A GOOD PLACE TO START

This is the season when plans for increasing civic beauty are under consideration. It is therefore timely to say that no plan for beautifying Eugene will be complete that does not include improvement of the summer appearance of the two down-town park squares.

These two little parks are unique among the smaller cities of the Northwest. They are in the very heart of the business district, being surrounded by business and public buildings. They are to Eugene what Union Square is to San Francisco. Their potential beauty impresses every newcomer to the city.

But in the summer months they are unique in a rather shameful way. Up to the Fourth of July a straggling, near-green blanket of weeds and grass covers them, keeping down the dust, but the annual celebration destroys that and thereafter the parks look like a particularly drouth-stricken corner of the Great American Desert. As the vagrant breezes blow across their parched surface they whip up clouds of dust, and by fall even the sturdy trees are beginning to shrivel under the lack of water. At any time after the middle of July these little parks are anything but a beautiful sight.

It is a pity. They have unusual possibilities and these possibilities ought to be realized. If they were kept fresh and green and gay with the flowers that are Western Oregon's birthright, they would be something to remember with pleasure. As it is, the best we can do is to apologize for them.

FIGHTING THE GYPSY MOTH

Plans are being perfected for a barrier zone along the eastern side of New York state, stretching from the Sound to the Canadian border, to check the advance of the gypsy moth. This king of tree pests has worked millions of dollars' worth of damage in New England and is forging westward steadily at the rate of about 50 miles a year.

It is reported that about 90 per cent of the oak trees in Southwestern Massachusetts alone are dead as the result of the moth's ravages. Had intensive work such as is being undertaken now been started in 1899 when the moth first began its operations, the country would be practically free of the pest today. The saving in time, money and invaluable timber which those early precautions would have meant is hard to estimate. For lack of them the pest has devastated New England and appeared sporadically in many regions. Its control is a mighty problem.

The plan is to establish an immune zone around the infected districts and then to work for the extermination of the moth where it is now active. The battle is of moment to the entire country and illustrates all too plainly the folly of delaying active measures when a pest appears.

INDIAN DANCING

The Indians have been forbidden to hold their customary dances, and they object to the order. The simple redskin, with his one-track mind, says he cannot see why he should not be allowed to dance as long as the white man does.

A good many white men will agree with their red brother about this. Dancing is one of the oldest of human activities. It seems to be a natural way of expressing fundamental human emotions, as well as a way of getting wholesome exercise. With the "lower races" the dancing is largely ceremonial in nature. Our Indian dancing is essentially so.

Why grudge such observance to the poor Indian, whose pent-up life on the reservation, goodness knows, has become quite flat and stale enough? As for morals, if half that the critics have said in late years about white dancing is true, the Indian prancing can't be any worse.

The proposal of a French senator to call a new world conference whose purpose would be an agreement to send all navies to the scrap heap would come with somewhat better grace if France had not wrecked the Washington plan for limitation of navies by refusing to sign the treaties that were drafted. Still, it is worth noting that M. de Kerguezec criticises somewhat bitingly the French representatives at the Washington conference. It is apparent that France has her policies and her politicians, even as we have, and that they are not averse to taking a whack at each other when the opportunity offers.

The American Railway association has just approved expenditure by its members of a billion and a half dollars for new equipment, which is the largest aggregate railroad budget ever recorded. That indicates two things—first, that the railroads are expecting a big business year and second that they are starting in to make up for lost time in the way of providing needed facilities for transportation.

A 73-year-old Pennsylvanian admits that he has voluntarily entered the married state 20 times. That ought to hold the jokesmiths for a while.

President Harding's vacation is nearly over, which means, probably, that he is about ready to go back to Washington for a good rest.

Thirteen persons were killed and 60 injured by a tornado in Louisiana the other day. And yet Oregonians grumble at a week of rain!

Day before yesterday Lenine was recovering, while yesterday his case was hopeless. He's having a varied experience, anyway.

Hearst has bought two more papers, which increases the yellow peril by just that much.

This is typical April weather, which means that all's well.

Earlier Days in Eugene

(From the Morning Register, April 6, 1904.)

The league baseball grounds on South Willamette street are rapidly being preparing for the opening of the season and a grandstand has been erected.

The young people of the Baptist church will hold a basket social in Frank's hall Friday evening.

Colonel E. Hofer, editor of the Capital Journal, of Salem, addressed the students of the university yesterday on oratory.

G. W. Griffin, of the Griffin Hardware company, authorizes the Register to announce that he is a candidate for the legislature on the Republican ticket.

Cal M. Young, manager of the Eugene Opera company, is home from Portland.

S. E. Stevens, who has been in Portland assisting with the Easter services in Grace Methodist church has returned to Eugene. Mr. Stevens, while in Portland, was the guest of L. G. Hulin, an old resident of Eugene.

Rev. Father Beutgen, who has been pastor of the Catholic church here for three years, will go to Portland the latter part of the week to enter a new field of labor at the cathedral in that city.

TOWNER RULER OF ISLE

TAKES OATH AS EIGHTH CIVIL GOVERNOR OF ISLES

(By the Associated Press)

SAN JUAN, PORTO RICO, April 6.—Horace Mann Towner, of Iowa, today became Porto Rico's eighth American civil governor. He took the oath of office at the entrance to the federal building here before the most distinguished gathering that has yet witnessed a like ceremony in San Juan. It included Secretary of the Navy Denby and more than two score of government officers, former associates in the American congress, together with insular officers and representatives of foreign powers.

The inauguration ceremonies were simple, and the new governor's speech was brief. It was difficult, he said, to announce the policy of his administration.

"Only in general terms," he continued, "is it wise to speak. This is a free government, a government of the people. The administrative head of such a government should not forget that important fact. He may lead, but should not coerce. He may advise, but should not impose policies."

