What is regarded as the most important conference ever held between the Congressional delegation of this state and the commercial interests of Portland took place this week when the needs of the state were discussed for two hours and suggestions made as to needed improvements that require government aid.

Senators Bourne and Chamberlain met with 15 prominent business men and when the conference ended, the Senators had pledged their aid to secure as big appropriations as possible for this state. Among the big projects for which aid was enlisted were the improvement of the Columbia River from Portland to the sea; the free canal and locks at Oregon City; the Celilo Canal and the improvement of Coos Bay.

These improvements are expected to cost about as follows: Columbia River improvement, $15,000,000; $3,700,000 for the completion of the Celilo Canal; $2,700,600 for the improvement of Coos Bay, and $456,000 for the free canal and locks at Oregon City. Out of the money needed for the latter project, the state has already authorized an appropriation of $300,000 leaving only $156,000 to be furnished by the government.

A movement has been started to erect at Salem a suitable monument to the memory of Samuel L. Simpson, the well known Oregon poet, who wrote "Beautiful Willamette." Mr. Simpson was an alumnus of Willamette University and it was thought fitting that the movement to procure the memorial to the poet should have its start at the university and that the monument should stand near it. An association for the purpose has been formed among the alumni of the university. It is intended to interest the entire Northwest in the movement.

SPRINGWATER

Archie Howell gave a very successful dance at his home last Friday. Fred Horner and Gene Lewellen furnished the music, while Carl Ward did the calling for the square dances.

Henry Cromer, aided and abetted by that gallant "buckaroo" Guy Wilcox, took a bunch of cattle into Oregon City by way of Highland last Thursday. It was pretty hot work in their big wooly chaps but they bravely wore them in order that the city people might know what real Springwater "cow-punchers" look like. Whoop!

The tabernacle has departed hence.

W. J. Lewellen and wife have gone to the Dalles, where their daughter, Ora, is dangerously ill.

Mrs Charles Folsom has been called to Spokane owing to the serious illness of her son.

Mace Warnock was in Oregon City last week.

Bill Kandle has gone into the express business. He says the 'phone is a great help to him—but not always.

Better send your cream to the Hazelwood Co. "Buttermilk Bill" is going to get married in a few weeks. Cigars.

Real Estate Transfers

E. P Scott reports the following real estate transactions made through his office:

20 acres of the tract on the south side of the Clackamas to A. N. Johnson. Consideration $2000.

Same tract, to Miss E. H. Heggie, of Portland, six and a fraction acres at $75 per acre. This is a choice summer residence property, the land can be irrigated by spring run.

Same tract to Rev. J. E. H. Simpson who bought four and a fraction acres at $100 per acre. He expects to make improvements on his property at once by building a nice home.

J. W. Reed and Howard Jamss each bought five acre tracts from the Bullard tract near the Zobrist acreage. Consideration $100 per acre.

C. S. Bard to Alex Meyer of Portland, 20 acres of what is considered choice fruit land. It is the intention of Mr. Meyer to at once improve this property and set out fruit trees. Consideration $125 per acre.

Steve LeRay and W. D. Henthorn made an exchange whereby Henthorn becomes the owner of the LeRay property in Estacada and LeRay takes the ten acres owned by Henthorn on Estacada Heights. LeRay is going to make a ranch of it at once.

The deal of the Ed Miller property to W. Kandle was also made by Scott who will always be glad to serve you, by listing your property with him or consulting him when you want to buy.

A Trip To Seattle

the Sound, and if you moved the other way two or three blocks, you will bump into a hill. So all one had to do, was to keep straiget ahead, and the crowd was with you. The hustle and move of the masses on second and third avenues paralleled the activity of Market St. in San Francisco. After wandering about for a half hour, I found a rooming place and there I camped, till the next day only, when I found a good location and remained there until I left Seattle.

The rest of my time was spent in seeing all Seattle possessed; and one day was spent at the Navy yard across the sound. I noticed a sign which read: "You will like Seattle" and to my surprise, I can say that you will, if you catch the spirit. Seattle rests on very much 7 mounds, and overlooks on the west a body of water, (Puget Sound) that is magnificent indeed. Along the water front I found some handsome docks and fish markets galore. The boat service plying on the Sound is in many respects first class, and the trip either up or down or across the Sound is most delightful. While taking in this part of Seattle, I came across the transport Sherldan and paid it a visit, which was very interesting. One thing noticable was the absence of sailing vessels, as in most ports such as San Francisco and Portland, at all times ships are to be seen.

Coming back to the business section one can see many fine structures, some towering about 14 stories. There are a number of beautiful hotels and several theatres that are far ahead of those in Portland. I was astonished to find so many fine hotels in Seattle, for I thought the only place such institutions could thrive was in Southern California. To my notion this is highly creditable to Seattle. If there are any fine church edifices in Seattle I unfortunately did not see them. This was more particularly due to not spending a Sunday there.

As to the residence district, I found nothing to compare with Portland. Nearly all the residences appeared to be sluggish in color and not very expensive. The dullness of color is probably due to the presence of considerable smoke and dust. I did not see very many pretty yards. This part of Seattle did not appeal to me as being very well lighted, as compared with Portland, but the business streets are beautifully illuminated, and I noticed the light system was permanent.
