The business circles of Hillsboro and Forest Grove were startled yesterday by the report that Mr. Antoine Pfanner of the Forest Grove bank had made an assignment of his entire property interests to Hons. A. Hinman and Sam't Hughes for the benefit of his creditors. Mr. Pfanner is the sole proprietor of the Forest Grove bank which the public at least considered sound and the failure cannot be understood. Mr. Pfanner is in Portland sick, and his friends fear that he is overworked and is not fit for business. Yesterday morning the bank was opened at the usual time and transacted business till the mail that arrives from Portland about 10 o'clock in the morning was opened. It contained a letter from Mr. Pfanner directing his cashier to close the doors. It is not known that anyone was crowding the bank for money, and it is believed that financial distress was not felt. No statment of resources and liabilities could be obtained yesterday, but those best informed think that there is enough to pay every claim. Mr Pfanner has always been recognized as a very careful business man and his friends that this step has been taken to secure creditors and to lighten his business cares lest another severe illness overtake him. The people at Forest Grove are worried more or less as most of the money on hand is temporarily tied up in the bank. Further hardships will come to many people in the County who had obtained money at the bank, for collections will now have to be made, regardless of any distress that may be entailed. Hon. S. B. Huston, attorney for the bank, returned late last evening and states that Mr. Pfanner wrote Cashier Kane that he had reached a point when he thought it unsafe for him to longer continue in business, that he felt that he was losing his mind and that he was going away for a quiet. If he got well he would come back; if not he would die among strangers. A search through Portland yesterday afternoon was made, but Mr. Pfanner could not be found. His friends do not know where he is. Further search will be made. He has no family and he may in his diseased state of mind have determined to drop out of sight.

We will have the most numerously attended celebration at Hillsboro this year that has ever been held in Washington county. The committee of arrangements have gotten far enough along with its work to become convinced of that fact. The oration will be delivered by Hon. John F. Caples of Portland. The program of amusements will be sent next week. The Veterans Association is planning for the largest encampment that has been brought together since the Indian war of 1855.

Three boys, Guy Millspaugh, Thos. Williams and David Dunhauser, neither of them over fourteen years of age were before Justice Hicks yesterday charged with assault and battery. They assaulted a Chinaman who lives on Dairy bottom. They claimed to have a little fun, and they got it by lying in jail yesterday while not in court, for the reason no one would go on their bail bond. Twenty-five years hence each of these boys will realize that they cannot make heroes of themselves by assaulting Chinaman or anyone else.

The workman picnic in Warren's grove last Friday was a great success and a surprise to the members of the lodge for the attendance was far ahead of all previous expectations. Speeches were made by Grand Master Wesley and Grand Recorder Clark from Portland as well as by a number of gentlemen of this county. Recorder Clark was particularly happy in his address in which he made plain the workings of the order.

The O. R. & Co. has published a hand book of the mining belts of the north pacific. It is a book of 70 pages descriptive of mining camps in Oregon, Washington and Idaho where gold is dug. Moses Kimeman had a hot fire out at his place in the north part of town yesterday. A cursory examination convinced the authorities that the fire was premeditated. But this time there will be no loss but an actual gain, for Kimeman's brick kiln would be of no use until well cursed.

Seventeen wagons loaded with Mexican peasant passed through Cedar Creek precinct last Monday and Tuesday. One of them gypsies but be they of what tribe they may, they are a hard lot. They entered one school house in that precinct and emptied every child's lunch pail. They visited Commissioner Reasoner's place and stripped one of his favorite peach trees of every half-grown peach. Our county and hopes that the grasses whereon them will have the cramps. The gang are a saucy lot, filthy and half clad. The latter condition seems to be one of choice, since the women wear their hair in a single braid and dangle from the head to the extremity with Mexican silver dollars. There is a report that the gang was divided south of Amity and that the other part is coming by Hillsboro. It may be that we will see somewhat of them.

The State Normal school at Monmouth has just closed a very successful year, with an unusually large enrollment in its professional classes. The school offers a strong academic and professional course of three years designed throughout to train for teaching in the public schools.

The catalogue of the school shows that fully ninety per cent. of its graduates of recent years are, at present, engaged in teaching which argues well for the work of the normal.

CRATER LAKE AND ROGUE RIVER CANYON.

Forty-four years ago, a little party of curious Americans not well acquainted with geology were searching the Cascade mountains east of Jackson county for gold deposits. They were prospectors. They were about 30 years of age, just at that period in life when vigorous manhood laughs at hardships. Three of this party straggling off from the main camp in June 1853, first looked into the mysterous depths of Crater Lake. This little company scattered and in these forty and more years some of them have died but of the original three, who were the first whites to find that lonely sheet of water, two of them this summer have favored Mr. Martin W. Gorman, corresponding secretary of the Mazamas with letters descriptive of some things that happened during that trip into the mountains. One of these letters has been loaned to the INDEPENDENT and is below given. The writer, J. W. Hillman, now 74 years old lives in Hope Villa a suburb of Baton Rouge, Louisana. Further introduction is unnecessary:

Hope Villa, April 17, 1897.

