The Corvallis Republican suggests that the governor call a holiday during banking hours of each day. This would relieve the banks and give other people a chance to do business. The courts might hold night sessions, which would help some.

The Southern Pacific will electrify its transbay lines at San Francisco. The contract has been let for a power house at Fruitvale to cost, with overhead work and substations, nearly $2,000,000. The Southern Pacific does an immense suburban business and the electrification is being watched with interest.

A sample copy of the New York Herald has been received at this office. The price of the daily with Sunday is only $23 a year. Wouldn't this give the fellows nervous prostration who are looking for a newspaper that is published at less than a dollar and a half a year.—Newberg Graphic.

That class of "fellows" would take, if they could, the New York Herald weekly, semi-weekly, daily and Sunday, with their home paper added at 50 cents a year. It is nothing to them how the rest of the world live.

A pewspaper publisher receives all kinds of propositions to trade merchandise for advertising space and if he is wise, accepts none of them. The latest to reach the Observer office is an offer to pay for advertising space in "Bull Dog" suspenders. Nothing doing. The publisher of a paper filled with advertising of this class would soon find that he didn't need the suspenders — he would have plenty of time to hold up his trousers with his hands.—Polk County Observer.

That's all right, brother, but you will find, if you take the trouble to notice, that a whole lot of publishers who do not have to hold up their pants with their hands, will print that "Bull Dog" advertisement. We know of two at least who will not only get the "galluses," but their regular cash advertising rates besides. You want to get next.

Hot Stuff.

The following, clipped from an exchange, makes good before-election reading and contains a whole lot of good, wholesome truths. Every newspaper in Oregon is open to the man who wants to make honest criticism, and has the backbone to sign his communications. If public improvements can be done better or cheaper; if the way city affairs are conducted do not suit you, write a letter for publication telling how such matters can be improved, and your home newspaper will gladly give it space. Our exchange says:

"Don't ask the editor to write up every evil in the town or community, but when convinced that such duties need attending to, write an article for the paper yourself and sign your name to it for publication. The man who is too big a coward to thus express his opinion is the very one who will stand on the corner and talk loudly about the editor. The world is full of moral cowards—men who see evil and are afraid to grapple with it.

Probably if the shoe tracks of nine-tenths of the people who come to an office to teach the editor could be traced home, the track would be found to lead to the homes of men who never go to a caucus or interest themselves in the candidacy or election of a county attorney or attorney general who would enforce the law. The world is full of men and women who like to play to an audience, who like to sit in the galleries and cheer the man who is losing his hide and most of his respiratory and digestive apparatus in the arena fighting the beast of evil. Not one in 10,000 climbs down and helps.

Every newspaper receives enough unsigned communications in six months' time to keep him in trouble the rest of his lifetime if he would punish them. All newspapers get them. Let the editor stand up for decency as per instructions of the old, valued subscriber; let the editor denounce the evil which his friend is afraid to hint at over his signature, and when in the stores and offices of the town the devil is fighting back, accusing the editor of double motives, calling him a blackmailer and abusing him generally—who is the little man drawing his head down under his collar like a turtle? That, gentle reader, is the chesty gent who pranced into the office the day before and said: 'Sometimes I wish I owned a newspaper just for one day to denounce the evils of this town. Why don't you sail in? Denounce that gambling house in the Smith block; get after that joint down in the Jones building; run those women out of the town; go after this and that fellow whose every-day life is rotten,' and so forth for 5000 words. As a rule, men behind newspapers have as much courage as other people in the community. They need it every day in the week, ane develop it by constant practice. They are used to public criticism and are hardened to abuse. They don't care what people think of them, So they are easy prey to men with axes to grind. But how the Lord hates axgrinders!"

Land and Mineral Decisions.

The following decisions are furnished The Independent by Woodford D. Harlan, Land Attorney, Washington, D. C.:

Coal Land—Second declaratory statement authorized as of the date made, though filed without authority therefor. Declaratory statement for coal land should not be received while the land is covered by the existing homestead entry of another.

Contest, Fractice—Pendency of contest does not excuse compliance with law where one is irregularly allowed to enter land thus involved.

Entry—A specific right of entry, accorded by Departmental decision, must be exercised within the period designated, in the absence of good reason shown for delay.

Final Proof—If found insufficient and bad faith is not apparent, supplemental evidence may be submitted in the absence of protest or adverse claim.

Homestead Entry—Land in the actual possession and occupancy of one holding the same under claim and color of title is not subject to entry.

Mineral Land, Practice—In case of contest, where the land is returned as mineral, the burden is not shifted to the mineral claimant by the non-mineral affidavit and publication of notice by the agricultural claimant.

Hurt in a Runaway.

A. M. Benefield, who is driving a milk wagon for Mat Hines on the Gales Creek route, was thrown from his wagon at the condenser just before noon Thursday of last week, and narrowly escaped death.

He was unloading his cans of milk when his horses became frightened at the steam from the plant. Although he used every energy to stop them the horses ran with breakneck speed out across the railroad track and into a ditch, turning the wagon over and throwing Mr. Benefield headlong upon the gravel bed with such force that it knocked him unconscious for half an hour and lacerated the left side of his face badly.

He is a man about 65 years old. A physician was called and dressed the wounds.—Forest Grove News.

Hathorn—Mulloy.

At the M. E. parsonage Sunday afternoon, in the presence of a number of friends and relatives, William Hathorn and Miss Mary Mulloy, of Laurel, were united in marriage by Rev. L. F. Belknap, of this city. Miss Lottie Hathorn acted as bridesmaid and Alfred Mulloy as best man.

The bride was beautifully gowned in cream crepe de chene and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid was dressed in pink and carried pink carnations. Miss Edith Hathorn played the wedding march.

Mr. and Mrs. Hathorn will make their home at Laurel.

Died.

Arthur Francis, son of L. M. and R. E. Gosney, was born in Klickitat county, Wash., January 21, 1897, and died November 24, 1907, at his home two miles south of Glencoe. The funeral services were held at the Shady Brook cemetery on Monday at 2 p. m., and were conducted by Rev. L. F. Belknap, of Hillsboro.

Even a born pessimist may cultivate a cheerful, honest openness of countenance, though I admit it will come hard at first. But he may do it by thinking of the best side of things, and remembering that there is some good in everything if only one will search for it. Once discovered, this must be held tightly, otherwise it is apt to get away, but if one remembers that, though there is dishonesty in the world, there is honesty too; that though times may be hard, they are bound to get better; and that cheerfulness will help it on; if he will make himself strong and good with kindness, not bitterness, in his heart, she will develop a smile because of the happiness within.
