland team failed to arrive in time to play ball today. There will probably be a double header Sunday.

Angell-Cordell Fight a Draw. OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 22.—Joe Angell and Jack Cordell fought a 15-round draw before the Reliance Club tonight.

SHOULD BE HONORED. Successful Stockraisers, Farmers and Fruitgrowers Desire Fame. SALEM, Or., Sept. 20.—(To the Editor.)—The Oregon State Fair is over and the universal verdict is that it was a success, although held fully 45 days too early to secure a full exhibit of fruits and crops. It seems to the writer that the elements of this success consist of two main causes, which are related to each other as cause and effect, and these are: First, the wide range of forage plants intelligent industry can produce from the soil and climate of Western Oregon, which, second, insures the breeding and feeding range of the best lines of domestic animals the industries of Europe have furnished to America. In limiting the area of this demonstration to Western Oregon it goes without saying that it applies also to the Northwestern coast counties of California and all of Western Washington, and, judging by the forage and fruit exhibit, made by Farmer Lackey, of Union County, the cattle of W. O. Minor, of Morrow, and the sheep of the Baldwin Stock & Land Company, of Crook County, it may not be many years until the Upper Columbia Valley, by the aid of irrigation, equals the west of the Cascade range in many lines of forage crops and stock breeding. A little examination into the main cause of the success of the fair just closed will show, I think that it lies in the county exhibits. Taking those receiving awards, they give a not quite complete exposition of the agricultural capabilities of that portion of Oregon occupied as farms at the founding of the State Agricultural Society in 1881. But Multnomah, Columbia, Clatsop and Tillamook, then in the woods, and Jackson, Josephine, Coos and Curry, mainly raising crops, and Lincoln, unthought of, the success of the late fair suggests the importance of including all of these to make exhibits next year, and to have them all arranged in a permanent building on the Lewis and Clark grounds to become a part of that Exposition and thereafter be used for an intricate display of all the resources of 'Old Oregon.'

Whether this suggestion be adopted or not, there are, in the writer's opinion, two additional stimulants that may be added to insure further and more permanent success to general development: First, give recognition to individual effort contributing to county exhibits. Second, publish in convenient form the awards of prizes with their names and remarks. This to be regarded as the most important duty of the secretary of the Board of Agriculture, and duly signed by him as a correct copy of the awards products of the exhibition. In such a case the mere mention of the name of those contributing to the successful exhibit would be sufficient.

I turn now to the career of J. B. Stump, who became a pioneer of rape and other field crops as an essential basis of successful stock breeding. Does anyone think the money value of his labors is the highest ever? To keep a pure line is higher value in Mr. Stump's mind than the money value of his many winnings at the Oregon State Fair and would rate the authenticated history of those winnings as family history more precious than gold. Being one of the past published records among the foremost winners of awards at past State Fairs, I feel safe in saying that four-fifths of the best stockraisers in all lines of stock rate the honor and publicity higher than the money awarded. In several classes of stock the money awards do not pay for the time, labor and cost of exhibiting, so that the chess pairing, withholding of herd or flock or sweepstakes winning because of lack of competition over which the exhibitor can not have control is to stamp on public spirit. In several lines of valuable stock there is not now has been for several years competitive exhibits in Oregon. In others there has never yet been a full exhibit in one ownership. To keep a pure line in either case is as costly in proportion as to the owner of a full competitive flock or herd, and the presence of the breed is always an object lesson. J. MINTO.

Suspend Unskillful Engineers. SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—Local Inspectors Bolles and Bulger have rendered their decision in the case of the burning of the donkey boiler on the steamer Urrahilla, September 6. They find the Assistant Engineers Houghton, Cannon and Gore were inattentive to their duties, and have suspended them for 15 days.