M. W. Gorman, Esq.,
Portland Oregon,

Dear Sir: Your communication of April 10th to the P. M. at Baton Rouge was by him forwarded to me at this place as I was the party inquired for.

In the issue of the Oregonian of Jan. 1, 1886, I read a description of Crater lake by W. G. Steele, and knowing from his remarks that I was the original discoverer of said lake, I wrote to the Oregonian, claiming said discovery and gave the particulars as near as I could remember them, but could not locate, the year. Since that having some business with the U. S. government in which I was compelled to be exact as to dates I can now assert that it was in the summer of 1853 in which the lake was discovered and on our return trip. I was luckily the first of our party to see the Rogue river canyon and only three of our party saw it at all, I think, and on my part it was accidental, we were returning from our unsuccessful prospecting, hungry, tired, worn out and on short rations when we camped for the night close to the river as we thought for we could plainly hear the dashing of its waters. J. L. Loudon said he would prepare our scanty supper if some one would get water. One of the party, (Dan Rathborn I think but am not sure) [It was not Rathborn. ED] and myself started off for that purpose but instead of being within a few hundred yards of the river we must have been more than half a mile away, Well the road was long and rough the brush almost impenetrable and at last we saw the water but none could we get from where we stood as we had hit upon the canyon about midway so we went to the upper end and after washing, drinking and filling our camp kettles we started back for camp but it was late upon our arrival there and any one who knew Loudon (usually called Rube Rinas) can picture to himself the welcome we got, "cussing" stamping and all kinds of abuse for keeping supper so late, but on the road back from the river I cautioned my companion to say nothing of what we had seen and in the morning we would semd Loudon for the water. Sure enough next morning I told Rube to get water while I prepared breakfast. I think he must have been gone nearly two hours when he came back cussing as far as we could hear him, saying we thought ourselves d——d smart and lots of remarks not usually used in ordinary conversation.

Now your patience is exhausted and you ask what has all this to do with Crater lake? Well, the article I wrote was published in the Oregonian of March 10, 1886, and I don't know that I can add much to it, I suppose you can find it on file in the office of that paper if you cannot I will furnish you with the copy of same, it is as nearly correct as I can remember and the only reason why I did not go back and drink of the waters and swim in the lake was that hostilities with the Indians broke out in the fall of '53 and I was badly wounded on Evans' creek during that campaign. I was very anxious to go down to the water and would have made the attempt but being short of provisions and in a hurry to return to our companions who were awaiting us, the party with me refused to listen to my request for a longer stay, and they were right, for although I might have got down allright it would have bothered me materially to get back again.

Until I read Mr. Steele's description of the lake I could not account for the reason why none of the Klamath lake Indians would acknowledge knowing anything of its existence. I have talked with the Rogue river, Klamath lake and Applegate Indians, old and young and not one would say a word about it but I could see from the way they looked and acted that they knew of it and it was superstition that kept them silent.

Now, my dear sir, as you have been appointed to write a description of Crater lake it may be in your line to write other articles relating to the early days of Oregon and although I was in Oregon City, Portland and Astoria, in '49 yet of them I can say but little but of Jackson, Josephine and other southern counties in Oregon I might be able to assist you in material. Jackson county in particular. The siege of Galic creek where I was by orders of Col. Ross the means of rescueing the people of that camp from the Indians who had them completely hemmed in.

The killing of Mrs. Wagoner and her little girl, and the noble stand and fight of Mrs. Harris and her wounded 11-year-old girl, Sophia who during one whole night kept the whooping Indians at bay and was rescued next day by a party from Jacksonville. Nothing is more worthy of a place in the history of Oregon than her brave fight, romance does not excell it in intense interest.

And now may I ask for a couple copies of your description of the lake and if I can be of any further benefit or use, you may command my services.

J. W. HILLMAN,
(An Oregon '49er.)

That the pending tariff bill is especially satisfactory to the farmer is shown by a closing sentence of an article in the Minneapolis Tribune, whose editors have especial facilities for testing the sentiment of the agricultural classes of the country. The sentence in question says: "There is one thing certain; the western farmers will not have any cause to complain that the bill was constructed in the interests of eastern manufacturers and capitalists as opposed to their own, it is the most favorable tariff bill to farmers ever framed."

HAVE YOU USED BUTTER PARCHMENT?

All gilt-edged butter put on the market by creameries is wrapped in paper. The product of the private dairy would reach its market in much better condition if wrapped in Butter Parchment than it does when wrapped in cloth. Parchment is not only better than cloth, but cheaper. Cloth sells at 6 cents per yard, from which 27 sheets can be cut— 27 Parchment wrappers cost 3¼ cents.

500 Sheets, 8x11, - 55 cts
500 Sheets, 8x13, - - 60 cts

The standard size for 2-pound rolls is 8x11 inches; 2-pound blocks are wrapped in the 8x13 size. One reason why paper has not been generally used heretofore, farmers could not get it at the general store. It is now kept at the Independent office cut to any size wanted.