Heavy Snowfall in Helena

HELENA, Mont., April 6.—With a snowfall of nine inches since early yesterday morning, Helena is having the heaviest April snowstorm on record here for a two-day period. The only excess of this was when 12 inches of snow fell here from April 6 to 11 in 1881, according to weather bureau figures. Snow is general throughout Montana, measuring in precipitation from .62 to .05 inch, Helena having the half inch of moisture. Temperatures have remained not far below freezing. The value of the storm to farms and range is to be great.

Jury Convicts Indian Slayer

BELLINGHAM, Wash., April 6.—A jury in federal district court here tonight convicted Andrew Ballew, an Indian youth, of first degree murder in the shooting to death of Mrs. Catherine Brown, an Indian woman, on Lummi Island, near here in October. Ballew's defense was that he had been under a delusion that John Brown, her husband, was going to kill him. He shot through a window at Brown and hit Mrs. Brown. The jury recommended life imprisonment.

Weston Appeal Heard April 12

SALEM, Ore., April 6.—The second hearing in the Oregon supreme court of the state against A. J. Weston, twice convicted in the lower court for Deschutes county of second degree murder for the killing of Robert Krug, has been set for next Wednesday, April 12. Weston is now in the state prison on a life sentence. After his first trial in the lower court he appealed to the supreme court which reversed the lower court on grounds of error and remanded the case for a second trial. In the second trial Weston was again convicted and sentenced for life, and again appealed.

TWO DIE, ONE INJURED WHEN TRAIN HITS AUTO

FRED FEATHERSTONE AND J. M. JONES ARE KILLED

Dave Quirring of Party Seriously Hurt in Crossing Accident Yesterday Near Independence

INDEPENDENCE, Ore., April 6.—Their auto struck broadside by a Southern Pacific red electric train at a crossing two miles south of Independence at 7:57 this morning, Fred J. Featherstone, about 40, and Joseph M. Jones, 50, both farmers, were killed and Dave Quirring, 21, was seriously injured.

The auto was virtually torn to pieces by the crash, two of the men were hurled more than 100 feet and the front part of the train was damaged.

The men, employed on a construction job by the Mountain States Power company, were on their way to work. They failed to see the train, it is said, and the motorman, C. S. Sweeney, was unable to slow down before the cars had borne down upon the auto.

Sweeney and Conductor Pat H. Tynan, in charge of the train, No. 354, which was en route from Corvallis to Portland when the auto was hit, are said to be among the oldest employes of the Southern Pacific system.

The bodies of Featherstone and Jones were brought to the undertaking establishment of A. L. Keeney in Independence. Featherstone is survived by a widow, while Jones leaves a widow and children.

Quirring, who suffered a broken leg and bad bruises, was rushed to the office of Dr. O. D. Butler, where it is reported he had a good chance for recovery. He is unmarried and lives with his father south of Stapleton's crossing. The families of the dead men reside on farms about three miles south of Independence.

WOMEN TO THE RESCUE

MRS. SARGENT ASSERTS MEN FAIL IN BIG AFFAIRS

SPOKANE, Wash., April 5.—Man's incompetency to handle the world's affairs has been demonstrated and women must now take a hand, Mrs. Margaret L. Sargent, professor of romance languages at the University of Idho told the Executive Women's league of the Inland Empire Teachers' association here today. The league is composed of women school superintendents, principals of high schools and teachers in colleges and normal schools.

"Men particularly showed their inefficiency in handling the affairs of the world during the late war," Mrs. Sargent declared. "It is time for women to come further to the front. Some times we are a little jealous. We are not always big enough to take over the affairs that need us, but we must keep on striving.

"Women alone have the power to stop wars. The women of Europe today are united in an effort to stop war, even refusing to bear children to be fodder for the cannon."

Mrs. Sargent decried what she declared is the modern tendency to "single out" women in high executive positions.

80 MILES SEA TURTLES

STRANGE SPECTACLE SEEN OFF COAST OF MEXICO

WASHINGTON, April 5.—With the fishing season about to reopen formally, Captain J. J. Johnson of the good ship Kinnecott, today filed with the naval hydrographic office his contribution to fish stories.

While steaming off the west coast of Mexico, en route to San Pedro, said Captain Johnson, the Kinnecott sighted an "immense school of turtles, many of them ranging to several hundred pounds" and the school extending for more than "80 nautical miles."

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

Teaching Citizenship

I want my children to know about the world in which they live and to become familiar with its workings. They learned a great deal about our postal system through a visit to the post office, observation of the postman at his work, and watching the mail trucks and wagons. Then they wrote letters, made envelopes, and played buying stamps at the post office at home. This made an interesting play for them for several days and satisfied their interest in the subject.

We live to learn, and learn to live,

REPORTERS, MAKE IT SNAPPY

SPOTTED FEVER CURBED

NEW VIRUS COUNTERACTS DEADLY MALADY

MISSOULA, Mont., April 5.—Dr. H. Noguchi of the Rockefeller Institute, speaking before a conference of doctors for the discussion of Rocky mountain spotted fever which is being held here tonight, announced the discovery of a protective vaccine against spotted fever by using a harmless mixture of immune serum and the virus of spotted fever. In the work on which Dr. Noguchi presented his report, in his lecture tonight, he departed from the line of thought ordinarily taken by immunologists in the production of the toxin-antitoxin mixtures.

The departure presented consists in the principle of over-neutralizating the virus rather than under-neutralizing it.

According to spotted fever experts and investigational workers of all parts of the West in attendance at the conference, the discovery of Dr. Noguchi is of great significance to scientists in general as the principle can be applied to diseases other than spotted fever.
